Raiders Routed, 140 Shot Down, British Claim; 100,000 German Troops Reported Bombed; U. S., Canada Agree on Joint Defense Board

Accord Follows Conference Of Roosevelt, Mackenzie King; Study of Needs To Begin Soon

By the Associated Press

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Aug. 18.—The United States and Canada linked their defenses tonight in an unprecedented step to preserve their safety from any threats from across the seas.

President Roosevelt and the Dominion's Prime Minister, W. L. Mackenzie King, concluded a lengthy, historic conference on continental defense with a joint announcement that:

"It has been agreed that a permanent joint board on defense shall be set up at once by the two countries."

Consisting of four or five members from each nation, chiefly from the armed services, the board will meet shortly, they said, and begin "immediate studies relating to sea, land and air problems, including personnel and material."

Departure in U. S. Policy

"It will consider in the broad sense," they said, "the defense of the north half of the Western Hemisphere."

Whether the agreement, reached in a private railway car overlooking the St. Lawrence River boundary between the United States and Canada, was broad enough to constitute a definite military and defensive alliance was not disclosed.

In any event, it marked a departure in American foreign policy by knitting together, more tightly than ever before in this Nation's peacetime history, defensive bonds with a country at war.

A Presidential aide said he thought that it was apparent from the announcement itself that no Congressional action on the agreement was necessary.

The far-reaching implications of the agreement underscored deeply Mr. Roosevelt's declaration two years ago that the United States would not stand idly by if Canada were threatened with attack. He said yesterday that those remarks, made at the dedication of an international bridge at Kingston, Ontario, still were good.

Possibility of Bases in Canada

The reference in the formal statement to sea, land and air problems gave emphasis to speculation that the United States might acquire strategic bases on soil of the British Empire to help guard the approach to North America.

And the mention of personnel and material opened up an even wider field of conjecture on whether the two countries, through the joint board, would develop strategy for using men and armed might under a unified command, in case Europe's war seemed likely to spread across the Atlantic.

The Roosevelt-Mackenzie King statement gave members of the President's party a definite conviction, moreover, that the Administration firmly intends to blanket Canada under the protecting folds of the Monroe Doctrine.

The Chief Executive declared yesterday that Canadians are a part of the Americas the same as the people of the United States.

The understanding on continental defense took on extra significance from the fact that England, the only European nation still holding out against the powerful German-Italian war machine, is being subjected to

Draft Seen Adding Billion To Defense Bill

Sum Will Be Needed To Pay, House and Feed Troops, Says Adams

By the Associated Press

A forecast that Congressional approval of the Burke-Wadsworth bill would add another billion dollars to the more than $10,000,000,000 already appropriated or authorized for national defense was made yesterday by Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, chairman of Senate Appropriations subcommittee.

Adams, whose subcommittee is considering a $5,008,000,000 supplementary outlay for the Army and Navy, said a billion dollars would be needed to pay, house and feed the 400,000 conscripts who would be called to active service this fall and the 400,000 expected to be summoned next spring.

This expenditure would be in addition to appropriations provided for in the supplementary bill before Adams' committee. This measure, passed by the House, contemplates the acquisition of equipment for an army of 1,200,000 men, 300,000 larger than the Army's announced goal of 900,000 men under arms by January.

Some other legislators said privately that Adams' estimate of the cost probably was "conservative."

Adams explained that no provision had been made in the $5,008,000,000 supplemental defense bill for Rushville, Ind., Aug. 18.—Wendell L. Willkie said today that he would open his formal speech-making campaign in Coffeyville, Kans., in mid-September, and then probably would make a tour of the West Coast.

Seated in the home of Mrs. Cora Wilk, his mother-in-law, the Republican Presidential nominee told a press conference that he had not determined the exact date of his address in Coffeyville, where he taught high school history in 1913 and 1914.

Chairman Joe Martin of the Republican National Committee was at his side. Willkie said he and Martin were of the same mind that the campaign should be opened in the Kansas community.

Willkie expects to remain here through Wednesday. He said that he had not yet decided whether he

Victim of Potomac's Fury

Four Rescued After Boat Is Swept Over River Dam

Dumped into the rain-swollen Potomac when their small outboard motorboat was swept over a 4-foot dam at Seneca, Md., four Frederick, Md., young men were rescued late yesterday after a harrowing experienced shared by their rescuers.

Clinging to willow branches, the youth were marooned more than an hour on an islet, submerged by high water, where their craft capsized and sank, following a plunge over the dam and down a series of rapids below.

They had been boating above the old dam, formerly used to divert water into the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal. The motor went dead. Their oars useless against the threatening swift current, they lost control of the craft.

Rescued were:

Bullitt Asks Draft, Ships For Britain

Attack on U. S. Sure to Come if Nazis Win, Envoy To France Warns

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 18.—William C. Bullitt, United States Ambassador to France, declaring that Hitler will attack this Nation if Great Britain is defeated, urged Americans tonight to telegraph their Congressmen demanding that World War destroyers be sent to England's aid.

"America is in danger," he asserted dramatically in a speech at Independence Square. "It is my conviction, drawn from my own experience and from the information in the hands of our Government in Washington, that the United States is in as great peril today as was France a year ago."

As a safeguard, he called on everyone to seek some kind of national service, demand conscription in communications to Congressmen and "tell them we back up" Gen. John J. Pershing, who has advocated the release of World War destroyers for Britain's use.

Agents Now Paving the Way

Bullitt returned recently from Nazi-conquered France after narrowly escaping death in a German air raid on Paris. He chose his home city, Philadelphia, for his first public appraisal of the international situation during nearly four years as Ambassador to the French Republic.

His address, sponsored by the American Philosophical Society, was made before a crowd of several thousand at the Nation's historic 'Cradle of Liberty' and broadcast over two Nation-wide radio networks (N. B. C.-C. B. S.).

The people of the United States must "wake up," and quickly, Bullitt declared, or suffer the same fate as France.

"It is as clear as anything on this earth that the United States will not go (abroad) to war," he said, "but it is equally clear that war is coming toward the Americas.

"Attack Sure—If British Lose"

"The agents of the dictators are already here preparing the way for their armies. They are preparing the way in the same manner in which they prepared the way in France."

Bullitt said he could not predict where or when the blow would fall but expressed certainty that, if Great Britain is overwhelmed, "the attack will come, and that all the strength of this Nation will be needed . . . if we are to parry it

Moon Is Lovely, Couple Scales Mt. Vernon Fence

A practical demonstration has been given of what occurs when it's late Saturday night and a nearfull moon rides the Potomac and a man and woman take the notion to climb the fence at revered Mount Vernon.

Here is what occurs:

The trespassers are ejected by one watchman, one policeman, one swarm of Potomac River mosquitoes and one Doberman Pinscher, a dog with a known trait of guarding the premises.

The fence was scaled by a man and woman between 3 a. m. and 5 a. m. yesterday and they were met by the watchman and the Doberman Pinscher.

Previously, they had been met by the mosquitoes and were suffering badly from the bites. Then Park Policeman P. W. Birch came and the matter was taken to Charles C. Wall, the estate superintendent.

Then the matter was all patched up. But it goes to show.

Walter P. Chrysler Dies at 65; Built Great Auto Corporation

Cerebral Hemorrhage Ends Saga of Famous Industrial Genius

By the Associated Press

Great Neck, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Walter P. Chrysler, 65, who gambled $5,000 in 1908 to buy an automobile on a "hunch" and later made millions manufacturing them, died today at his Long Island estate.

Death came from a cerebral hemorrhage after an illness of more than two years, ending a spectacular career that started in a railroad roundhouse at 5 cents an hour and led to the top of the motor car corporation bearing his name.

Chrysler had taken no active part in business since he was stricken with a circulatory attack May 26, 1938, but maintained an interest in world affairs.

He was allowed out of bed for a time last Thursday, spending some time in a wheelchair, and suffered an attack Friday. He lapsed into a coma yesterday and died at 5:50 p. m. (E. S. T.) today.

At his bedside were two personal physicians and his four children—

U. S. Delivers Note to Reich On Relief Ship

By Henry N. Dorris
Copyright, The New York Times.

The State Department last night informed the German government that it would expect that the American Legion, United States Army transport carrying nearly 1,000 refugees from Petsamo, Finland, to New York, would suffer no molestation "by any action undertaken by the German armed forces."

The note, which the American charge d'affaires in Berlin, Alexander Kirk, was ordered to transmit to the Nazi government, was in reply to a note Saturday night from Berlin to the effect that the German government would not be responsible for any harm that might come to the vessel.

The American Legion sailed from Petsamo August 16 and is now probably inside a sea zone the Nazi government said was likely to come within the area of German air operations, under Germany's new "total blockade" of Britain.

The State Department in its answer to the German note made the following points:

1. That the German government was notified on August 9 of the proposed route for the transport and her distinguishing marks together with a statement that she was scheduled to sail August 16.

2. That on August 14 the German government notified the American Government that the appropriate German authorities had been notified of the date of departure

Germans Raid Croydon Again, Mass Planes

Pilots 'Impatient' For Mass Assault, Berlin Declares

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 18.—Germany hurled countless bombers against London and its great Croydon Airport today while others were reported concentrated in the Low Countries and France "impatiently waiting orders for a mass attack on England."

Wave on wave of German bombers streaked over the English Channel to loose explosive steel in the heart of the British empire, its southern suburbs of Kenley, Biggin Hill and Sutton. Croydon was declared "again in flames."

"Trained German pilots with machines ready to start have been concentrated in Holland, Belgium and France where German airmen are impatiently waiting orders for a mass attack on England," said the official German radio.

182 British Planes Destroyed

The high command put at 182 the number of British planes destroyed today, counting 23 wrecked aground, and said 34 German planes were missing.

This figure has been exceeded only by that for August 15 when the Germans said 143 British planes were destroyed.

Today's was the second attack on the Croydon airfield, 8 miles from Charing Cross, heart of London. Dive-bombers blasted at it last Thursday as a part of what was then the greatest aerial assault in history. Similar attacks came on Friday only to be followed by Saturday's unexplained lull.

Airports especially were targets of today's attacks and it was said

2-Year-Old Boy, Marine Killed, Many Hurt in Auto Accidents

A 2-year-old boy was killed by an ice-cream truck, a 19-year-old Marine private was crushed to death by a car, and nearly a score of persons, five of them children, were injured in traffic mishaps in the Washington area yesterday.

The child was Larry Newcomer, son of Charles D. Newcomer, a paperhanger, of 63 K street northeast. Larry was dashing to a store to spend a penny with a 4-year-old friend when he ran into the side of an ice-cream truck near his home.

LARRY

Rushed into a taxi by his father, the child was taken to Sibley Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

Returning from the hospital in a police car with a description of the truck Larry had run into and a reflector light which had been knocked off, Policemen F. A. Jordan and Albert Nicholson noticed a similar truck parked in front of 1006 First street northeast.

They questioned the driver, Lawrence Miles, colored, 36, at that address, who denied knowledge of the accident. He was held for coroner's action.

The Marine, Vern Lyle Hansen, of Ida Grove, Iowa, was walking along the darkened Indian Head-Mason Springs road early yesterday

The War Today

WAVES OF NAZI BOMBERS, striking at British air fields in customary blitzkrieg style, hammer London suburbs and southeast counties, with scattered raids on Portsmouth and other points; on basis of claims of planes shot down, fighting appears equal to fiercest of war: Britain claims 140, admits 16; Germany claims 182, admits 34.

BRITAIN'S AIR MINISTRY refuses to confirm authoritative reports of Royal Air Force bombing of five Nazi divisions massed on French Channel coast, but reports devastating raid on unexplained ship concentration at Boulogne while Dover observers count three heavy raids in 24 hours on French coast from Boulogne to Calais.

GERMANY REPORTS FLAMES are sweeping Croydon airdrome and other R. A. F. fields, delineates new "total blockade zone" but says Ireland may get some concessions.

ITALY ACCUSES FRANCE of helping Britain defend Somaliland, but reports steady advance on Berbera; British naval bombardment of Italian Libya seen as move to encourage Greece to resist Italian territorial demands.

French Beach Bombed

By the Associated Press

London (Monday), Aug. 19.—Britain, grasping grimly for the initiative in the greatest air war of all time, struck earth-shaking blows at German positions on the French coast today for the third time since Saturday night.

Despite the frenzy of defending their island from the suddenly renewed, massive German attacks of Sunday, the British sent great waves of bombers over the Channel, and the port of Dover was lighted with the glare of echoing bomb blasts from Boulogne and Calais, a score of miles across the sea.

The Air Ministry declined to confirm a report by the British press association that the R. A. F. had bombed into confused turmoil a German army of five divisions—up to 100,000 men—on the French beaches, and the press association withdrew its story.

Nevertheless, reports were current in Dover that German infantry was massed on the French shore, and the sight and sound of battle tended to confirm these assertions.

The press association's account said R. A. F. reconnaissance fliers discovered the German troops concentrated along 20 miles of French beaches early Saturday afternoon. Bombers were dispatched immediately and attacked the troops heavily Saturday and on through Sunday, "completely disorganizing them."

Several German destroyers were reported anchored close to the French shore and were visible in the bright moonlight to R. A. F. pilots.

Defenders Take Toll

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 18.—German bombers struck with massive new force at the bastions of Britain today, but England's determined defenders completely routed the second of two great raids directed at London, and paid devastating calls of their own to the Nazi positions on the continent.

In combatting the renewed raids after Saturday's sudden German layoff, the British acknowledged loss of 16 planes, but claimed 140 of the attackers had been shot down.

The air ministry said that "having regard to the numbers employed" the German loss "represents the heaviest defeat he (the enemy) has yet suffered at the hands of our fighters and ground defenses."

Total Claimed Is 691

This was the second largest "bag" the R. A. F. has claimed in the gigantic air war which has filled England's skies for eight of the last 11 days. On August 15, the British declare, their fighter pilots downed 180 Nazi planes.

The eight-day total claimed by the British is now 691, against the admitted loss of 147 planes.

(The Germans claim 805 British planes destroyed, some on the ground, and admit losing 192.)

In the first German onslaught Sunday, the British air ministry acknowledged that "bombs were dropped on several Royal Air Force airdromes where some service personnel were killed and others injured."

Nazis Driven to Sea

But in the second big sweep toward London, 42 Nazi bombers were driven out to sea before they ever got to the objective, and at least three of this flight were shot down, the British declared.

Eighteen German bombers and 12 fighters assaulted the area of Portsmouth—British south shore naval base — but six of them were destroyed and the others jettisoned their bombs and fled, the British asserted.

While these attacks were in progress, other waves of German fighters and bombers smashed at the Channel towns, the east coast, the southwest and the midlands.

It was estimated that 650 or more German planes participated in the

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

That fugitive resemblance between this Capital and Hollywood; that artificiality in a town that could be merely the republic's County Seat; that elusive flavor of make-believe, has long puzzled me. While shaving this morning it all came clear, for a few minutes.

Harlan Miller

* * * *

Both towns are engaged in activities far removed from the normal, natural functions of human beings. Government, the art of running other people's affairs for them, is a far less natural activity for a man or a woman than acting.

* * * *

In Hollywood the great pretension is glamour. In Washington, the great pretension is omniscience. A member of Congress or a Government official or a diplomat is forced to pretend that he can run your affairs better than you yourself, that he knows more about them.

* * * *

This, of course, is blatantly false. In a few realms where joint effort and supervision are helpful, officialdom can do it better than you. But in the more specific, detailed and personalized affairs of your own life you are far more gifted than the Government.

"—Hollywood's actors are politicians"

You and I run our own affairs largely on the assumption that in order to get by, as they say on the campus, we have to exercise a certain amount of diligence, attentiveness to our duties, a certain frugality, a degree of enlightened selfishness. We must do this in order to survive.

* * * *

Officialdom operates on the false assumption that it can be more diligent in our behalf, more attentive, more frugal, more selfish for us in an enlightened way than we are for ourselves. It pretends that it knows better what will help us survive with some degree of happiness than we ourselves know.

* * * *

Instead of worrying genuinely what will help all the rest of us survive as happily as possible, officialdom is really worried about what will help the officials themselves to survive. They soon come to pretend that the most important thing in the world for you and me is that they survive in office.

* * * *

The burden of this pretense has become so crushing that officials must live in a world of make-believe 24 hours a day to bear up under the strain. While the actors in Hollywood become politicians, most of the politicians in Washington tend to become actors.

* * * *

Thus, the professional difference between an Ickes and a Barrymore, a Senator Reynolds and a William Powell, or a Speaker Bankhead and a character actor like Eugene Pallette becomes almost nonexistent to the naked eye. They all try to bolster up their spurious claims to omniscience with equally spurious pretensions to glamor.

"—Capital's politicians are actors"

It is palpably absurd to pretend or to believe that one official in an office in Washington, or several dozen officials in adjoining offices, know better how to run the affairs of 1,000 persons or 1,000,000 persons in New England or Texas, or between the Mississippi and the Rockies, or across the river in Virginia, than those persons themselves.

* * * *

The strain of the pretense is so great that many officials develop split personalities, slight touches of dementia praecox, nervous attacks of shingles, twitches and exhibitionism, illusions of grandeur, the martyr of Joan of Arc complex, wild flights of conversation about what's good for the people. This is equally true of Republicans and Democrats and the lesser breeds.

* * * *

All this adds a Hollywood fillip to life in the Capital. . . . If your feet and your disposition are rugged, you can meet and become superficially acquainted with 500 or 1,000 of these great ones in a few months. But at the end you are more dazed about their true function than you were before.

* * * *

Some people like it. Others emerge vaguely convinced that the less governing these people do, the better. Elmer Zilch, out in Pilot Mount, Iowa, is a realler man and knows his own interests more shrewdly. From time to time the structure falls of its own weight, as in 1930 and 1929 and maybe again in 1940; the trappings are hauled away to the warehouse, the statesmen return to Main street, where they gradually recover.

* * * *

It is a consolation to realize that this artificiality of too much Government from the top is the best guarantee against any lasting tyranny, anywhere. An overdose of Government is always for the benefit of those who govern.

Secret Weapon Hinted at Tactics

Defending Army May Unleash 'New Element,' Says Drum

By Marshal Andrews

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Aug. 18.—A secret weapon will be unleashed by the defending Blue Army in four-day maneuvers beginning tomorrow, Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commanding the United States First Army, hinted in a talk with newspaper correspondents tonight.

"You may see a new element used by our forces during the battle," said Gen. Drum, who will command the Blue Army. In addition, he said, the defenders have quietly organized a highly mobile striking force to be used in blitzkrieg movements against the attacking Blacks.

On the other hand, the Blacks have as a component part of their army the regular First Division, mechanized and speedy, and the Third Cavalry and the Sixteenth Field Artillery, from Fort Myer, Va., both equipped and trained for lightning war.

Beyond hinting at a secret weapon and impressing on his hearers that the mock war would be a war of swift movement and blazing attack, Gen. Drum left method to their imaginations. The war, he said, likely would be fought on the Grass River, on the western boundary of the Blue area and between the Grass and the Racquette Rivers, partly inside the area held by the Blacks.

"You may find," he added, "that important actions here will be the battle of Madrid and the battle of Canton." Madrid is the key to the north flank of the Blue front; Canton to the center.

Third Cavalry Spearhead

It was learned, though, that the spearhead of the Black attack would be the Third Cavalry. This regiment reinforced by the Sixteenth Field Artillery, will drive westward at 5 a. m. tomorrow, armored scout cars in front to locate important points, troops right behind in trucks to hold them, and behind the trucks the horse cavalry to consolidate these positions and make them secure.

Pigeons furnished by the First Signal Company, Fort Monmouth, N. J., will be used to carry messages back from the scout cars to the regimental command post. Cars, trucks and horsemen also will be equipped with radio.

The battle which opens tomorrow, Gen. Drum explained, had its genesis in the imaginary past when a coalition of powers attacked the United States on both coasts. The fleet was committed to action on the Pacific and strong Black forces landed in New England and in New Jersey. The Army in New Jersey was held to its coastal foothold, but that in New England sent an army corps driving westward across Lake Champlain to turn the Blue left flank in the vicinity of Lake George.

This corps was prevented from turning south by a small Blue force and has moved westward to the line of the Racquette River, which it now holds. Expecting reinforcements the night of August 23 or 24, it is prepared now to break up a Blue concentration facing it behind the Grass River.

The Blue Army includes the Second Corps, commanded by Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short and consisting of the Twenty-seventh Division (New York) and the Forty-fourth Division (New Jersey and New York) and the Twenty-second Cavalry Division (Pennsylvania); and the Third Corps, commanded by Maj. Gen. James K. Parsons and composed of the Twenty-eighth Division (Pennsylvania) and the Twenty-ninth (District, Maryland and Virginia).

The Black Army, commanded by Maj. Gen. James A. Woodruff, includes the First Corps, commanded by Woodruff, consisting of the First Division (Regular), the Twenty-sixth division (Massachusetts), Forty-third Division (Maine, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Vermont), and the Third Cavalry, reinforced by the Sixteenth Field Artillery.

Bombers in Action

Thirty to 40 Black bombers will range over Blue territory, opposed by its antiaircraft regiments, including the District's 260th Coast Artillery and by pursuit aviation from Mitchel Field, N. Y. Eventually, Drum said, big four-motored bombers from Langley Field will be involved.

Although cavalry and mechanized patrols will clash soon after the war officially opens at 5 a. m., large forces of both armies are not expected to meet in a major fight until tomorrow afternoon. From then until noon Thursday, the two great armies will grapple across a front 10 to 12 miles wide and more than 30 miles long. Never before on this continent have such large forces met in peacetime on so extended a front.

"This problem," said Gen. Drum, "will involve the high command as well as the private in the rear rank."

Troops of all commands began moving up to their battle positions shortly after dark tonight, the 260th Coast Artillery going 20 miles from its base and Richville to Heuvelton, where its batteries will encircle the First Army railhead, protecting it against Black bombers. Trucks crowded the narrow country roads, threading through the marching infantry and machine-gunners, all moving slowly toward the narrow strip of no man's land between the Grass and the Racquette, two little streams whose names will become known throughout the Nation in the next four days.

Police said that Adams' car struck a car operated by Franklin L. Drunenberg, of Marlboro. Drunenberg, his wife, and his 5-year-old daughter suffered cuts and bruises. Adams was released after posting $50 collateral and $100 bond.

Three-year-old Richard Sills, of 4927 Conduit road northwest, was knocked down by a car on Hains Point when he broke away from his grandfather and dashed across the road toward the playground. He was taken to Emergency Hospital by his grandfather, Isadore Stambla, of the same address, and treated for cuts, bruises and shock.

A two-car collision at Fifth and Pennsylvania avenue southeast resulted in hospital treatment for five persons.

William Osborne, 26, colored, of 739 Twenty-fourth street northwest and Evelyn Brown, 27, colored, of 609 Florida avenue northwest, were treated for severe lacerations at Providence Hospital. They were passengers in a car operated by Willie Jones, 30, colored, of 2224 G street northwest.

James Y. Newton, 33, of 2929 Connecticut avenue northwest, his wife, 26, and Walter Yume, 34, of Arlington, Va., were treated at Casualty Hospital for cuts and abrasions. Newton was the driver of the car.

George Miller, 9, of 1340 Park road northwest, was treated at Children's Hospital for a possible fracture of the skull after he walked into the side of an auto at Fourteenth street and Park road northwest. Police said the auto was operated by Israel Stolberg, 32, of 1601 Oregon avenue northwest.

Six-year-old Frank Manuel, of 124 Sixth street southeast, suffered serious head cuts when he ran into the side of a car in front of his home. He was taken to Providence Hospital by the operator of the car, Britton Hughes, of 232 Sixth street southeast.

Herbert Crowley, 11, colored, of 209 Clark's Court southwest, was knocked down by a car at Fourth and G streets southwest. He was treated for chest and left knee injuries at Providence Hospital. Police said the driver of the car was Millicent G. Urner, of 236 Kentucky avenue southeast.

A 31-year-old Maryland State policeman, Daniel Wiseman, of Berwyn, Md., was seriously injured when his car collided with a parked wrecking truck on University road, near the University of Maryland.

Rushed to Casualty Hospital by the Branchville rescue squad, he was treated for a broken right leg, multiple lacerations and shock.

Flynn Makes Bow On Air Tonight as Farley Successor

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Aug. 18.—Edward J. Flynn, who succeeded Postmaster General Farley on Saturday as chairman of the Democratic National Committee, will make his bow to the Nation in a coast-to-coast broadcast tonight in a speech entitled, "Address to Democratic Workers."

Farley, who had planned to efface himself from President Roosevelt's third-term campaign immediately upon his retirement as national chairman, was urged to introduce Flynn to the radio audience, and agreed to do so.

But Farley, according to a friend, will fade out of the Presidential campaign after he introduces his successor over WABC and the Columbia Broadcasting System network at 7 p. m. (E. S. T.).

First Lady to Speak Before Students in N. Y.

New York, Aug. 18 (INS).—A conference of 250 students from universities and colleges throughout the country will be held here September 9-11, it was announced tonight.

The conference, sponsored by the International Student Service, will consider the topic, "Students and the Future of Democracy." Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will deliver the keynote address.

Senators Laud U. S.-Canadian Defense Plan

Even Isolationists Praise Move to Set Up Joint Board

By the United Press

Establishment by the United States and Canada of a permanent joint board on defense was hailed in Washinton tonight as an effective means of promoting the Western Hemisphere defenses.

Plans to set up such a board were revealed in a statement issued at Ogdensburg, N. Y., at conclusion of the historic conversations between President Roosevelt and Canadian Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Many isolationist legislators joined in praising the proposal, while Administration supporters were unanimous in their approval.

Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virinia, an outspoken critic of Administration foreign policy who has charged Mr. Roosevelt with seeking to lead this country directly into participation in the European war, said he was "glad to see our defenses being planned over here instead of over there."

Closer cooperation between the two nations is advisable, he said, because the United States is "naturally affected by any matter which would effect the military status of Canada." He hastened to add, however, "if Canada wants us to defend her, she owes it to us not to transport the British Empire to this Hemisphere." He explained that moving the seat of the empire's government to Canada would bring the war directly to America.

"Splendid," Says Thomas

Typical of the comment of Administration supporters was that of Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, who asserted that creation of the board was "splendid" and "very constructive" and "will do a lot of good." Chairman Sol Bloom (Democrat), of New York, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said he was "very glad."

Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, an Administrator critic who frequently joins the isolationist bloc on foreign policy, termed the joint board plan "very acceptable" and said he would "cooperate in every way I can" to make the group function properly.

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, also a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, who has opposed numerous Administration policies, said he regarded establishment of the joint board as advisable because it might open the way toward acquisition by this country of new naval and air bases in the Atlantic.

Capacity Is Advisory

He pointed out, however, that the joint board, insofar as this country is concerned, at least, will be merely an advisory body, without authority to commit the country. Any formal agreements, he noted, would have to be ratified by the Senate as treaties.

In this connection, some observers raised the question of Mr. Roosevelt's authority to create the board by Executive order but legislative and legal experts agreed that the Chief Executive had sufficient authority to do so without further Congressional action.

Like George, they said that the board would not have authority to make any definite, binding commitments on behalf of the United States. Any such commitments or agreements, they agreed, must be subject to ratification by the Senate.

Meanwhile, the Foreign Policy Association reported that the Western Hemisphere's defenses already have been considerably strengthened as a result of the recent Havana Conference. The report, published in the new issue of the association's semimonthly periodical, was written by A. Randle Elliott, of the association's research staff.

Advantages With U. S.

It noted that a German victory over Great Britain would place status of European Western Hemisphere colonies in serious doubt. Germany, the report said, "might make a formidable attempt to acquire, or gain concessions in, the many strategic possessions which Britain now holds in the Western Hemisphere . . .

"Meanwhile, the American republics should have ample time to guard against the possible seizure of the colonies. If, however, an aggressor should suddenly occupy any of these possessions, it would not be a difficult problem for the United States—operating from its own near-by bases or friendly Latin-American territory, while European forces would be relatively far from their source of supplies and possible reinforcements—to drive out the invaders.

"Or, owing to the deficiencies of food, water and other essentials in the colonies, the United States Navy could effectively blockade them.

"Nevertheless, the American republics have recognized—both at Panama in October, 1939, and at Havana in July, 1940—that their security would be endangered if any aggressive power were allowed time to construct bases in the colonies."

Wright Slated to Succeed Daniel Sayre on CAA Post

Veteran Newsman and Census Aide To Become Information Director When Predecessor Is Shifted to Safety Division

By Edward Ryan

Roscoe Wright, veteran newspaperman and information director for the last census, is slated to be made director of information and statistics for the Civil Aeronautics Administration, it was learned yesterday.

He will succeed Daniel Sayre, who is being transferred to direct safety education work for the Civil Aeronautics Board, following the agency's transfer into the Commerce Department.

Wright's new assignment, like his two earlier ones in Government, falls into the "trouble-shooting" class. The Civil Aeronautics agency has the job of starting some 30,000 men, including college students and others, into aviation training this year.

In addition, the agency is still in the aftermath of the fight over its reorganization and transfer to Commerce, a fight which left parts of the airline industry and others on the lookout for any moves that would make the CAA look as though it were slipping back to the role of the old Bureau of Air Commerce.

Criticism of the old bureau from air lines and pilots helped bring establishment of the CAA.

Before taking over the Census job last fall, Wright was information director of the WPA. His successor in the Census Bureau is expected to be Frank R. Wilson, assistant information director.

A $5 contribution to the Treasury's "conscience fund" has been received from an anonymous letter writer who explained that he wanted to pay for two single jack hammers and a kerosene lantern, stolen from a CCC camp in Colorado 2 years ago. The writer didn't tell whether he worked for the CCC.

Calendar: "Uncle Sam's Follies" will be described in song for members of the Interior Department Recreation Association on their moonlight cruise down the Potomac tonight. Songs include "I Want a Girl Who Makes $1,620," "The Typist Song," "When We Retire," and "When the Potomac Flows Down to the Sea." The following will compete for the title of "Miss Interior—1940:" Josephine Martin, Mary Ann Quartulli, Sue Blankenship, Faye Johnston, Athalie Sumrall, Dovie McKinnon, Bertha Lewis, Velma Lu Carter, Marian McCeney, Betty Furey, Elaine Cook, Irene Nesbitt, Helen Cranston, and Loretta Lineberger. . . . A movie describing activities of the Coast Guard will be shown at a meeting of the National Association of Regulars at 1015 L street northwest tonight.

Jobs. The Civil Service Commission has opened examinations for these Government jobs: inspector of signal corps equipment, $2,000 to $3,200, War Department; aeronautical engineering aides, five grades from $1,620 to $2,600, Army Air Corps; boiler and hull inspectors, $3,200, Commerce Department engineering draftsmen, five salary grades from $1,620 to $2,600.

A biologist who designs special radio circuits as a hobby may prove valuable to the Nation in national defense as a communication engineer than is his own primary professional field.

For even hobbies will not be overlooked in the indexing of nearly half a million scientists and professional business men in private industry in the National Roster of Scientific and Specialized Personnel now being compiled by the United States Civil Service Commission and the National Resources Planning Board.

Dr. Leonard Carmichael, president of Tufts College, is director of the project, and James C. O'Brien, member of the staff of the commission, is executive officer.

The roster will be similar to registers compiled by many European countries now at war, where the value of selective placement of trained personnel has been demonstrated.

Membership lists of specialized and technical societies will be used to reach many of the specialists by the use of the extensive questionnaires.

Qualifications will be recorded on punch cards which can be sorted speedily by machines, making it possible in a few minutes to compile an accurate list of experts in any field.

Ickes to Open New Deal Blast Against Willkie

Goes on Air Tonight As Roosevelt's Aides Prime Campaign Guns

By L. W. Meredith

International News Service Staff Writer

New Deal leaders yesterday primed their guns for a blast at Wendell Willkie, Republican Presidential nominee who challenged President Roosevelt to meet him in open debate on campaign issues.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes, sharp-tongued fire-brand of the Administration, will go on the air at 8:30 (E. S. T.) tonight for the first round with the challenger who repeatedly has demanded a bout with "The Champ," as Willkie has referred often to the President.

After Ickes will come others of the Cabinet and lesser lights in a series of speeches directed at the Indianian who issued his challenge to Mr. Roosevelt in his nomination acceptance speech at Elwood, Ind.

New Deal strategy calls for these Administration spokesman, and not the President himself, to meet the challenges of Willkie. This indicated, well-informed Democratic leaders said, there was little if any possibility of the President himself debating with his opponent—and Willkie's friends declared he would agree to meet no one but "The Champ" in debate.

The President, however, never has been averse to breaking precedent, observers pointed out. However, the President has stated previously that international and defense problems would prevent him from going into an extensive campaign

Too Much News?

BY HOLGAR J. JOHNSON
President Institute of Life Insurance

IT'S important that we get the news of the world—and see it in proper perspective. Yet people who worry continually about the state of the world these days are apt to become so concerned that they neglect the duties nearest them.

JOHNSON

In times like these, you can't blame them for it, but there is such a thing as worrying too much about events over which we have no control.

Of course, no responsible person would recommend that we adopt the "ostrich" defense and simply hide from the facts.

Perhaps there is a sane middle course—a way to keep our eyes open and our minds on our jobs.

A friend of mine has a formula for this—he has set aside two news periods in his day—periods for reading or listening to news. At all other times he directs his mind and his energies toward his own work.

This is a very good formula to follow whenever there are hard-to-face facts clouding the future.

Face facts, yes! But don't spend your whole time worrying about them!

IN our business there are thousands of men and women an important part of whose job it is to persuade people to face facts so they won't have to worry about the future.

It's not my job to sell life insurance and it wouldn't even be my place to select an agent for you if you asked me.

But it is my job to serve the public interest in such ways as pointing out the value to you of "facing the facts" with a good life insurance agent at least once a year—just to review your program. If you'll do this, you can put away some of your worries and enjoy a greater sense of security in this troubled world.

This regular Monday column is provided by the Institute of Life Insurance to permit the President to speak to America's policy owners. Address inquiries to 60 East 42nd Street, New York City.

Industry Denies Defense Sabotage

Manufacturers' Group Answers Lewis Charges

The National Association of Manufacturers yesterday issued a blunt denial of charges by President John L. Lewis of the Congress of Industrial Organizations that industry was "sabotaging national defense" and sacrificing "the welfare of the Nation for profit."

H. W. Prentis, jr., president of the N. A. M., in a letter to members of the House Ways and Means and the Senate Finance Committees, which are considering the excess profits bill, branded such accusatios deliberate or unwitting misstatements."

Prentis declared that such charges are delaying and confusing "legislation which your committee and Government experts agree is essential for national defense."

"Not a Time for Friction"

Lewis leveled the accusation against industry in a letter to the two committees last Thursday. He said labor was alarmed at the "bold sabotage of national defense by representatives of American corporative industry." He added that the present proposals for the revision of taxation now before the committees are being forced upon the Executive and Congress by the high-handed refusal of American industry to expand its resources for defense until it has received immunity from proper taxation.

Observing that the War, Navy and Treasury Departments and the National Defense Advisory Commission agree that prompt enactment of an amortization plan for industrial expansion is necessary, Prentis said that "this is not a time for friction, but for cooperative, harmonious effort in the national interest."

He emphasized that although national defense money has only started to flow through business channels, the N. A. M. advocates application of emergency and equitable excess profits taxes to all 1940 income to prevent "profiteering."

"From the very beginning of this national defense emergency," Prentis wrote, "the manufacturers of this country have opposed 'profiteering.' Not only this, but they have pledged their full effort to the task of national defense as witnessed by this association's public statement of June 23. . . .

"The endeavor to discredit industry's efforts and to blame manufacturers for holding up national defense is not only reprehensible but is as well a definite barrier to the accomplishment of effective defense efforts."

To explain "industry's true position," Prentis pointed to two specific recommendations to effect "constructive improvements" in the excess profits bill to tax earning arising from defense activity and the amortization provision to allow recovery of costs of factories and machinery specially acquired for defense purposes.

Based on Experiences Elsewhere

"The proposals offered by industry on excess profits taxation," Prentis told the committees, "are not, as has been implied, attempts to emasculate this levy. These suggestions were offered on the basis of the experience of this and other countries with this type of legislation and on the basis of very real practical difficulties and discrimination faced by thousands of active companies whose operations are important to the high level of productivity required to maintain our national strength.

"To those who purport to see selfish and unpatriotic motives in these tax recommendations made by the N. A. M. I would point out the clear fact that the N. A. M. indorsed before your committee the idea of applying emergency but equitable excess profits taxes even to 1940 income, although eight months of the year have passed and national defense money has not yet begun to flow in full measure through business channels. This, I believe, should be clear-cut evidence of our resolve against any profiteering whatsoever on national defense orders.

"We feel sure that your committee's decision will not be affected by those whose recklessly flung charges can indicate only either a misunderstanding of facts or a deliberate effort to confuse and thus delay legislation which your committee and government defense experts agree is essential for national defense."

Industry Put Under Fascist Rule in France

Government Control By Commissars Decreed in New Law

By John Lloyd
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Vichy, France, Aug. 17.—All industrial and commercial activity in France virtually passed under Fascist-patterned government control today through a new law published in the Official Journal permitting appointment of commissars in each industry to regulate private initiative.

"Industrial democracy" is ended, at least temporarily, in France, the Journal asserted.

Committees of control acting under authority of the government will be empowered, in case it is deemed merited, to order such punishments as the ousting of directors of industry and the fining of any industry up to 10 per cent of its business turnover.

The law stated decrees would be forthcoming shortly, dissolving national workers' and employers' unions or confederations which heretofore have been the ruling powers in big industry.

Can Dissolve Combines

Furthermore, the law declares that, if the government wishes, it may issue decrees dissolving big combines considered "incompatible" with the functioning of the new system.

The largest and best-known combine in France is the Comite des Forges (steel combine) but neither this nor any other was named in the Journal.

Here is how the new system will operate:

The ministry of labor and industrial production will name a special high commissar in each industry. These commissars will be the key control men of the nation's entire planned industrial and commercial life.

Control committees called "committees of organization," made up of workers and employers, will be appointed for each branch of industry and commerce as a national body under close supervision of the commissars.

Has Wide Powers

All vital matters in its particular branch of industry or commerce will be subjected to authority of this committee. Its power will extend even to such matters as shifting stocks and raw materials from one industrial concern to another to establish a proper balance, and dividing up business orders.

It can control prices, inflict punishments and handle any disputes arising between employers and workers. In all such matters, however, it must submit decisions to the commissar, which means the government maintains real control.

A printed prelude to the law explained this "energetic" action and absolute state control was made necessary to prevent throwing hundreds of thousands of men out of work and at the same time to get industry and commerce into working order.

Jobless, WPA Can Organize, Says Roosevelt

Commends Plan For Union, Pledges Protection to Group

By the United Press

Chicago, Aug. 18. — President Roosevelt asserted in a letter to the American Security Conference tonight that unemployed and PWA workers have the same right as other groups to self-organization and promised the Administration's protection "in the orderly exercise of that right."

He commended a plan of the organization to form a "100 per cent American Movement" of unemployed, project workers and other underprivileged as an aid to the Nation in securing the viewpoint of the unemployed.

His letter was addressed to David Lasser, conference chairman, who recently broke away from the Workers Alliance because, he charged, it was controlled by Communists. The conference, with 200 delegates, many of them former members of the alliance, convenes here tomorrow for a three-day session and will consider problems affecting unemployed and WPA workers and formulate a program for their security.

Mr. Roosevelt expressed hope that the session would prove beneficial to the underprivileged and the Nation as a whole and said he would be glad to receive any program proposed by the conference.

"I have consistently maintained that those unemployed through no fault of their own or employed on work projects, have the same right to self-organizations possessed by other groups in the population . . . Our democracy, threatened as it is today, needs the viewpoint of all sections of our population in order to solve our pressing economic and social problems.

"That is particularly true of the question of unemployment. This Administration recognizes that total defense of our shores, our homes, our institutions, cannot be complete until all Americans willing and able to work have a job and a decent standard of living; and that all unable to work through no fault of their own have security."

Work Urged For Students By Educators

Report Recommends High Schools Teach Useful Occupations

Leading educators are recommending a wider reintroduction of the muscle and horny hand into secondary education.

Ten nationally known educators, reporting to the American Youth Commission of the American Council on Education, said in essence that young people need to learn to work, and work experience should be made a part of high school curriculums. The report was made public yesterday.

It is an old American custom, the educators reminded, pointing to the "interesting historical fact that the early educational law of the American colonies explicitly provided that parents should give their children training in some useful occupation."

Industrial conditions altered the case, it was said. Parents could no longer train their children in work, with result that manual work now is no longer a part of the education of a great number of young people."

Vocational education, it was said, either cultivates highly specialized skills for which there is only a limited demand, or provides other innovations that are "more in the nature of patchwork additions than fundamental reforms in the instructional program."

Washington public schools have followed this trend and are emphasizing it in at least five institutions, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, said yesterday.

The report held that work can be advocated as a much-to-be-desired phase of education for all classes of young people.

"Those who are to enter the professions need to labor at some period in their lives in order to gain an understanding and appreciation of what labor is. Those who are going to earn their living by labor have a right to be trained under competent supervision so that they may enter on their careers under the most favorable conditions possible," the report stated.

Boat Swept Over Dam; 4 Missing

Motter, postmaster of Frederick.

Charles U. Price, 24, a Harvard University student and son of Charles S. Price, Frederick business man.

Two were saved by Lorenzo (Buck) Sager, jr., and Raymond Riley, of Seneca, who put out over the rapids in one boat, and the other two by Arlis Bowman, of Herndon, Va., and a companion, Alfred Myers, of Fairfax, Va., who risked the same dangerous waters in another craft.

First to brave the rapids in a rescue attempt were Bowman and Myers, who reached the isle and took aboard James McSherry and Motter, all their small boat would hold, and set out for the Virginia shore. Then, at an island 350 yards downstream, the motor of the rescue boat went dead.

As night fell the motor was heard to start again. But the party had not reached shore at a late hour and Sager and Riley, after reaching the island and safely bringing Clinton McSherry and Price to shore at Seneca, set out again to search for the other rescue party.

Joined by Julian Abrecht, of Frederick, Sager and Riley found the missing group about 11:30 p. m., drifting 3 miles downstream. The motor had become useless in the rough water and rocks.

Working cooperatively, the two parties maneuvered their boats to the Maryland shore above Pennifield Lock and returned to Seneca through the C. & O. Canal. Mr. and Mrs. Motter, Mr. and Mrs. McSherry, and Mrs. Price were waiting to drive the rescued youths home.

Meanwhile, another rescue was effected farther down the Potomac, when Frank E. Butterfield, senior guard at the Naval Proving Ground at Dahlgren, Va., saved four persons who had drifted more than 13 hours in a leaky open boat.

On a fishing trip Saturday, the party's motor had stalled and their anchor rope had broken, setting them adrift. A searching party had given up the search at midnight Saturday.

Butterfield found the group as the boat drifted between Britain's Bay and Tall Timber.

Occupants of the craft were its owner, Capt. Edward H. Hughes, 84, of Morris Point; Thomas M. Graves, 26; Thomas E. Graves, 56, and Henry Leigh, 28, all of Brentwood, Md.

G. E. Alter, Former Pa. Legal Head, Dies

Pittsburgh, Aug. 18 (AP).—George E. Alter, who rose from a grocer's delivery boy to become attorney general of Pennsylvania and a Republican candidate for Governor, died early today. He was 72.

A descendant of a former Governor and also of one of the Commonwealth's early lawmakers, Alter was a former member of the Legislature, a prominent Pittsburgh attorney and a leader of the Pennsylvania Bar Association, which he once served as president.

Surviving are his wife, two daughters and two sons.

Harvard, Red Cross Plan to Study Wartime Disease

Creation of a 100-bed hospital and laboratory to study wartime disease in England was announced jointly yesterday by the American Red Cross and Harvard University.

The hospital to be constructed and maintained by the Red Cross will be a pre-fabricated structure and of a temporary nature, at first.

Beside providing the hospital staff under the direction of Dr. John E. Gordon, professor of preventative medicine and epidemology, the school will also establish a Harvard public health unit in conjunction.

"The purpose of the undertaking," it was stated, "in addition to filling an urgent need in England will be to acquire valuable information relating both to the control of epidemics under unusual wartime conditions and to the organization of temporary, mobile hospitals under similar conditions. This information might be of great value to the United States in the event of defense or other emergencies."

Ringside Table

With Pete Macias of Lounge Riviera
(Subbing for Mary Harris)

Taking a backward squint at night club history in Washington, you see that it runs in cycles. Many of the places have had their faces lifted countless times to meet changing trends.

PETE MACIAS

Tradition tells us that the Cafe Republique on the present site of the Washington Hotel was the first attempt to dazzle the guys and gals with a touch of night life. (I've been around a lot, but honest, I don't remember the Republique.) It was a big place, but ahead of its time, and died rapidly.

Our town's first successful night club was the St. Marks, located in a former church on Fifteenth street near K. The now famous Robert of the Shoreham presided and there was an Irving Boernstein orchestra. It catered strictly to the carriage trade and I mean carriage, for there was a hackstand in front of Mrs. E. B. McLean's I street manse.

About this time Sidney was playing at the old Shoreham, Meyer Davis was appearing personally at the Willard and Sam Steinburger was corralling summer trade on the Arlington Roof with Brooke Johns leading the band, Kate Smith singing, and yours truly at the piano.

At this point everyone decided to hide. Such places as the White Owl, the Better 'Ole and the Black Cat opened in converted stables in the most exclusive alleys. "Dutch" Whalen, of the Better 'Ole, was then the only saxaphonist in town.

Then Meyer Davis opened Le Paradis with the ultra-ultra-ultra little Club Chantecler downstairs. These spots were the last word in success and smartness, compare favorably with anything in the country today. Spencer Tupman led the Le Paradis band and Paul Fideliman was the piano playing maestro in Chantecler. Robert of the Shoreham was in charge of both places.

Then came a flood of new places. Leaders were La Java, where the Tower Building now stands, L'Aiglon at Eighteenth street and Columbia road and Peter (Madrillon) Borras' Spanish Village which gave hot competition to everybody.

Those were the heydays,—while they lasted. Then came another of those cycles. Le Paradis changed ownership and became the Club Michel, latter the Volga Boatman. Peter Borras moved into his big new Madrillon in Washington Building. A trio of big Chinese restaurants sprang up, including the present Lotus and Casino Royal. The new Shoreham dazzled the town with what is now its Blue Room, but was then rainbow lighted. And yours truly opened the Heigh Ho just about the time that repeal gave a big new impetus to night spots. That brings the subject pretty well down to current times.

(Say, Mary, can I say that I'm now holding forth at the Lounge Riviera without being accused of plugging?)

WHERE TO GO

Anchor Room. Deep sea atmosphere. Songs and accordion-piano at afternoon and evening cocktail hours by Eileen George and Frank Meyers.

Casino Royal. Bright revues at 7:30, 10:30 and 1 a. m. Novel and peppery dance music by "Jivin' Jack" Schaeffer and his band.

Del Rio. Large and handsome suburban spot. Dancing in the Fiesta Room to Ray Bradford's music. Songs by Bonnie Fleming.

Dick's Grill. Popular rendezvous for musicians and show people. Specializes in sea food and Spanish dishes.

Glen Echo. One of the finest and best operated amusement parks in the country. Dancing in the Spanish ballroom to Paul Kain's rhythms.

Harrington Tavern. Quiet and dignified. Active at cocktail hours and also serves pop priced dinners, luncheons, breakfasts and snacks.

Hi Hat. Highly lively and popular cocktail room. Breezy music by the Cavaliers (Tom, Dick and Harry). Songs by blonde Marianne Lee.

King Cole Room. Charming cocktail spot. Entertainers are lovely Linda Carroll and Arthur Todd, highly rated guitarist.

Lotus. Large and glossy revues at 1, 7:30 and 11:30 p. m. Continuous dance music from 7:30 by Bill Strickland's orchestra and the Continental Trio.

Lounge Riviera. Swank spot frequented by Social Registerites, but delightfully gay. Pete Macias' dance music, songs by Harriet Derck.

Madrillon. Beautiful downtown restaurant. Cocktail hour entertainment. Continuous evening music by Carr and Don's band and the Trio Lirico.

Maryland Gardens. Glamorous countryside dance-and-dinery. Dance music by a girl orchestra, Nadine's Co-Eds. Also a large floor show.

Mayfair. Colorful and extremely popular cocktail spot and cafe. Novelty diversion by "Mousie" Garner's Trio from 4 to 6 and 10 to 1.

Mayflower Lounge. Handsome and luxurious. Dick Koons and his Glee Club orchestra plays for dancing from 5 to 7 and 10 to 1.

Neptune Room. Dannie Danford's new trio. Has played all over Europe, been commended by many royalties. Is packing in crowds every evening.

New Bavarian. Very jolly. Luncheon and cocktail music by Durward Bowersox and Eddy Whitesel. Evening entertainers are Jane Marlow, the Heintze Brothers and Tommy Suter.

Nightingale. Big and successful suburban dancery. Rodd Raffell leads his 13-piece orchestra with cleverness and originality.

O'Donnell's Farms. "Plantation dinners" are the house specialty. Strolling music by Les Colvin. Saturday eve dancing to a Sidney unit.

Rainbow Room. Brilliant dinner and supper dance music by a Meyer Davis band. Afternoon novachord concerts by Milton Davis.

River Bend. Attractive dance-and-dine spot on Mount Vernon boulevard. Music by George Stein's band. "Piggy parties" every Wednesday.

Rustic Cabin. Popular and pleasantly informal resort near Bladensburg. Novachord music by Al Shea. Excellent dinners and beverages.

Shoreham Terrace. Huge and beautiful "class spot." Floor shows at 10 p. m. and dance music by Barnee and his orchestra.

140 Nazi Planes Felled, British Say

As many as 100 bombers were reported in individual formations.

But the British evidently were striking blow for blow with the Germans, and the skies over the Channel swarmed with a Sunday traffic jam of the enemies bound in opposite directions.

Fighter escorts of each force did screaming battle, while the bombers hurried on toward their objectives ashore.

26 Airdromes Bombed

The R. A. F. raids on the continent began last night, and the Air Ministry reported oil plants, munitions factories, aircraft stores and railway targets in Germany were bombed, along with 26 airdromes in France, Holland and Belgium.

But the vigor of the fighting on England's own shore today was signified by the disclosure that 14 German planes crashed on just 14 miles of British beach in one phase of the fighting.

An Air Ministry announcement that German planes were being chased from London across the North Sea and the English Channel and that "our fighters still are in action" indicated that today's operations may prove the heaviest so far in the Nazi air siege.

Stukas in Southeast

Sixteen Messerschmitt 109's, slipping silently out of the sun, dive-bombed "an objective" about 3 miles from a southeast coast town late this afternoon, and scattered raiders also dumped bombs on other areas.

Some houses were wrecked in a residential district near a midland town but most bombs were said to have fallen on soft ground. Fires broke out on the southeast coast before British fighters chased off a squadron of 22 German planes in a battle.

In the southwest, an undisclosed number of soldiers were killed when they approached a delayed-action bomb.

Seventeen bombs fell on a golf course in a London suburb during the first attack on this area.

For more than an hour British pursuit planes hurled themselves on the enemy squadrons before the attack was beaten off. The retreating raiders dropped bombes in Kent and the neighborhood of Scuth London, an air ministry communique said but "further details are not yet available."

Observers who saw one mass wave of 100 cross the coast and dash toward the capital, said they counted but 53 returning in a ragged formation.

Sunday Quiet Shattered

About 15 minutes later the second wave of bombers came over and dived. Houses were shaken by the detonations and by the vibration of answering antiaircraft batteries.

Sirens sounded the alarm in London shortly after noon—the third alarm in three days—and soon afterward the roar of motors high in the sky, the crunch-crunch of distant explosions, the splatter of firing and the shriek of diving fighters shattered the city's usual Sunday quiet.

The air ministry information service gave these details of some of the fighting:

"A squadron of Spitfires engaged German bombers which weer about to attack their airdrome in Surrey. Within a short time they had destroyed 11—6 bombers and 5 fighters.

"About the same time, a Hurricane squadron was challenging an attack in the Hampshire area. They shot down 8 Junkers, 87 dive-bombers and 2 Messerschmitt fighters.

"During air battles over Kent, a squadron of Hurricanes on patrol sighted five Messerschmitt fighter-bombers at 21,000 feet.

"We climbed up and dived down on the enemy, shooting down the lot in a dog-fight," said one Hurricane pilot.

"A crack Spitfire squadron, approaching the century-mark of successes, engaged a number of lone fighters and bombers over Kent. While these fights were going on, several large formations of bombers—at least 80—appeared flying in line abreast in sections of three.

In the midst of Nazi air raids, Britain is preparing its armed forces vigorously for a world offensive, Minister of Supply Herbert Morrison said in a speech.

"The ground plan of our future production activity is drawn on the assumption that our task will be a world offensive when the moment comes," he asserted.

Morrison said the equipment of British forces was not yet "fully satisfactory," but added that the army had sufficient weapons to "perform its immediate task successfully even if the call should come tonight."

Hitler's Navy Tests New Weapon For Invasion of British Isles

Secret Device Will 'Surprise World,' Says Officers; Germans, Waiting for 'Der Tag,' See England Conquered by September

By Louis P. Lochner
Associated Press Staff Writer

Brussels (Via Airplane to Berlin), Aug. 18.—In preparation for the German attempt to invade England, Adolf Hitler's navy is trying out a new weapon which officers insist will surprise the world when the moment comes to use it.

Tests of the new device are being conducted in a harbor which I visited during a three-day tour of the Belgian-French coast opposite England. The nature of the weapon and the exact location of its pre-invasion trials are, of course, strictly withheld from publication.

But an atmosphere of supreme confidence prevails among the troops waiting in this area for the grand assault on England to begin. Any German officer or private along the coast between Ostend and Boulogne will tell you with conviction:

"Oh, by September it will all be over. By that time our troops will have conquered the British Isles and the English, like the French, will have begged for peace."

Await Air Victory

For the moment, the troops gathered in this area as reserves for the invasion are waiting patiently for the German air force to complete its task of routing and demolishing Britain's air defense.

That does not mean they are idle. There still are vast quantities of war booty, captured from the Belgians, French and retreating English, which must be sorted and prepared for shipment to Germany or put in repair for use elsewhere.

All this is being done with a thoroughness characteristic of German methods. When I last visited the Western Front in June all this booty was standing around. Now one sees drivers and mechanics putting French tanks into battle condition, or army engineers tinkering with captured railway locomotives.

Trainloads of steel rails, copper ingots and other vital raw materials are rolling east to Germany.

Supplies From Reich

On the other hand, I saw on highways truck after truck loaded with supplies coming from Germany. Evidently Hitler and his general staff intend to conduct the campaign against England as methodically and carefully as the other German campaigns in this amazing war.

My three-day trip up and down this strategic coast now completely in German hands has impressed me forcefully with the confidence prevailing everywhere among army, navy and air force men, that the conquest of England is only a matter of time.

From such glimpses as I obtained of their preparations, made behind one of the most effective screens of camouflage ever devised by man, I can only say this confidence is understandable. Every eventuality apparently has been taken into account, and weapons of the weirdest character have been devised for this final phase—as the Germans regard it—of the conflict in Europe.

nounced, adding that "all our aircraft returned."

An air ministry news bulletin supplementing the communique reported that when the attack on Boulogne ended the basin "was ringed and criss-crossed by spreading flames."

Dive at 2-Minute Intervals

Three tons of high explosives, in addition to "showers of incendiaries" were dumped at the harbor targets, the ministry disclosed, adding:

"Despite fierce opposition from ground defenses our Battles (light bombers) dived effectively on their objectives at 2-minute intervals.

"The harbor was bombed on all sides from low height. The main pier at the entrance was hit several times, but most of the bombs fell plumb along ships and seaplanes in the basin. One of the seaplanes which was struck came up above the smoke of explosions in a thousand pieces."

The air ministry said one bomber opened fire on a section of antiaircraft guns with "less than 100 rounds" of machine-gun fire and silenced the battery.

Concentrate on Boulogne

Dover, England (Monday), Aug. 19.—The rampant Royal Air Force smashed at the Nazi-occupied French ports on the English Channel all last night and watchers in Dover could see bright flashes and hear heavy explosions.

It was evident that the British attack covered all the 20 miles from Calais to Boulogne, although the R. A. F. seemed to be devoting its main attention to Boulogne—the spot from which Julius Caesar invaded Britain in 55 B. C.

Five great flashes in the Boulogne vicinity were so brilliant that they illumined the streets of Dover—a score of miles across the Channel, as if by floodlight.

Waves of British aircraft already had carried out a heavy daylight raid on the French coast, going over about noon Sunday.

The dull thud of heavy explosions across the Channel could be heard only a few minutes after what seemed to be three waves of medium British bombers flew over the coast.

At the same time, dog fights took place between British Spitfires and Hurricanes and German Messerschmitts, which came up to intercept the British. The air immediately filled with the mighty roar of diving and zooming planes.

Fight Four Miles Up

At one time there was the typically heavy sound of German bombers crossing inland, while to the west what appeared to be a British bomber squadron was crossing outward.

Fighters engaged in a dogfight high in the air were leaving a crazy pattern of condensed vapor from their exhausts as they twisted and turned some four or five miles above us.

The Germans came over in their usual "V" formation, but went into single file in order as they dived at the airdrome.

Just as they got over the field, the antiaircraft guns set up a hot barrage, puffs from shells burst near some of the planes, and the air rocked with a thunderous symphony of cannon and antiaircraft shells, machine gun bursts and the throb of airplane engines.

Then the Messerschmitts started out to sea with three Hurricanes in swift pursuit.

During the morning raid the only thing heard was the throb of Hurricane and Spitfire patrols along the coast. Apparently no German planes came over.

several were "destroyed" by bomb hits. Aside from suburban areas south of London—airports in Hampshire were attacked along with an air drome near Maidstone, Kent.

"Croydon Again Burning"

One German bombing unit made the following crisp report, which was relayed by D. N. B., official news agency:

"Croydon again is burning. In Maidstone, hangars collapsed. At both places airplanes standing on the ground were destroyed."

Heavy air fighting occurred over Portsmouth, where "swarms of Messerschmitt fighters broke through the defense and shot down a number of British pursuit planes," Nazi informants said. "German bombers then roared through the breach and systematically destroyed several airports."

Destruction of airfields is part of the blitzkrieg technique of immobilizing the opponent's air forces to give the Germans dominance in the air which, in the case of England, would be necessary for any land invasion.

Exemptions Offered to Eire

Bad weather was said to have held up the full fury of German attack until this afternoon. Even then the operations today were by "only a few German squadrons," the German radio said.

The radio tonight began broadcasting the latitude and longitude of the newly-proclaimed "total blockade" of Britain and it was disclosed that although Ireland falls within it the Reich has offered exemptions for Eire's shipping.

Otherwise, the radio warned, "every ship which ventures into it will be attacked and destroyed."

"Iron Ring" Revised

German spokesmen described their "total blockade" as an aerial and sea adaptation of the "iron ring" tactics which netted victory in Flanders, and indicated by exemption of Ireland from its effects that they hoped to shut off Irish shipping from England and thus complete the isolation of Britain from the west.

During the night the Nazi air force and the R. A. F. swapped heavy blows. The Germans reported the British killed four civilians and wounded 22 in an attack on central Brussels. At Dortmund, Germany, "a number" of civilian casualties were reported, including many dead.

Factories Attacked

The German high command said its night bombers directed especially heavy attacks against factories at Filton, three miles north of Bristol where Britain's Bristol Blenheim bombers are manufactured; aircraft factories near Birmingham, in the Midlands; industrial plants at Reading, 45 miles north of Portsmouth; harbor facilities at Swansea, in Wales; Avonmouth, five miles north of Bristol on the Severn, and Bournemouth, on the south English coast.

Other attacks were directed at British antiaircraft and searchlight batteries and flying fields in central England.

"Minelaying in English harbors continued," the daily communique said.

In the war at sea, one submarine reported the sinking of 32,000 tons of British shipping.

U. S. Hands Reich Note on Relief Ship

of the ship, course and description.

3. That on the afternoon of August 14 the German air force had pointed out that the course of the American Legion, passing between Rona and Cape Wrath, would bring the vessel into the path of dangerous air operations.

4. That upon inquiry to the German government as to the time required for notice as to a possible change in course of the vessel, the American Government was informed that latest notice of change in course of the vessel was upon August 15, Berlin time.

5. That on August 14, the German government said that if the American Government insisted upon the ship following its originally planned course, there was nothing for the Germans to do but accept the decision, pointing out the "great danger involved."

6. That the German government claimed it had never granted safe passage to the ship. The United States held this was "not in line" with repeated statements of the German foreign office that there was no occasion for the Germans to stop a neutral vessel and that there was no need for safe assurance since the vessel was a public vessel of the United States.

Notice Held Sufficient

7. The United States Government, therefore, is convinced that the German government had received sufficient advance notice of the sailing of the ship, its course and markings, and the note pointed out that all other belligerent governments had given assurances of safe passage.

The State Department's note concluded with this blunt declaration:

"Stated briefly, the German government has on several occasions . . . stated that the vessel in question . . . needed no safe conduct from the German government . . .

"The German government having repeatedly made that statement and . . . having assured the Government of the United States that it had actually notified its armed forces of the route . . . and in continuing reliance upon the original statements of the German government . . . the Government of the United States expects that the vessel will not suffer molestation by any action undertaken by the German armed forces."

The German "oral" note to the State Department yesterday afternoon notified this Government of the proclamation of the "total blockade" against England, which warned all ships to keep clear of the war zone around the British Isles.

A State Department spokesman emphasized, however, that Germany had not mentioned, in any of its communications, anything concerning mines being sown in the area. The only dangers mentioned, he said, were those which might result from German air operations.

But the Berlin press, he continued, published reports concerning mining of the waters adjacent to the British Isles. Kirk even telegraphed the department to point out that the German communications with this government did not mention the fact, the spokesman added.

The German Embassy here, in a press release distributed almost simultaneously with the department's announcement, said the German government "has issued today (Sunday) a press communique which lays further stress upon the danger of mines threatening the vessel on its contemplated course."

The American Legion was understood to have aboard 897 persons, including Crown Princess Martha of Norway, with her three children, invited to the United States by President Roosevelt; Mrs. Florence J. Harriman, United States Minister to Norway; Mrs. Frederick A. Sterling, wife of the Minister to Sweden, and her three children; and the Ministers to Estonia, Lithuania and Latvia, with their families.

French Aiding British to Defend Somaliland, Duce's Aid Charges

Italians Hurling Picked Troops Against Berbera

By the Associated Press

Rome, Aug. 18.—The French are helping Britain's defense of British Somaliland, object of an Italian East African campaign, Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, charged today.

He accused the Governor of French Somaliland of commanding French troops fighting with the British. Besides throwing up fortifications which the British are using, the French left "a generous gift of cannon, machine guns, munitions, pilots, planes and high officers" to the British colonials in British Somaliland after the German-Italian-French armistice was signed.

[Italy has thrown the pick of her Ethiopian troops into the battle for British Somaliland, British military sources said in Cairo.

[These troops, supporting columns already converging upon Berbera, Somaliland capital, were said to be spear-headed by crack Black Shirt regiments. Already heavily outnumbered, British defense forces are admitted to be falling steadily back toward Berbera, fighting every inch of the way.]

Meanwhile, foreign observers in Italy speculated that the British fleet's heavy bombardment of Italy's big Libyan base at Bardia might have been intended as a show of strength for the benefit of Greece, which faces possible territorial demands by Italy.

An Italian communique which described the bombardment yesterday covered action at sea, on land and in the air and reported:

1. British warships attacking Bardia fired "not less than 300 shells into the city and other inland positions, killing one soldier and wounding 11 others.

12 Planes Downed

2. Italian battle planes shot down seven—possibly nine—British planes which accompanied the attacking fleet and bombed inland objectives. Three Italian planes were lost.

3. Two columns of Italian troops converged closer to the British key point of Berbera in British Somaliland. One column advancing along the coast from Zeila moved into Bulhar, 40 miles from Berbera, and another occupied La Faruk. One Italian plane was lost bombing Berbera.

4. An Italian submarine sank a 9,000-ton British tanker "somewhere in the Atlantic," indicating that Italian naval units are actively aiding in Germany in efforts to blockade England.

[A Norwegian tanker plying between the United States and Britain has been captured by the Germans in mid-Atlantic and taken to a French port, the Rome radio was quoted as saying today by Reuters, British news agency.]

Bardia Bombarded

The British announced that Bardia was shelled heavily for 25 minutes and that Italian troops were forced to withdraw from Fort Capuzzo, also a strong Italian point near the Libyan-Egyptian frontier. The British said the attack probably put a serious crimp in Italian plans for a push into Egypt.

[The British claimed 9—possibly 11—Italian planes shot down at Bardia, another in the Red Sea, and one in the desert west of Alexandria.]

Authorized Italian sources said Italy still has not made specific territorial demands on Greece, which has refused to repudiate British guarantees of her independence, but it was intimated that such demands would be soon.

The demands were expected to be made on behalf of Fascist-held Albania for the Ciamuria section of Greece adjoining Albania.

The Italian press kept up its campaign against Greece and Stefani, official Italian news agency, distributed a long account of Greek "persecution" of the Albanian minority in the Ciamuria section.

Fifth Column to Be Topic of U. S. Bar

Simplification of criminal procedures bearing on Fifth Column activities will be explored dy the American Bar Association at its sixty-third annual meeting in Philadelphia September 9-13, it was announced by the association yesterday.

The association hopes, also, to determine the part lawyers should take in aiding the government in the national emergency.

Solicitor General Francis Biddle will speak on "The Fifth Column as a Criminal Law Problem;" Howard S. LeRoy, professor of law, National University, Washington, will discuss "Air Law Versus Sea Law."

Parochial School To Open Sept. 5

St. Michael's Parochial School, Montgomery avenue, Silver Spring, will open September 5, the Rev. Thomas A. Calnan, pastor of St. Michael's Catholic Church, announced yesterday. Formal registration of pupils will be held on the opening day.

The Academy of the Holy Names on Maple avenue, a private high school under the supervision of the Sisters of the Holy Names, will also open September 5.

Asks Decree

In a petition filed in the circuit court at Rockville, John J. tMetz, of Takoma Park, Md., asks for a limited divorce from Mrs. Edith B. Metz, of Alexandria, Va. It is charged that the plaintiff was deserted August 3, 1940. The couple was married at Marlboro, Md., December 31, 1936, the bill states.

draftees, since the legislation was not formally under discussion by Congress when the appropriations estimates were made.

Senator Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, author of a proposal to defer military conscription until 1941, expressed the view that Wendell L. Willkie's indorsement of selective service would not weaken the support accorded Maloney's plan in the Senate.

Administration leaders have acknowledged that the Maloney substitute for the Burke-Wadsworth immediate draft bill had a good chance of adoption. The Connecticut Senator would delay conscription until January 1, while the Army sought to fill its quota by the volunteer method.

Maloney Considers Revision

Willkie said yesterday, in accepting the Republican Presidential nomination, that "some form of selective service was the only democratic way in which to secure the trained and competent man power we need for national defense."

The Senate is scheduled to resume debate today on the Burke-Wadsworth bill. Under it and the Maloney substitute, all men of 21 through 30 would be required to register immediately.

Maloney said he was considering revising his substitute measure to provide for registration, by order of the President, only after it became apparent that voluntary enlistments would not bring in the number of men needed to operate the defense machinery. He said he would decide this week whether to make the change, which, he added had been advocated by opponents of conscription.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, was reported to have expressed the belief to the appropriations subcommittee that the Army should have the 1,200,000 men in its ranks by January, if the Nation was to be protected adequately. Marshall was said to have testified that in his opinion a substantial increase in Army personnel should be effected in September and not delayed until the first of the year. This has been the position of Senators opposing the Maloney compromise.

Leaders predicted that legislation authorizing mobilization of the National Guard would be given final Congressional approval and sent to the White House in a few days. Both chambers have passed the measure, but the House tacked on some minor amendments which were not expected to cause delay in the Senate.

Engravers Open Union Parley Here Today

More than 200 members and guests had registered at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday for the International Photo Engravers' forty-first annual convention. Affiliate of the A. F. of L., the union will discuss among other things, possibilities of peace with the C. I. O.

Sessions, starting at 9 a. m. today, will continue through Saturday. Speakers will include William Green, A. F. of L. president; Senator Robert F. Wagner; Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins; Public Printer A. E. Giegengack, and Superintendent of Engraving and Printing Alvin Hall. A full attendance of more than 400 is expected.

Business will include discussions of unemployment, trade school "rackets," apprentice regulations, improvements in processes and equipment, New Deal issues and one-man engraving plants.

Advance reports of the union officers showed that approximately 23 per cent of the members are at present employed on a 35-hour work week standard; 45 per cent a 37½-hour week, and the remainder on a 40-hour basis. Approximately 93 per cent have secured a five-day week, it was said.

The union officers are Edward J. Volz, New York City, president; Matthew Woll, Washington; Frank H. Glenn, Philiadelphia, and William C. Golby, Toronto, Ontario, vice president, and Henry F. Schmal, St. Louis, secretary-treasurer.

Winchester Mayor Off to Halifax To Meet Refugees

Winchester, Va., Aug. 18.—Dr. C. R. Anderson, mayor, expects to arrive in Halifax, N. S., tonight, to meet three children from Winchester, England, who are being provided with refuge here for the duration of the war.

He left late yesterday after being advised he should be in Halifax, today, prepared if necessary, to remain through Wednesday, because it was impossible to give him the definite time for arrival of the refugee ship.

The children are Betty and Roger Edmonds, daughter and son of a former Winchester, England, mayor, and Brenda Carter. The two Edmonds children will be guests of the mayor and his family; the other will live with Mrs. Merenes Castleman, of this city.

death dropped from the skies by waves of bombing planes and is preparing for an invasion.

Mr. Roosevelt and Mackenzie King, two old friends brought together again to consider the war's serious repercussions in North America, parted at this border town after long hours of discussing what they termed mutual problems of defense in relation to the safety of Canada and the United States.

Roosevelt Goes to Hyde Park

Mr. Roosevelt left for his home at Hyde Park, N. Y., by special train. Mackenzie King departed for his capital, Ottawa, by motor car.

The two had dined together last night, then sat up late in the President's railway car. They had additional opportunity to talk this morning before attending memorial services at nearby Lisbon for the World War dead of the Twenty-eighth Division of the Pennsylvania National Guard.

Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, who held the portfolio of Secretary of State in the Hoover Administration, sat in on part of the conversation. So did Jay Pierrepont Moffatt, United State Minister to Canada, who came down from Ottawa with the prime minister and rode back with him.

It was a conference devoid of the usually diplomatic formalities, but it was nevertheless, a meeting which gave every appearance of leaving a permanent imprint on the history of North America.

The agreement lent itself readily to an interpretation that a mutual assistance pact might be in the making.

Other Parleys Under Way

Since the days of George Washington, the United States traditionally has shied away from "entangling alliances" with any nation, even when peace prevailed. The setting up of a joint defense board with Canada, an active participant in the European conflict, this represented a novel step in American foreign policy, particularly since it will be a permanent board.

That the step was taken with full premeditation was apparent from the fact that the Chief Executive had announced in Washington Friday that conversations had been in progress with Canada on Hemispheric defense.

At the same time, he announced that conversations were going on with Britain over American acquisition of sites for air and naval bases on British possessions in the Western Hemisphere. The particular objective of this diplomatic intercourse, he said, was strengthening the defenses of the Panama Canal.

Both the President and Mackenzie King were silent, however, on this phase of continental defense.

Ottawa Is Enthusiastic

Copyright by New York Times

Ottawa, Ontario, Aug. 18.—The agreement reached over the weekend between Prime Minister Mackenzie King and President Roosevelt to establish a joint board to deal with defense problems was enthusiastically received in Canada's capital.

King returned this afternoon and by evening Ottawa was buzzing with the news.

The agreement is particularly welcome on two main points:

Planning for joint defense now, instead of waiting for a possible emergency, removes the danger of the tragedy of Belgium and Holland being repeated. They waited until it was too late to plan for defense.

The agreement removes the feeling against the Monroe Doctrine that has for a long time existed in Canada.

It has been felt here that no self-respecting country could rely on the protection of another nation without offering something in return. Whatever obligation there is under the plan is a mutual obligation.

Canadian newswriters described the Ogdensburg agreement as a modernized Monroe Doctrine.

Britain Wages Constant War On 5th Column

Only 'Small Fry' Still Out of Jail; Army Of Agents on Guard

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 18.—Only small fry have eluded Britain Fifth Column net, officials believe, confident that they have licked the peril of an inside enemy.

Although large, undisclosed numbers of Fifth Columnists are in prison, the authorities are not being lulled into false security. An army of undercover agents remains on constant guard against spies and saboteurs.

The tumultuous session of the House of Commons only last Wednesday was proof of the anxiety with which Britain has watched the silent struggle against Nazi agents and tipsters whose operations in Scandinavia, the Lowlands and France paved the way for quick German conquest.

The parliamentary name-calling was aroused by Prime Minister Churchill's refusal to disclose details of secret investigations by a mysterious committee. Parliament just had to take his word for it.

Threat Reduced

But the problem was a dangerous one as late as three months ago. All Prime Minister Churchill would say was that it has been reduced "to proper proportions." The whole story is likely to remain untold until after the war.

Here, however, are three examples of the diversified form that traitorous activity is reported to have taken:

Investigators found that confidential diplomatic reports on British official affairs, which are transmitted in a code known only to friendly nations, were reaching Berlin.

An embassy in a nearby neutral country was one of the relay points.

At least two men, one of whom was connected with the embassy of a friendly power, now are in jail as a result of this plot.

Bullitt Urges Draft, Ship Deal

and save the independence of our country."

Throughout his prepared speech, a 4,000-word document bearing the imprimatur of the State Department, the Ambassador warned in hot phrases of the dangers of minimizing the effects of a German victory on American security. Repeatedly, he compared conditions in this country today to those prevailing in France before Hitler's hordes swept down from the north.

"Unless we act now," he asserted, "the dictators are convinced that all democracies will always be too late."

There are many Americans, "honest pacifists" and others, Bullitt said, who believe "the dictators when they say that they have no intention of extending their conquests to the Western Hemisphere and certainly, not to the United States."

This is either wishful thinking, he declared, or the talk of "agents of the dictators."

The envoy reported to an audience which included his colleague, Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, U. S. Ambassador to Poland, that his observations abroad revealed to him the Nazi "strategy of destruction." German agents bluffed France into a false sense of security and Hitler's military machine did the rest, he said.

Ocean Would Help Little

Comparing French faith in the Maginot Line with American faith in the Atlantic Ocean as an obstacle to invasion, Bullitt asserted "the destruction of the British navy would be the turning of our Maginot Line," He added.

"The soothing words 'Atlantic Ocean' are being used now by the propagandists of the dictators in the hope that they may become a lullaby of death for the United States."

Ambassador Bullitt pictures this prospect "if the British navy goes under:"

All Europe, including Britain and Ireland, "one economic unit" controlled from Berlin; "many" countries of South America under some degree of Nazi control; loss of foreign markets for United States cotton, tobacco and other export products which would produce "the greatest economic crisis in our history;" the Japanese navy "cooperating with the dictators" in the Pacific to cut off United States tin and rubber supplies and keep the U. S. Navy busy defending Hawaii and the West Coast while European navies ruled the Atlantic.

Terming the German military machine "without question the most powerful that has ever been created," Bullitt solemnly warned:

"You may be sure that, if the Nazis have an opportunity to turn it against us, it will be as strong or stronger than it is today and will be used in the most unexpected manner."

"The fighting line of the war for enslavement of the human spirit is nearing our shores," he concluded. "Our fate and the fate of our children depends on what each one of us does—now!"

D. C. WPA Places First Trainee In Private Work

Oscar Mayes, of 125 E street northwest, is the first local trainee from the list of eligibles on the national defense training program rolls to be placed in private industry, Paul Edwards, District WPA administrator, announced yesterday.

Mayes has been employed in the used-car reconditioning department of one of the largest automobile repair firms in Washington, Edwards said. He was hired after a rigid examination.

Employer Solicitation

The Pennsylvania businessman who sent letters to his employes suggesting that they make small contributions for the Willkie campaign may be within his constitutional rights in doing so. That apparently is the opinion of Senator Gillette, chairman of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee. But the alleged legality of an action of this kind does not excuse it. For despite the employer's assurances that his request carried no threat or compulsion to contribute, the mere act of solicitation would doubtless be regarded by some employes as equivalent to a command.

The employe is only theoretically a free agent when confronted by "suggestions" of this sort. Rather than risk the displeasure of his superior and possible loss of his job, the average worker would prefer to lay down cash, regardless of his political views.

The Corrupt Practices Act and the Hatch Act endeavor to protect Federal employes from coercive solicitation of political contributions. Attempts are constantly being made to close loopholes against abuses, and make sure that such contributions are really voluntary. Comparable safeguards to protect private employes against concealed coercion may become necessary if large numbers of employers should decide to act as self-appointed solicitors of campaign donations for their favorite candidates.

The employer who tries to influence the political views of his employes and uses his position to obtain money from them for campaign purposes is more likely to lose than to gain votes for his party and his candidate. There could be no surer way of arousing resentment and prejudicing workers against the candidate whose cause they are asked to finance. Contributions from employes must be given without suspicion of pressure from above, to be of genuine assistance to a candidate for office.

Unfair To The USHA

Antagonism on Capitol Hill toward the United States Housing Authority is threatening to delay construction of living quarters for defense workers. A group of Congressmen immediately concerned with defense appropriations is reported to have concluded that the USHA should have no part in any emergency housing program.

Chairman Vinson of the House Naval Affairs Committee has expressed hope that private industry will undertake the necessary residential building with the aid of the Federal Housing Administration. That hope will be shared by everyone interested in housing problems. But experience in the World War indicates that private industry alone cannot be relied upon to produce all the housing that may be essential to new defense industries.

When and if an acute need for public housing arises, it would certainly be unwise to ignore the agency organized especially for service in this field. It is true that the provisions of the Slum-Clearance Act cannot be properly applied to defense housing. The excessive annual subsidies customarily granted under that measure could in no case be justified in the fixing of rentals for defense workers. But Congress could readily authorize nonsubsidized defense housing through the USHA setup, if that seems necessary.

It is one thing to keep slum clearance and defense housing separate and quite another thing to deny the USHA any part in the proposed new program. The House has good reason to reexamine the policies of the USHA in granting rental subsidies. Probably, too, there is ample ground for resentment over what some Congressmen call USHA lobbying.

But subsidies can be adjusted downward by act of Congress and lobbying officials should be reported to the Department of Justice for prosecution. Direct action of this sort would be far more satisfactory than any attempt to work out completely new plans for public housing under emergency conditions.

"Total Blockade"

The proclamation by the German government of a "total blockade" of Great Britain involves no departure in policy by the Third Reich. The measures which Germany now announces she intends to take to starve out the British, allegedly in retaliation for Britain's violation of "international rules of war conduct," she has never scrupled to employ against her enemy.

However, it is one thing to announce a blockade, it is far more difficult to carry it out. Certainly, past German efforts in this war to cut off British imports and cripple British exports have met with only partial success. The Berlin government claims that no less than 5,000,000 tons of British merchant shipping have been sunk by the German navy and air force and an additional 1,500,000 tons of cargo space rendered useless by air attacks.

These claims, say the British, are very wide of the mark. But true or false it is clear that the British have not been starved out. Indeed, the British insist that through the addition of many units of the Norwegian, Danish, Dutch, Belgian and French merchant fleets, as well as through new construction and through purchase, Great Britain has a greater merchant tonnage today than she had at the beginning of the war. Under the circumstances it would prove no easy matter to make the "total blockade" effective, even if it is carried out with greater intensity and ruthlessness than ever.

The German warning that any neutral ship which in the future enters British territorial waters will be liable to destruction also involves no basic change in the situation. A neutral flag and neutral registry have never, since the war began, been any guarantee against attack by German submarines and planes. The toll of neutral merchant vessels that have been sent to the bottom since last September is eloquent proof of that fact.

Since American vessels are barred, by the Neutrality Act, from touching at British ports—that circumstance is cited by the German proclamation with approval—the "total blockade" decreed by the Reich against Great Britain is of no direct significance to the United States. Yet its timing concerns this Nation very much, indeed.

Late last week the Army transport American Legion, bearing refugees to the United States from Finland left Petsamo. Its departure came as the result of apparently successful efforts made by the Government to get assurances from the belligerents that the vessel would not be molested. But the German government has since reversed itself. It has warned the United States that it "must disclaim any responsibility for any harm that may come to the vessel."

It happens that the American Legion is not going to stop at any British port. It thus stands in no danger of running afoul of the German warning that neutral vessels entering British territorial waters may be destroyed. The German statement does suggest the possibility, however, that German mine fields have been so extensively and perhaps so recklessly sown in waters not only around the British Isles but at points far removed from enemy territory that even if the American Legion is not directly attacked harm may come to it.

In this connection it is an ominous circumstance that the German government has vouchsafed neutrals no precise information as to where the mines have been laid nor in the blockade proclamation was the exact geographical location of the areas included in that blockade set forth.

It may be more than a coincidence that Germany's oral representations to the United States disclaiming responsibility for any harm that might come to the American Legion was followed soon after by the proclamation of the total blockade against Great Britain.

New Tasks For FBI

The report of the Federal Bureau of Investigation for 1940 tells a story of expanding activities. The number of convictions obtained—5,605 as against 5,162 in 1939—does not by itself reveal the extent of the expansion. Matters involving espionage and national defense have materially increased the work of the FBI.

In the half-decade preceding 1938, the FBI handled an average of 35 espionage cases a year. On one day in May, 1940, however, it received 2,871 complaints, and matters concerned with national defense requiring investigation totaled 16,885 for the 12 months. It appears, therefore, that a large part of the public concurs in the view that such activities are the task of trained law enforcement agencies and not of "vigilantes."

The attitude of the bureau toward sabotage is reassuring. "The preventive aspect," the report reads, "is of paramount importance." At the request of the War and Navy departments, the agency has embarked on a program of surveying the protective facilities of vital factories and making recommendations which may be followed by plant officials. In dealing with sabotage an ounce of prevention is worth many pounds of cure.

While engaged in greatly increased national defense work, the FBI continued its apprehension of fugitives, investigation of kidnaping, extortion, bank robbery and white slave cases, laboratory research, filing of fingerprints, identification and training of local law offices. The general reliability of its investigations is revealed by the fact that convictions resulted from 96 per cent of all the cases it prosecuted in court.

The duties of the bureau may soon be augmented again if the pending conscription bill is approved. And if the FBI is given the task of dealing with draft dodgers, it is to be hoped that the sane tactics employed during the last few difficult months will continue in effect.

A Transportation Policy

About a year ago the Senate and the House passed bills to regulate water carriers and effect comprehensive changes in the Interstate Commerce Act. After many months, the conference committee finally reached an agreement and reported out a measure that failed to satisfy the House. Last week, however, an amended conference bill was passed by the House by a vote of 246 to 74. It now goes to the Senate, where favorable action is also anticipated.

So much attention has been given to three controversial amendments supported by the House that the public has probably received a distorted impression of this omnibus measure. But one Congressman has done his best to correct that view. The Wheeler-Lea bill, he said, "undertakes to cover the whole question of transportation in all of its phases."

In extending the jurisdiction of the ICC over water carriers, the bill is designed to bring about a long-sought system of comprehensive regulation of transportation agencies. It also improves existing ways and means of effecting consolidations. The Interstate Commerce Commission, for instance, would no longer be required to formulate consolidation plans. Yet it could allow consolidations to be effected if they were found to be in the public interest.

The bill would create a bipartisan board of three members appointed by the President to study such problems as subsidies, taxes and the relative economy of various types of transportation. A body of this sort should perform very useful work if its members are carefully selected.

For the first time a declaration of national transportation policy is set forth. That policy appears to be sound in principle, although it aims at a distant goal. The stated purpose is to regulate all modes of transportation fairly and impartially so "as to recognize and preserve the inherent advantages of each."

As finally passed by the House, the bill carries a modified amendment to protect workers against loss of pay for specified periods in case consolidations deprive them of employment. The original amendment insisted upon by the House placed no time limit upon the protective period. The compromise is said to be acceptable to organized labor. The railway companies naturally prefer the present more restricted voluntary agreement under which separation allowances are being paid.

A second compromise effected in conference restored the modified Jones amendment declaring it to be the policy of Congress to grant export rates on wheat, cotton and other farm products. Similar rates are in effect for industrial exports. This appears to be an entirely reasonable provision.

The so-called Wadsworth amendment, which, critics allege, might have necessitated raising rates on many low-grade commodities, was entirely eliminated.

The provisions affecting water carriers are especially interesting. They constitute a pioneer effort in regulation of transport agencies heretofore subject to little control. Supervision over coastal and intercoastal rates now vested in the Maritime Commission would be properly shifted to the ICC, leaving the Maritime Commission to concentrate upon promotional work.

Competitive handicaps resulting from partial and discriminatory regulation have long been the subject of justified complaint by the railroads. The Wheeler-Lea bill cannot be expected to give them sudden or spectacular relief. But it should afford a basis for a better coordinated system of national transportation.

A 75-m. p. h. hurricane ripped through Charleston, S. C., the other day, doing considerable damage. However, it was reported that none of the older natives were blown off their high horses.

Speedy And Democratic

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It must be evident to every student of the military history of the United States that the principal weakness in our present military system is our deficiency of organized reserves, men trained in the effective use of modern weapons of defense and subject to immediate service should an emergency arise.

Our first line of defense, a two-ocean Navy, has already been authorized. The present authorized strength of the Regular Army and National Guard, as an initial protective land force, seems to be wholly adequate. However, it is of the utmost importance that we should at once begin building up a trained reserve force of at least 2,000,000 men for future active service should the need arise.

Contrary to popular belief that a million patriots will spring to arms overnight in defense of our country, all military history proves the fallacy of dependence on our traditional policy of volunteer enlistments. As one American apprehensive for the future security of our country, I call for the prompt enactment of the principle of a selective universal military training program as the only democratic, orderly and speedy method of mobilizing man power for total defense.

With a full realization of the gravity of the world situation, and conscious of the necessity of presenting a united front to the aggressor nations, my opinion is that a vote for selective military training is a vote for America and will guarantee our right to live as free men.

A Boomerang?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Advocates of compulsory military service must secretly admire Hitler and naziism or they would not be so determined to force upon our own country measures and methods that he employs, but which are revolting to all American ideals and traditions.

Draft might better be spelled draught, for its proponents seem hell-bent on ramming this noxious dose down the throats of the majority who are opposed to seeing a military despotism set up here.

If these military-minded autocrats do succeed in their short-sighted policy it is entirely possible that they are fashioning a boomerang.

The present prospects grow increasingly strong that Mr. Hitler's bow will be shot before our own conscript army can be established, but this army can still be used against oppressors at home.

The Russian revolution, which established communism, would not have been possible except for the fact that masses of young men were trained in the use of arms by compulsory military service, and turned them against their own masters.

Technocracy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Technocrats are citizens of this continent. Technocracy is for Asiatics in Asia, Europeans in Europe, and is for America for Americans. Technocracy is opposed to Americans participating in any war of any kind anywhere off this continent. Technocracy contends that no other continent has anything that this continent of North America needs or wants.

In view of this contention, Technocracy states that all of Europe or Asia is not worth the expenditure of the life of a single North American. Technocracy is opposed to the institution on this continent, in any form, of fascism, naziism, communism or tory democracy. Technocracy is therefore opposed to this continent's sending any Americans abroad to attack or defend any or all of these alien defeatisms.

More On Lindbergh

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with much pleasure and profit Felix Morley's article in The Washington Post August 11 discussing Mr. Lindbergh's radio addresses. I agree with him in every word he says and appreciate immensely his having written such a splendid and fair-minded article.

If Lindbergh is a "Fifth Columnist" I am a Fifth Columnist, for I agree with his views as I understand them. And I am just a plain Mississippi dirt farmer. If I know myself, I am interested primarily in America. I cannot understand why one who ventures to speak his opinion that America should be neither pro-British nor pro-German should at once be charged with being pro-Nazi.

Of course, I may be mistaken. But I do know that I am only pro-American so far as I can understand what that term means. I have a son now an ensign in the Navy stationed at Honolulu, and two sons subject to call under the draft bill when and if it passes, as it seems certain to do. To the extent that the draft is intended only to protect America I am inclined to favor the same.

I may be mistaken in my views, but judging by Senator Pepper's sorry effort in the Senate a few days ago, I do not think that I am any more apt to be mistaken than he is. I think his tirade against Lindbergh was one of the cheapest, sorriest, and most uncalled for efforts that I have ever noted from one in his position.

FRED M. BUSH.
Newhebron, Miss., Aug. 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Morley's defense of Col. Lindbergh in The Post of August 11 rests on the sole fact that Lindbergh is "sincere," and that fortunately or unfortunately he has remained consistent with previously professed beliefs.

I believe that Mr. Morley does a disservice to his readers in justifying ideas that are charged with the highest dangers for a democratic society by admiring its proponent personally. Hitler is also, unquestionably, sincere, and one may, in all honesty, suggest that Lindbergh is a good, convinced apologist for the German way of thought without impugning corruption.

On the other hand, one who accepts and retains high honors from a Nazi government, who presumes to correlate Nazi aims and American life, is not merely a potential but an actual danger to our national integrity, although his danger comes in through the back door of "sincerity."

S. L. W.

The Confusion Of Our Times

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There has not been so much emotion and so little attention to facts in regard to present international situations since the Civil War. Persons and groups normally showing signs of intelligence have put themselves out on a limb without even observing whether the limb was sound; many have climbed out and proceeded to saw their only support in half.

If it were not tragic, we might be inclined to laugh at the attitudes of many Americans, but unfortunately we have Ethiopia, Spain, Austria, Norway, Czecho-Slovakia and France in the background. What has happened to these peoples and countries is no laughing matter.

Granted, that conscription may well mean a totalitarian setup in America, the motives of many individuals and organizations opposing conscription can be questioned. Worse, the alliance of groups that have nothing in common but their intention either to keep America out of a European war, or to keep America unprepared to stop an invader, is an indication of the anarchy of thought and action that permeates our economic, political and social life.

We are faced with Irish-American and Italian-American groups, both secular and religious, united with German-American and Protestant-American groups against conscription because of a common hatred of Britain and a common love for Nazi Germany or some form of fascism; we have anti-Fascist radical groups and Christian sects opposed to conscription because they feel that militarism must eventually lead to an end of the democratic way of life in America. We have organized labor and organized business working against conscription for entirely different reasons.

There is no reason to be optimistic about the outcome. We must not forget that England supported the Confederacy and a slave-holding South against the pseudo-democracy of Yankee industrialism. A union of English-speaking peoples as opposed to the totalitarianism of European dictators might not develop into a democratic Utopia. When the State of Massachusetts sent large shipments of grain to Ireland on an American warship during the famine of 1847, the English government had it shut up in warehouses while more than a million people died of starvation.

Motivated by the same selfish desires, we refused food and medical aid to the first Soviet governments in Hungary and Russia, while our treatment of the Negro equals the treatment accorded minorities by the British Empire. Closer to home, American attempts to place the pro-Fascist Almazan at the head of the government of Mexico have been more crude than the infiltration of German tourists into Norway and the Balkans.

Harlan Miller is correct when he pictures our politicians "dancing their adagios on a volcano," but no solution is offered and both parties appear incompetent to alter a dangerous apathy on the part of citizens who are bewildered by the political antics of men trusted with our government and defense.

If an emergency exists, no one should be excused from participation in a defense program because of class, race, marital status, dependents, age or religion. If a country is worth fighting for, any citizen who asks to be excused from its defense is unworthy to be a resident of that fatherland. Equally guilty is a government that attempts to conscript only certain classes for this defense and exempts the wealthy from a dangerous task of protecting their own property. Are we defending America or American profiteers?

The Post Impressionist

The Craftsman

HE CAME to the door, looking for "roofs to mend." He could, he said, repair the most stubborn leaks, even the ones that only show up when the wind drives the rain from a certain direction. He called himself a "roof mender," and that was a new one to me. The ones I know are sheet-metal workers and tinners. Apparently he was a craftsman, like those thatchers and stone masons who pop up in the duller novels of English village life. These craftsmen always appear opportunely, and whenever they knock a hole in a cottage they always discover "fine old chimneys," "fine old mantels," or "fine old ship's timbers from the wreck of the Armada." Thinking about these things, I must have thought that I would be helping the little villages by hiring this "old craftsman." He turned out to be a former WPA worker from Brooklyn.

To digress, the reason we needed a roofer was because of the leak in the roof which caused a large chocolate-colored spot on the wall of the guest room. Most persons in this case would have hung a picture over the spot and let it go, but not so in our house. Some people can (1) hang pictures over the bad places on the walls, (2) put a slip cover on the shabby chair, (3) put scatter-rugs over the ink spots on the floor; but if we try this (1) the guests take the pictures down to be sure they come from the dime store, (2) they say, "You certainly have ruined that chair putting on a slip cover," (3) they trip on the little rugs and expose the ink spots. So we have learned that this slip-shod system is not for us. We do it the hard way.

To digress again—Cousin Julian is coming to visit soon and will occupy the guest room. A word about Julian. He is the kind of person whose own house is done in cream paneling and hung in hand-blocked chintzes. He has little cabinets to hold his collection of Lalique glass, and everything matches or contrasts or blends. In a small way Julian is a patron of the arts. By which I mean that he once encouraged a young Mexican artist by buying from him a picture of (I think) an armadillo, and later everyone went quite wild over the Mexican, proving that Julian was right. But Julian is not really a snob. He just likes beautiful things, and can't learn to shut up about it. It seemed a shame to put him in the room with the spot. Thus we hired the "roof-mender" who was also described as "a quaint character."

The character took a lot of trouble in getting on the roof. To begin with, he had no ladder. A neighbor, however, obliged with a loan. In putting up the ladder, the character leaned it against the porch rail, and thereby knocked down the flower-box in which we were cherishing some shoots of heather, ivy from Mount Vernon, and other roots and herbs. The character finally got up on the roof, but then he could not find the leak. In this he was no different from many others who had preceded him. He descended, looking rather like a drooping walrus, and suggested that it was a crying shame the things a poor man had put over on him. I was surprised because I always thought a difficult job was a kind of spur to a real craftsman. I climbed shakily up the ladder, hoping that two of us could find the elusive leak, but everything up there looked alike to me.

"Maybe, if I had something to eat . . ." the character suggested.

It is painful to go further into this part. During the few hours which he spent in our employ, the character drank two pitchers of lemonade, two of iced tea, one of plain water and several cups of coffee. He ate six hot dogs, three roast beef sandwiches, a pie and a few bananas, but, to be honest, the pie was a small one. No one begrudged him the nourishment, but it kept the family busy cracking ice and making sandwiches, and still the leak did not show up. The prospect of a freshly papered room for Julian faded.

Just as the sun was really getting hot, the character descended. He beamed. Had he found it? He had indeed, and he had repaired it with Potts' Plastic Putty. Once repaired with P. P. P., a roof was as good as new, in fact much better. We could now dismiss from our minds any thought that the leak would ever trouble again. We paid the character, rather generously, for the leak had been an old meany and it was a relief to get rid of it at any price. Then we sent for the paperhanger.

"No use to paper on that leak," he said, looking at the spot.

"Ah, but there is no leak any more."

From his samples we chose a charming powder-blue one. Really, Julian has nothing better. The next day the paperhanger set to work. He is not a very quaint character, but he turns out a good job. The room looked fresh and interesting. Spurred by success, we blew ourselves to a new rug, a shade of blue which "blended" with the wall. It would surely be a relief to Julian to find that we are not entirely void of an interest in decoration.

The room was ready. We closed it like a kind of chest containing precious relics, and we dared each other to mess it up.

Last night it rained, and I went in . . . just to be sure. The same chocolate-colored spot, only worse on the powder-blue background.

When Julian arrives there will be a picture, "Diana at the Pump" or "Lady With Dove," rather queerly placed on a delicate blue wall.

U. S. Note To Nazis

Text Of Message On Refugee Ship

Following is the text of the United States Government's formal note rejecting a German announcement that the government of the Reich is not responsible for the safety of the U. S. Army transport American Legion which sailed from Petsamo, Finland, Friday night with 900 refugees:

The Government of the United States desires first to point out that the course on which it was proposed that the American Legion should sail from Petsamo to New York was indicated to the German government through the American Embassy at Berlin on August 9, together with a statement of the distinguishing characteristics of the ship for her ready identification and a statement that she was scheduled to sail from Petsamo on August 16, in sufficient time for the German government to notify the appropriate German authorities so as to assure the vessel against attack by the German fighting forces.

The United States Government was informed on August 13 that the German foreign office had stated that the appropriate German authorities had been informed of the date of departure, course and description of the American Legion, the understanding being that the vessel would depart on August 16 and, if she should depart at a later date, then the foreign office would again have to be notified three days before the actual departure, since otherwise it would not be possible to give informatory instructions to the appropriate German authorities.

Previous Notes Cited

The German foreign office called attention to its previous communications to the American Embassy on the subject of the American Legion, in which the foreign office had stated that instructions to the German combatant forces with respect to possible action against neutral ships were, in accordance with international rules, and the German prize law codes, limited to merchant ships.

The foreign office had further stated that it was, therefore, out of the question that German forces should stop neutral vessels of war or take any other measures against them and that, in view of those facts there was no occasion, in the opinion of the German government, to give any special assurances with regard to a neutral war vessel. The German government was, however, prepared to notify the German forces for their information in order to avoid confusion with enemy warships that an American war vessel (namely, the American Legion) would travel on a specified course at a specified time.

Still Could Sail on Schedule

Subsequently, and not until the late afternoon of August 14, as reported to the American Government that same day, the foreign office stated that the German air force had pointed out that the proposed course of the American Legion, passing between N. Rona and Cape Wrath, would bring the vessel into the field of dangerous air operations, and that the German authorities, therefore, recommended a more northern route.

Upon inquiry of the foreign office as to how much advance notice of the change of course of the vessel would be required by the foreign office in order that it might effect complete notification of all German combat units the vessel might encounter, the answer was made that if such notice were received by noon, Berlin time, August 15, there would be time to effect proper notification and the vessel could leave petsamo August 16, as scheduled.

Reminded of Assurances

Under instructions of the United States Government, on August 14, the attention of the foreign office was invited to the assurances which it had given that the appropriate German authorities had been duly informed of the date of departure, course and description of the American Legion, and it was asked to stand by its original acceptance of the course of the American Legion.

In reply, Dr. Ritter, of the foreign office, stated that if the American Government insisted on the ship following the proposed course, then the German government had nothing to do but accept the decision, pointing out again the great danger involved. Dr. Ritter also stated that the foreign office had merely agreed to notify the appropriate German authorities for their information of the course and description of the vessel, and that it had never guaranteed the safe conduct of the vessel for assurances of safe conduct could only be given in the cases of merchant vessels and not in the cases of naval vessels, in which category the American Legion falls.

The United States Government considers, in that connection, that Dr. Ritter's statement was hardly in line with the previous communication of the foreign office, referred to above, when the foreign office stated that there was no occasion, in the opinion of the German government, to give any special assurances with regard to a neutral war vessel since it was out of the question that German forces should stop neutral vessels of war or take any other measures against them, and that the German forces would be notified in order to avoid confusion of the American Legion with enemy warships.

No Other Practical Course

Following the United States Government's learning of Dr. Ritter's conversation, and of the American charge d'affaires' communication of the foreign office's note in confirmation of the conversation, the subject of the course to be followed by the American Legion had the serious and protracted consideration of the United States Government.

However, it was determined that no other practical course existed for the vessel to follow than that proposed, the vessel to sail on August 16 as scheduled and already notified to all the belligerent governments. As instructed by his government, the American charge d'affaires informed the German foreign office on August 15 accordingly, and stated that the Government of the United States consequently reverted to its original communication to the German government on the subject and took note of the fact that the German government had brought the voyage of the vessel to the attention of its appropriate agencies.

The United States Government is of the opinion, therefore, that the German government received sufficient advance notice of the sailing of the American Legion from Petsamo on the date scheduled and the course to be followed, to take every precaution against attack on the vessel by the German combat forces.

The German government acknowledged the receipt of this notification prior to the vessel's departure and stated that the appropriate German authorities had been informed of the date of departure, course and description of the vessel.

No Assurances Necessary

The German government did not give assurance of safe conduct for the vessel, but explained that there was no occasion to give any such asurance with regard to the vessel, as it was out of the question that German forces should stop the vessel or take any other measure against her. All the other belligerent governments have given assurace of safe conduct for the vessel for her sailing on the date scheduled and on the course indicated.

The German government now points out that it did not receive final notification of the ship's departure from Petsamo on August 16 until noon of that day, and that the American Embassy at Berlin had been informed that August 15 was the latest date for such notification of the intended route.

However, the stipulation of the German foreign office that it be notified by noon, Berlin time, August 13, with respect to the vessel's course was in reply to the embassy's inquiry as to how much advance notice of the change of course of the vessel would be required by the foreign office. Since no change was made in the course of the vessel, further advance notice became entirely unnecessary.

Germany Is Warned

Stated briefly, the German government has on several occasions during the conversations about the voyage of the American Legion stated that the vessel in question as a public vessel of the United States, actually being a transport of the United States Army, needed no safe conduct from the German government because safe conducts were reserved only for merchant vessels.

The German government having repeatedly made that statement and having stated also that they would notify their armed forces of the route on which it was informed the vessel would proceed and of the date of her departure from Petsamo and of the description of the vessel, and having assured the Government of the United States that it had actually notified its armed forces of the route, date of sailing and description of the American Legion, and in continuing reliance upon the original statements of the German government, the American charge d'affaires is instructed to inform the German government that under the circumstances above related the Government of the United States expects that the vessel will not suffer molestation by any action undertaken by the German armed forces."

Fair Enough

A Rogue Business

IN CONNECTION with the order of the New York police department requiring the proprietors and all employes of night clubs and cabarets to give their fingerprints, I suggest that our business—meaning the newspaper business—has been pretty careless in serving as capper for the kind of joints and personnel that Lewis Valentine, our police commissioner, has in mind. We have publicized and glamourized places which we well knew to be gambling houses, and we have sometimes ballyhooed in gratuitous reading matter as picturesque certain individuals whom we have known to be hoodlums or corruptioneers.

A case in point is a crummy little politico-underworld character who was a bootlegger all through prohibition, who is a lifelong associate of criminals and, in his younger days, was indicted for a gang murder, but let go without the formality of a trial. A few months ago I read one of those whimsical pieces about his picturesqueness in dealing with a bowl of spaghetti—which was quite amusing, to be sure, but which failed to convey a correct impression of his character, which is bad.

IN CHICAGO, during the Democratic Convention, there was another feature story on the same hoodlum which also celebrated his quaintly slangy personality, and again it occurred to that rather captious process which I make so bold as to call my mind that the public was being sold a bill of goods, or, as you might say, shilled, on behalf of a thoroughbred no-good.

Gambling may be right or wrong, morally, but the plain fact is that the law runs dead against it everywhere, except in the State of Nevada, and that, therefore, wherever a gambling house operates more than enough time for the police to find it and kick it in, someone is being bribed. In other words, someone is selling to a criminal, or even an organization of criminals, the right to violate a law.

We shouldn't be a party to any such conditions, but we certainly are when we not only accept part of their profits for advertising and give them news publicity, knowing what goes on.

The fact is that to some extent in New York—but to a less extent here than elsewhere—the underworld has taken over an important phase of the amusement or theatrical industry, or, more correctly, has sucked it into the dumps along with our best spenders, who include, occasionally, some of our best people.

THE POOR HAM who yowls and squawks into the microphone, the droll wags called masters of ceremonies, the little dancing dolls and some really first-class performers who ought to have better presentation, would starve if they had to rely on the stage of vaudeville and musical comedy, because the public insists on pawing at hunks of meat and French-fried potatoes and drinking Scotch or rye while taking its amusement. That would be all right if the saloon or night club business were not, at heart and incorrigibly, a rogue business and infested with criminals of all kinds.

Both the show busines and the newspaper business have become cappers for dumps—some of them very elegant dumps, to be sure—but with playrooms off to one side or off behind, and with hoodlums in command, although the hoodlums sometimes are represented by dummies. The show people, however, can't help themselves, and we can.

The newspaper business doesn't need or, anyway, shouldn't take ads for dumps which we know to be dumps, or whose proprietors we know to be hoodlums. We certainly sound silly yelling "Corruption must go!" on the outside of the same edition that carries paid copy and free feature matter for such traps.

Mike Carrozzo's Successor Named

Chicago, Aug. 18 (INS).—The Street Laborers' Union today unanimously elected Frank Esposito to the presidency made vacant by the recent death of Mike Carrozzo.

Esposito, 40, had been acting as president of the union since Carrozzo's death last month. Anthony Francisco, 39, was elected secretary-treasurer.

Police, who attended the meeting of 1,000 delegates at the union's request, said neither Esposito nor Francisco had police records.

Problem Of Bases

By Barnet Nover

A Vital Aspect Of Defense

THERE HAS been considerable discussion during recent months of the extent of our commitments under the Monroe Doctrine. Some have argued, for instance, that under existing circumstances it would be foolhardy for the United States to plan to defend every part of the hemisphere. It would be wiser and safer, this school insists, to keep our military and naval commitments within narrower limits.

Thus with respect to South America they would have the United States include only that part which is north of the so-called "bulge" of Brazil as within the American defense system. Apparently Argentina, Bolivia, Paraguay, Chile would be left to their own resources and if unable to defend themselves, be allowed to fall a prey to the totalitarian wolves. Hemisphere defense, these individuals say, is a liability which the United States cannot afford to assume.

NOW THERE can be no doubt that in the event of a German triumph involving the destruction or surrender of what was left of the British fleet the problem of defending North and South America against external aggression would be fraught with difficulties. Even if no overt attack were launched by the totalitarian rulers of Europe for some time this hemisphere would live in permanent fear of such invasion. Yet the problem of defense would be enormously more complicated if by default Hitler were permitted a foothold anywhere in the Americas.

At Havana steps were taken to bar the possibility of any cession of colonial territory to any non-American power and a procedure was agreed on which would make it possible for any American republic to act quickly to prevent such a transfer of territory.

But the convention and Act of Havana deal with only one aspect, though it is a vital aspect, of the defense problem. Another aspect is now under consideration in negotiations being undertaken by the United States with Great Britain, on the one hand, and Canada, on the other.

THE NEGOTIATIONS with Great Britain concern the possibility of the acquisition by the United States of naval bases in the British West Indies.

At the present time, in addition to the bases at the Panama Canal, the United States has a naval base at Guantanamo in Cuba and is building another great base in Puerto Rico. But in view of the magnitude of the defense problem we may soon have to face these are not enough.

The establishment of American naval and air bases at such places as Trinidad and Jamaica would considerably increase the range of action of our Navy and air force. Pending the construction of that second fleet for which Congress has appropriated money, but which will not come into being for another five or six years, these bases would have particular usefulness.

IT IS SAID that the West Indian discussions are not being linked with the problem of the destroyers. In other words, Great Britain is not formally demanding that the sale of a certain number of destroyers be made the quid pro quo for the establishment of American bases in Britain's Caribbean possessions. Yet from a realistic point of view the two are linked. For today all questions of American defense center around the fate of Great Britain and the British fleet. If Great Britain survives the present onslaught many of the defense preparations we are making will become unnecessary. If Great Britain goes under the danger we are preparing to face will be upon us. But even if the British fail to hold out, anything that enables them to prolong their resistance must be regarded as a contribution to American defense. The thing we need most is time.

CANADA TODAY is a belligerent. She entered the war voluntarily in defense of the mother country and of the empire and commonwealth of which she is a proud partner. But her destiny is also inextricably intertwined with that of the United States.

The defense of Canada is an American obligation not because of sentimental reasons but on very practical grounds. For with Canada, or even part of Canada, in the hands of an aggressor the most important industrial area of the United States would find itself in an extremely vulnerable situation.

Of course Great Britain may not go under; the British empire may not be destroyed; the British fleet may neither be destroyed nor surrendered. Yet neither the United States nor Canada can afford to gear its defense policies to such optimistic calculations. It is none too soon, therefore, to attempt at least a preliminary coordination of defense efforts. For that reason the Ogdensburg conversations between President Roosevelt and Premier Mackenzie King are fraught with historic significance.

The Once Over

Buying A Race Horse

Dear Ed:

Carrying my studies into the Saratoga Yelling Sales further, I am finding out a lot about how to tell a good horse-race prospect from one that ain't so hot. It seems that first comes the kind of father and mother the gee-gee had, and next comes what is called conformation, which is a long word mening shape. Except in cases of big bulges and lumps, all horses always looked alike to me, but in buying a 1-year-old race horse these Saratoga buyers give a horse such a critical inspection that I think maybe they are hunting for moth holes.

"Is anything missing?" I asks a fellow who is acting like an FBI agent around a little chestnut filly. "I guess not, but I am having my trainer go over her again," he answers me, which gives me the feeling that while the plug has four legs this guy thinks there should be a spare around somewhere.

I find out that a horse has to have good withers, although all my life I do not even know a horse has such things, and that pasterns are important, too, although so far as I am concerned a pastern will be just a preacher in a small church like he always was. He has to have plenty of chest, too, which I find is true of the buyers and trainers, to say nothing of the sellers.

Of course feet are important. A race horse with bad feet is worse than a concert pianist with frozen hands. What I mean is I don't see why the feet at these sales should be looked at so close, on account of it's a fact these skinners are only a year old and have not been around in those places where you get bad feet yet. However, these babies are led out and paraded and inspected so often before somebody buys them that I guess maybe their dogs can go bad, at that, from just too much walking here at the sales.

A fellow explains to me that compactness of body is a good sign when I asks why some guy is bidding $7,800 for a gee-gee that looks to me like he had been raised in a stall too small for him. He tells me that a short horse like this is built for power, but I still favor a longer and leaner one for my dough on account of there being so many photo finishes these days, and the longer a horse is the more space he will cover on the camera plate.

He tells me legs is important on a horse, too, which I know right along, on account of betting on a lot that I found out had been racing for years on only three. All these 1-year-old horses have four legs, but you can't get no guarantee on how long this will be true. Eyes should always be examined closely, too, this expert tells me. I show surprise and ask could a 1-year-old horse have eye trouble so young, and he says often these babies get astigmatism in the sales ring from just the glare from the diamonds worn by the wives of the buyers.

I ask him if ears are important and he says ears don't make no difference as it is a good thing if a race horse can't hear what the public is saying about him. All of which is why I don't buy no more yellings outside of the one I got just because I nodded my head to a friend.

Yours, LUKE TWITCHELL.

Vital To Defense

New Bases In The Atlantic

THE NEGOTIATIONS now under way with Great Britain and Canada are of the utmost importance to the defense of the United States and of our commitments in the Western Hemisphere.

The British are, in effect, offering us what we want for naval and air bases in their possessions in the Western Hemisphere. With Canada, which is not a possession but an independent commonwealth, we must negotiate separately. But in the defense of the northern half of the Western Hemisphere, if Great Britain falls, Canada"s interests and ours are, for practical purposes, identical. Geographically, Canada is immediately in the more vulnerable position, but for us the establishment of a hostile force in Canadian territory would be even more menacing than establishment of one in the Canal Zone area.

Put aside for the moment all political questions and the course of the present negotiations. What do our experts—the men who are engaged professionally in the study of the problem—regard as the British possessions in the Western Hemisphere most essential to us for the defense of the United States and the Western Hemisphere? The three most vital are:

1, Trinidad; 2, Newfoundland; 3, Bermuda.

In the choosing of bases there are two major considerations: geographical location and suitability. An island may be ideally located, but it may lack the harbor which can be converted into a naval base, or the flat areas which can be made into air bases but not be situated geographically at an important strategic point.

For our purposes, Trinidad, Newfoundland and Bermuda, meet, on the whole, both tests.

TRINIDAD, nestling down against the coast of Venezuela, is the most important probably. It offers potential facilities for a naval and seaplane base and flat land for air bases. As a naval base it is not ideal, because the approaching waters are deep and beset with strong currents, which make the harbor difficult to protect against submarine attack. Geographically, however, Trinidad meets the test with flying colors. It stands at the southern entrance to the Caribbean Sea. Linked up with our naval base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, and our air and submarine bases at Puerto Rico, it would immensely reinsure the defense of the Panama Canal against naval or air attack. Secondly, it would extend our radius of effective fleet action several hundred miles farther into the south Atlantic. With naval ships based on Trinidad, we could harass, and perhaps sever, sea communications between Europe and South America. Our air power also would be projected as much farther.

Trinidad would serve also as a naval and aerial stepping stone to Brazil, where, by negotiation, we may acquire the use of naval and air bases. Our "flying fortresses" can make the jump from Puerto Rico to the Canal Zone to Brazilian airports. But the escorts of fighter planes will need intermediate refueling points. Trinidad could provide such facilities.

At the northern end of our main Atlantic defense line lies Newfoundland, a British Crown Colony. It protects the northern approach to Canada, New England, and the Middle Atlantic States, either by sea or by air, via Iceland and Greenland. There is an airport at Botsford and a small naval station at St. Johns. In southeastern Newfoundland there are at least two or three good potential naval bases, plus plenty of room for air bases. Airplane, destroyer, and submarine bases on Newfoundland could make it hazardous for an enemy to attempt a raid on the northeastern United States.

BERMUDA is important as a central outpost. With destroyers, submarines, and seaplanes based on Newfoundland, Bermuda, Puerto Rico and Trinidad, we could keep a fairly effective watch over the approaches to North and Central America on the Atlantic side.

If we had bases in Newfoundland, then Halifax, Nova Scotia, would be valuable chiefly as an aerial stepping stone and naval patrol station. If we had the right to establish air and naval bases in Trinidad and Bermuda, the other southerly British possessions—the Bahamas and some of the Leeward and Windward Islands—would be useful chiefly for patrol purposes.

Going east, the next strategic area for our defense, if Great Britain goes down, is the western bulge of Africa. For naval purposes it would be most desirable to have a base at Freetown, Sierra Leon, (a British possession), or Bissao, Portuguese Guinea, or Dakar, Senegal (French). All three are suitable for naval and air bases. From any of them we could prevent a hostile force from approaching South America or the Caribbean, and could intercept—on the return journey at least—naval movements from Europe to North America.

The Azores, the Canaries, and the Cape Verde Islands are strategically located geographically, but by topography not well suited for major naval or air bases.

Politically, Africa is outside the zone of immediate interest of the United States. Strategically, it is not. Although it must rest in the back of the heads of those who think in terms of naval and air power, it can be assumed that an African base does not enter into current negotiations.

AT PRESENT there is no thought of the cession of territory. The plan is, rather, to lease specific small areas for naval and air purposes. If the British should surrender or otherise fall under German domination, we would act, in collaboration with the Latin American republics and perhaps also with Canada, to occupy in whole their Western Hemisphere possessions as trustees, in accordance with the Declaration and Act of Havana.

The British are presenting their proposals, with the full knowledge that these Western Hemisphere bases will become of importance to us only if Great Britain falls. What they want most from us, in return, is almost the only additional aid we can give immediately to prevent Great Britain from falling—and therefore to make these bases unnecessary to us. They want destroyers. If we had a surplus of military airplanes they would want those. But they know that we do not have them. Although the President said that the negotiations concerning bases and those concerning destroyers are separate, destroyers and small torpedo craft are what the British want most and, if they survive the next two weeks or so of attrition in the air, may need most.

Without a quid pro quo the release of 50 or so overage destroyers to Great Britain might be most useful to our national defense. Certainly it would be so if Great Britain is not collapsed by aerial attack. If, by such an arrangement, we could get a running start on the preparation of bases for the defense of the Western Hemisphere, in the event the British do go down, the deal, from our viewpoint, would be doubly or trebly beneficial.

Tank Troops Drill With Dump Trucks

DummyMachineGuns Also Being Used At War Games

By Marshall Andrews.
Post Staff Writer

Rensselaer Falls, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Down here with the Twenty-ninth Division Special Troops is an outfit which inherited one of the bluntest traditions of the World War: "Treat 'Em Rough."

The Twenty-ninth Tank Company, from Danville, Va., has been busy during maneuvers proving it can hand it out and can take it as well. At best, the tanks are a service that punishes everybody who comes in contact with them; the men behind the guns as well as the men in front of them.

When you ride in a tank attack the first time you are surprised chiefly by the unexpectedly smooth ride you get over roads that would beat you silly in an automobile. Over fields and ditches and rocky land that would stop an automobile in its tracks, the tank is another proposition; it gets you through, but it gives you a pummeling like nothing you ever imagined. It whips you out of control, it tosses you where it wants you to go, and you can do nothing about it. It beats you up, kicks you around, slaps you down and steps on you.

It's One Big Surprise

Suppose you are going along in one of those smashing lightning attacks the tanks are designed to deliver. You find the Twenty-ninth up a rutted dismal road, pulled across the ditch, its vehicles covered with branches torn from nearby trees.

The column may surprise you if you are not already accustomed to the way things are being done in this hypothetical war.

It is split into two platoons, each led by a light tank armed with two machine guns and propelled by a radial aircraft engine. The rest of the column would be ridiculous if it were not a tragic commentary on a state of affairs which compels men who have volunteered in their Nation's defense to train for battle with impromptu makeshift tools. Other than the two tanks, the column is composed of ten dump trucks, each labeled "Light Tank—29th Tank Co."

Each of the trucks is armed with two "machine guns;" a length of stovewood lashed vertically to the sides of the truck bed. The men regard these makeshifts ruefully, but when the time comes for action they tear in with all the enthusiasm of the best equipped regular, leaping ditches with their trucks and aiming their stovewood machine guns as if the fate of a nation depended on their doing it right.

Worse Than Tanks

And when it is all over, they come back, bruised and battered and tell you about it.

"Those trucks," they say, "give you a worse beating than the tanks."

Suppose you are going along on one of those attacks. Capt. Bill Bailey, who is a veteran of the old Tank Corps of the World War, turns you over to Capt. N. A. Rhodes, of Pittsburgh, Pa., a reserve officer on active duty with the company.

"When I came here," Rhodes confides, "I thought I would just go along as an observer. Do you know what Bailey did? He took over administration and put me in command in the field. He thinks up the problems and I work them out."

Then he shows you a map. There is a long winding country road with a penciled cross marking the present position of the tanks at one end, and at the other a cross-roads. From this cross-roads another lane leads out to a highway.

"We come down here," says Rhodes, following the map with his pencil, "turn right at this intersection and come out on the highway here. There's an Infantry attack bogged down there by a road block and we're coming in behind the block to clear it out. Okay?"

It's Quieter Inside

So they put you in the right seat of a tank, alongside Private First Class Raleigh S. Boaz, of Danville, who drives the monster. They give you a great crash helmet and a pair of goggles and shout a few orders and you notice it is quieter inside the tank than outside.

The column moves off down the road, your platoon led by your tank 250 yards behind the last truck in the first platoon. Boaz steers with two levers, clutches with two clutches and shifts gears with a lever under his right shoulder. The tank gets under way with a great creaking and thunder of exhaust and roars through four gear changes. The road is a succession of gullies and rocky hummocks which make you catch your breath each time your tank reaches for one of them. It rolls over rapidly, bobbing its nose and taking up the shock with a cushioning effect you can definitely feel.

You find the goggles useful. The treads throw up a swirl of dust, and small stones in front of the steel monsters pelt you endlessly. The tank rounds an abrupt bend and just ahead is the rear truck of the first platoon, its sign glaringly white.

Driver Has Real Job

Boaz is terrifically busy for a few seconds and the tank suddenly slows. He yells in your ear and his voice comes thin as watered milk.

"Talk about a job," says Boaz, "you ought to try to double clutch one of these babies slowing down."

For three miles your tank clatters along in the column, slowing around curves you think it is going to miss, taking ditches with terrific bounds that leave you breathless, climbing abrupt rises and dropping over the crest to plunge down the other side. The innards of your tank are hot and its steel sides caress you ungently. It is very confusing and noisy and jumbled up to anyone not accustomed to such activity.

Suddenly your column debouches on the highway and you find the first platoon there, its tank and trucks lined up, the men aiming their stovepipe machine guns and yelling bloody murder. The attack has succeeded.

"They're a hard-working bunch of boys," says Capt. Bailey. "It's too bad we can't give them some tanks and guns to train with."

YOUTH REGIMENTATION—Ever since his rise to power, Hitler has taken youngsters—10 to 18 years—from their homes, mobilized them into small armies, and drenched them in the Nazi philosophy of obedience to their leaders, military and physical fitness and hatred of other races. Like these, they are enrolled in the Jung Volk, Hitler Jung or Bund Deutscher Maedel organizations, under Little Fuehrer Baldur von Schirach

German Training of Youth Proves a Powerful Weapon

By Wade Werner
Associated Press Staff Writer

At least one of Adolf Hitler's most powerful weapons is no "secret weapon"—in fact, it has been widely publicized for years:

It is his organization of the nation's youth.

In the rough outline the system of youth-training which has been so successful in Germany is this:

Nazi organizations such as the Jung Volk (Young Folk), Hitler Jugend (Hitler Youth) and Bund Deutscher Maedel (League of German Girls) take in hand German youngsters from the age of 10 to 18.

Enrollment of the 10-year-olds is voluntary, but the result of Nazi high-pressure recruiting methods is that practically every eligible youngster joins. Jewish children, of course, are not eligible.

In the Young Folk organization these recruits get plenty of Nazi propaganda (important from the point of view of the party) and a sound physical training (extremely important for the army).

In addition to the all-around physical training, they are encouraged to get enthusiastic about such sports as glider-flying, model airplane building, marksmanship, and the elemental principles of seamanship. They wear scout-like uniforms, go on long hikes and learn to live in the open air.

When they are 14, the best of these Young Folk scouts are taken into the Hitler Youth. Here they get a more serious training in such fields as glider-flying, marksmanship and military topography. If they show aptitude for mechanics they get further instruction in operation and repair of automotive vehicles and a chance to find out something about tanks, warplanes and antiaircraft guns.

During all this time, a sort of selective draft has been picking the most likely youngsters for political and military leadership. Those recommended for special training are admitted to "Adolf Hitler Schools," and if they measure up to the stringent requirements of these they can qualify, at the age of 18, for matriculation at an "ordensburg," which is a sort of university for Nazi leaders.

First, however, they must serve their year in the labor battalions and their two years in the army. The ordensburg is an imposing establishment, something between a medieval castle and a university. The students pass from one "burg" to another, getting a year or six months' instruction in each, and theoretically should be full-fledged graduate "leaders" at the age of 29.

The war upset many schedules, of course, and no doubt thousands of "future leaders" who ordinarily would be completing their training in an ordensburg have already died in France and other countries, or are preparing to play their part in the invasion of Britain.

Some of the things taught at these institutes of leadership, however, indicate what stress is placed on athletic preparation for the hazardous tasks of war. One "burg" emphasizes sharp-shooting, equestrian sports, light athletics and flying; another insists on proficiency in skiing and mountain climbing.

Tests of courage and leadership weed out all but the fearless. A sample test:

A student at Burg Vogelsang in western Germany gets an order to report at once to such-and-such airport—just that and nothing more. After he gets there he is ordered into a plane, first strapping on the customary parachute. At 5,000 feet he gets another order, "Jump!" If he hesitates, he's through.

Paraguay's New Constitution Goes Into Effect This Week

Is First National Charter in History To Combine Democracy and Dictatorship; Unicameral Congress Is Provided

By Herbert M. Clark
Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Asuncion, Aug. 17.—Paraguay settles down to life this week under a new—some say model—constitution which promises to end a dozen years of national storm. It is, incidentally, probably the first national charter in history to combine democracy and dictatorship.

This country plunged into warfare with Bolivia late in 1928, when the century-old dispute over the Chaco flared. Emerging to peace in January, 1936, it immediately slipped into a series of internal clashes. A revolt overthrew President Eusebio Ayala a month after the armistice, establishing Col. Rafael Franco as dictator of an openly totalitarian state. He lasted until August, 1937, when a military junta set Felix Paiva up as president. Paiva ruled until an election in 1938 chose Gen. Jose Felix Estigarribia, commander of the army which defeated Bolivia and a prisoner under Franco, as constitutional president.

Constitutional reform came into conversation with Paiva, and Estigarribia has pressed toward it ever since he assumed office. Finally, on July 10, the draft was ready for presentation to the country. It was approved on August 4 by a plebiscite which, if not as wildly unanimous as those Hitler used to stage, was still favorable by the vote of 94 per cent of the electorate.

The new document enters into effect on the first anniversary of the inauguration of Estigarribia and, surprisingly for hand-made constitutions (witness Brazil, where Vargas' charter has not been submitted to the people after nearly three years) it does not extend the term of the president. It specifically states that Estigarribia's mandate expires on August 15, 1943, the date on which he would have been replaced under the old charter, in force since 1870. The new constitution also says there can be no further complete change in charter for 10 years. Those two facts indicate what is, in any case, generally admitted: that Estigarribia's hold on the country is strong.

In his communique accompanying publication of the new charter and in the message which was hammered into the ears of the people by president, cabinet members and national leaders in the 25-day campaign between publication and plebiscite, President Estigarribia stressed that the constitution "did not tend toward creation of a totalitarian state, but toward the perfecting of a democratic regime." That seems a fair enough estimate of the new document, especially in light of the presidential admission that the constitution gives the executive branch of the government wide powers, and the presidential claim that those powers are "strong but not despotic."

It is worth pointing out that the charter expressly forbids the congress to grant to the president powers in excess of those expressly delegated by the charter. Those are potent: the president may at any time issue decrees having legal force, the only check being that he must submit them to congress for approval—"later."

Life on Naval Mosquito Boat Not Exactly a Bed of Roses

Crew Takes Terrific Beating and Pounding In New Motor Torpedo Ships That Can Hit 60 M.P.H.; Men Forced to Drink Meals

(Editor's note: The tiny, high-speed torpedo boat has become a new weapon of naval warfare in the service of the British, German and Italian navies. The United States Navy, too, is experimenting with this new kind of boat. Here is a report on life aboard one of these new craft.)

By William Pinkerton
Associated Press Staff Writer

The tanned commander of the American Navy's newest squadron calls his three trim vessels "distinctly a sandwich navy."

Pounding through the seas as fast as 60 miles an hour, the eight men aboard one of the new motor torpedo boats "eat all their food in their hands."

Vibration of the boat—which looks like an oversize speedboat—prevents the cook from setting up a mess table. If "soup's on," the men drink it out of coffee cups.

"The sea that's running determines how you eat," explained Lieut. Earl S. Caldwell.

Crews Take Beating

A terrific pounding and beating is the crew's major complaint against the boats, which have been making experimental runs to determine their usefulness for American defense.

Under way, the one officer and seven or eight men who handle each torpedo boat hold continually to the grabrails to steady themselves in their battle stations.

There's a small deck atop each ship, but nobody ventures there when the ships are under way. Wind and waves would throw him into the sea. Instead, he passes back and forth when necessary through the roomy quarters and workrooms below deck.

To sleep at sea, the sailor straps himself into his bunk with safety belts. The bunks are broad and well mattressed, but the constant pounding doesn't stop when a man goes to bed.

The result is fatigue—"but everybody can take it all right," the commander reported.

Senators who have ridden the little vessels say they may ask extra pay for the crews—the pay-and-a-half which Britain gives its motor torpedo boat crews.

"Teamwork" is the keynote aboard the new vessels. The officer lives close to his men and the formality of battleships and destroyers goes by the board.

All the crew members are experts—specialists in torpedo work, gunnery or mechanics. At sea, they wear the blue jeans and work shirts of the new Navy.

Lieut. Caldwell commands the squadron, whose insignia is a mosquito in a sailor hat riding a flying torpedo.

The boats are said to have one-half the hitting power of the much larger destroyer, but Navy men are withholding judgment until their capabilities and limitations have been tested. The demands of America's "high seas" Navy differ from those of the Italians in the Mediterranean and those of the British in the Channel.

A Message to Mothers about the New Milk that is especially fine for growing children

In recent weeks Lucerne Grade A Milk has become the most talked about milk in town. Many who formerly got their milk in bottles now buy Lucerne a more convenient way . . . in the "one-trip" container.

Some may have tried Lucerne Grade A because of its convenience and economy. But what keeps folks buying Lucerne is the excellence of this fine milk itself. Here are the facts on Lucerne quality:

1 HOW DOES LUCERNE COMPARE WITH OTHER MILKS IN QUALITY?

All brands of milk sold here are tested regularly. These tests show you cannot buy any Grade A Milk of standard price that is finer than Lucerne.

2 HOW FRESH IS LUCERNE MILK WHEN I BUY IT?

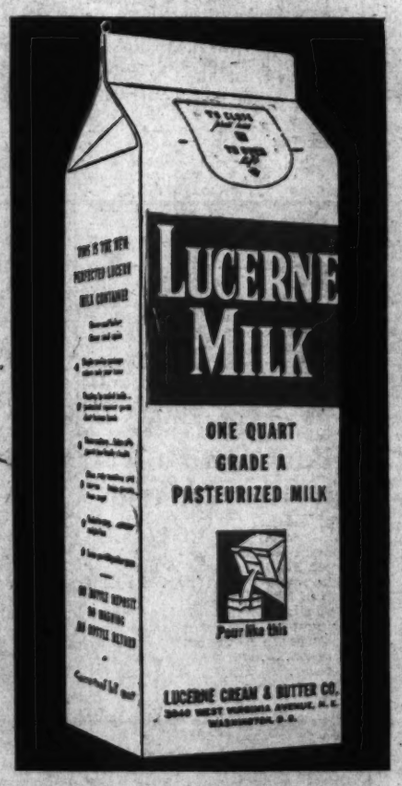
Lucerne freshness is safeguarded in four ways: (1) Lucerne is rushed here daily by high-speed trucks. (2) It is pasteurized and packed on scientific rapid schedules under constant temperature control. (3) Store delivery trucks are insulated and refrigerated. (4) It is sold under store conditions ideal for freshness, maintained by rigid temperature control and sanitary inspection.

3 WHAT IS THE SOURCE OF LUCERNE MILK?

Lucerne Grade A comes from nearby Maryland and Virginia farms that are approved by the District of Columbia Health Authorities. To receive this approval the barns, herds and milk from these farms must pass a rigid inspection and meet the high standards of cleanliness and purity established by the health authorities for your protection. Lucerne dairy experts picked these farms from among many. They are models of cleanliness and efficient dairy practice.

4 HOW PURE IS LUCERNE MILK?

All milk sold here is pure and wholesome. Health Department tests make sure of this. According to the purity and quality standards of this city, Lucerne Grade A Milk is unsurpassed.



5 HOW RICH IS LUCERNE MILK?

Milk richness is determined by butterfat content. Lucerne is always kept higher in butterfat content than the law requires for Grade A Milk. So rich you can use ¼ of each quart as cream.

6 DOES LUCERNE MILK KEEP FRESH IN THE "ONE-TRIP" CONTAINER?

Tests show that milk keeps fresh as long or longer in the new "one-trip" container than in a glass bottle.

7 NOW WHAT ABOUT THE TASTE OF LUCERNE MILK?

Fresh and creamy . . . Lucerne has a delightful flavor. New container imparts no taste or odor. The most experienced milk taster cannot tell whether any given glass of Lucerne has come from a "one-trip" container or from a bottle.

8 WHY DOES LUCERNE MILK COST LESS PER QUART?

Lucerne is sold at your grocery store where it shares a single distributing cost with many other foods. You save the home-delivery charge on every quart of Lucerne.

HAVE you tried Lucerne? Get a quart or two at your SANITARY Food Store. Everyone will like the grand, creamy flavor of this milk that is especially fine for growing children. And you'll enjoy the convenience of the "one-trip" container that ends bottle bothers. It means no bottle deposits—no bottle washing or returns. It saves refrigerator space at home. You will find this modern container a better way to buy milk.

Movie Craze Sweeps Old Albemarle As 'Virginia' Filming Progresses

THE OLD GYM won't seem the same to students at St. Anne's School in Charlottesville, Va. When the girls get back to school this fall they'll learn that their basketball court has played host to glamorous Madeleine Carroll in their absence. A bedroom set was constructed in it during the filming of "Virginia," the Paramount picture which has turned all Albemarle County topsy-turvy.

An ironical sidelight on the ante-bellum and early Victorian furnishings of the room is that they're all genuine antiques, unearthed, not in the historic Southland, but in Hollywood. Four-poster tester bed, heavy paneled doors and marble mantelpiece were shipped from California to Virginia.

When word spread that a number of Charlottesville people would be cast in one of the scenes, even the more blase residents made discreet inquiries as to how one made the grade. Here's how one girl did it. With dozens of other spectators, she was following the actors in her car from one location to another and offered a lift to a pedestrian.

The car was crowded, so he stood on the running board, whence he was thrown violently when they lurched over a bump. He lay so still that she was terrified, but finally he caught his breath, shook off some Virginia dust and announced that he was unhurt. She found later that the man she thought she had killed was the head cameraman; he remembered her, and now she's in the movies—at least as a dot on the horizon.

Caroline Lee, the 5-year-old child who plays in the picture, is the only member of the cast who can say truthfully that an actress leads a luxurious life. When she had to move as far as 100 yards to another part of the set, she was carried so as to prevent fatigue. When she felt tired, she could relax in her "nursery"—an army cot with a mosquito netting canopy which followed her around all day.

GROWTH OF A LEGEND—Fred MacMurray, who plays opposite Miss Carroll, borrowed a car one evening and took two members of the company for a drive. En route they stopped at a roadside stand and drank 20 cents' worth of beer and soda pop, for which they paid the counter man. Before driving off, MacMurray had the car filled with gas and handed the attendant a $20 bill. He counted the change, then pointed out he still had 20 cents coming to him as the drinks already had been paid for. The attendant apologized and rectified the error.

The next day, on location, MacMurray was introduced to a man who, it developed, knew a fellow who knew a fellow who had been in the store when the incident happened. "Great stuff, Fred," he said, "handing that guy a $20 bill and telling him to keep the change."

A local belle met one of the "Virginia" directors and felt pretty flattered when he asked her out to dinner. At the end of the evening he thanked her for the date. "It's refreshing," he added, in what was intended to be a complimentary close, "to go out with someone who's not a glamor girl."

Wedges Lose Popularity In Fall Shoes

Pump, Oxford Styles In Black Suede Gain Most Favor

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

WHAT will your first fall shoe be?

Will it be a pump, a glove fitting oxford, a tie, a sandal or a wedge?

You could choose any of these styles and be in the height of fashion for these are the big five of the new season, listed in the order of their importance. You won't go wrong on any or all since their styles have been tried and proved for many years—that is, of course, excluding the wedge. This shoe with its climactic rise during the last year has had as sudden a loss of popularity, with the exception of about 15 per cent of certain shops' customers who still want wedges.

Possibly the sudden and unexpected acceptance of the wedge was the cause of the overwhelming response already being accorded the time-honored pump and oxford in their fall guise of black suede. Within the past few weeks, returning vacationers have hied right into town to buy their first fall footwear and usually ask for one thing in common—"a classic shoe."

Black Shoe Preferred

Some merchants report the preference for black suede as about 75 per cent. Others put it as high as 90 per cent, the other requests being for brown, drab green and wine suede, calf, or reptile. It seems, with the exception of those 15 per cent wedge hounds, that greatest interest has been shown in the old-fashioned high heeled pump, opera style, with a high French heel or a 3-inch barrel "keg" heel which tapers down to sleek thinness at the base.

The "wood chopper" or "furniture" pump heel seems to be fading in popularity after a quick rise to fame this summer. This drop is probably due to cheap imitations of the original beautifully carved walnut and mahogany heels. However, the better versions still seem to attract some of the younger element who still like to tap on wood.

Glove Fitting Variety

Most oxfords being bought are in the old-fashioned trim, tailored school designed as ties with just a suspicion of an open toe, a 2 or 3-inch heel and often elaborately perforated. The newest versions of this classic are in the glove fitting variety, that is oxford shaped, and styled as such but with a strap or insertion of lastex replacing the lacing.

Another old favorite returned for fall by popular demand is the one-strap sandal, lovely with detailed stitching or cut out workmanship. It is ultra smart looking with spiral strap of elasticized faille wrapping round the ankle.

The touch of faille is often seen on dressy fall shoes in the form of tailored bows, piping, ruffled flutings and shirred inserts. This is just another revival from a few years ago before such oddities as the cantilever heel and the peripshere wedge entered the fashion scene to confound and confuse the footwork industry.

Beauty Gifts

FORGET-ME-NOTS bring to mind the tiny wreath that adorned your go-to-meeting bonnet at the tender age of 12, and Longfellow's lovely metaphor, "blossoms the lovely stars, the forget-me-nots of the angels." This minute flower with its appealing fragrance has now been caught in a bright and sprightly cologne that will be prized by every woman who wants him to "forget her not."

With girls soon taking off for colleges or to new jobs, this cologne will make an appropriate gift. It is moderately priced and may be bought at almost any beauty counter.

The wistaria, too, has given rise to its reflection of color in bonnets, veils, dresses and hose. Since this flower emphasizes women's femininity, with its delicate fragrance, one perfumer has used it as the theme for a cau florale concentree, as well as for a dusting powder and talcum powder. The dusting powder box is of generous content and boasts a big, fluffy puff. The wistaria design used on the box will make it an addition to any dressing table or bath ensemble.

It has a most unusual closure, for as you lift the large purple button, through which a ribbon slides, the box lid can be removed. When the lid is replaced and the button is slid down again the box is firmly enclosed.

Shy Girl in Late Twenties Asks How to Win Man's Romantic Interest Without Seeming to Chase Him

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a female—and a spinster—in my late twenties, who has never run after a man because (a) I don't approve of the idea and (b) I wouldn't know how to do it with even minimum finesse. Several factors contribute to this negative attitude. For one thing, I have always been large—which made me terribly self-conscious during high school and college years. I was friendly with boys, yes; but had few dates and none of that giggly puppy love that might have afforded good practice material.

Also, I have brothers who, with their men friends, have bluntly discussed gals and their shortcomings in my presence for years. So, for one reason and another, I have formed the habit of bending over backward to let men make any advances that are made. I know nothing of the technique of "geting your man."

I have an interesting profession, in which I have had some success, but my masculine acquaintances in that field are mostly the type that my family calls "freaks"—namely, artists, writers, actors and musicians. All talented, all likeable, but none in whom I could take more than a professional interest.

Now I have met,—or, rather, have re-met,—a man I admire tremendously and whom I would like to attract, if I have any latent ability to charm. I met him first six years ago, when he came as a guest speaker to our mutual alma mater. He is 20 years older than I, a bachelor and an eminently successful business man. Our respective jobs took us to different parts of the country, but he initiated a casual correspondence, punctuated with the gift of an occasional book or picture he thought I might enjoy.

Last year he spent a brief vacation in the city where I was then working and we had several right exciting excursions. Now, it develops that I am to be located, perhaps permanently, in his part of the world. We shall be living in towns not far apart. Recently I telephoned him, while driving through his town. This was his first knowledge of my transfer, and he seemed glad to hear the news.

He insisted on our lunching together and later took me to see his place of business,—something he does for few persons, as I happen to know. He rapidly outlined things we must see and do together and offered his services in helping me get settled. In short, he seemed eager to develop what friendship we had previously begun.

As soon as I was established, I sent him a note (which he had asked me to do) giving my address. That was a month ago. And here's the puzzler: I haven't heard a word from him since. And, frankly, I don't want to let the acquaintanceship go by default. Is there anything else I can do, or should do? Or must I just await natural developments? Immediate suggestions will be gratefully received. Sincerely,

VIRGINIA.

There Are No Rules; Intuition Must Guide

DEAR VIRGINIA: So far as I have observed, there are no established, inflexible "do's" and "don'ts" in the game of finessing a man into thinking he is doing the pursuing, when in actuality he is being pursued. The proverb which says, "What is one man's meat is another man's poison," probably explains it.

Such women as I have seen, who got their man by giving the impression of running away from him while actually running after, were indestructibly poised and inexhaustibly resourceful in the matter of inventing maneuvers and strategems on the spur of the moment. They made their own rules as they went along, varying their tactics according to the needs and opportunities of the immediate occasion. Which implies that they had a natural aptitude—as we say, "a gift"—for the chase, just as some women are so-called "born" housekeepers, or mothers, or executives, or artists, reformers, mathematicians, etc.

I think the distinguishing characteristic of the successfully predatory lady is her bland conviction that she is "a man's woman;" that she is pastmistress of the art of pleasing men, and that any man she admires would be bound to like her enormously, if and when made sufficiently acquainted with her virtues and blandishments. In other words, she isn't troubled or inhibited by any supposition that she is undesirable in the eyes of men; and even an occasional rebuff at the hands of men who see through her campaigning and want none of it, leaves her essentially unperturbed. She chalks it up to the law-of-averages, working against her in the given instance, and cheerfully looks around for other quarry.

A born huntress would, I imagine, have seized on this man's offer to be helpful about getting settled, and used it in such a way as to have convinced him—by the time she was established—that he was the world's eighth wonder of wisdom, foresight and efficiency, and that it was sheer pleasure to watch him cracking the whip over Life.

As he "rapidly outlined the things she and he must do together," (at some unspecified future time), she would have said (either eagerly or matter of factly, according to her temperament) that this or that suggestion was something she had been wanting to do for ages, and by all means let's do it, etc. She might have said, for instance, "I'm going to take you up on that Museum visit. You know a lot about anthropology, don't you? It would be a real education to go there with you. It's one of the first things I want to do after I'm moved in." She would have negotiated a tentative future date before they had said today's goodbys.

You see, it's a matter of being alert to your cues as they crop up. You can't afford to wait until the man has faded from the landscape and then concoct point-blank subpenas for getting him back. The way your situation stands at the moment, I don't think there is a single plausible further initiating move you can make in the man's direction, without seeming alarmingly overeager. But I also think you will hear from him again, eventually, when the chilling implication of your wheedling little note has faded from his mind. And the next time you've with him, be a lot more alive to the possibilities of the present moment.

If you show that you enjoy yourself thoroughly with him, and make it possible for him to have an equally good time, while keying the interchange to an essentially comradely level—you can be absolutely candid about wanting to see him again, or about looking forward to going here or there in his company (if convenient to him), and he will be more apt than not to fall in with your plans.

Choose Your Food—Choose Your Weight

Adjustment of Eating Habits Can Solve Problems of Weight

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU CARRY excess pounds, it's as obvious as a sandwich man's advertisement that you eat too much. You may contend that you gain weight on less food than a lot of other people. Nevertheless, you eat too much for your needs—otherwise, you would not have any excess fat!

It may be true that your constitution is such you take on weight easily. An even temper, an easy-going attitude toward life and your disinterest in exercise all cut down on your energy expenditure. Naturally, you do not use as many calories per pound of body weight as the energetic or the excitable, highly-geared individuals. And unless your calorie intake is gauged accordingly, you put on weight.

Needn't Be a Heavy Eater

You will either have to change your temperament or do something about your food habits. Nobody is saying that you are a heavy eater. But it is possible to get an astonishing number of calories in a very modest portion of food when the wrong food is chosen. On the other hand, it is possible to get food in satisfying quantities by making a careful selection.

The daily choice of food is the final, deciding factor in weight. The normal weight's choice of foods approximately balances the energy expenditure.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Every Man's Summer Credo

That it's very odd women should complain so much about the heat considering how few clothes they wear—not to mention their lack of collars, neckties and coats.

That it would be a lot better for everyone's health if wives would quit thinking up cold plate and salad menus and dainty little hot weather surprises and just go back to fixing steak and fried potatoes.

That working in the yard on Saturday afternoon doesn't provide nearly as valuable exercise as following a golf ball over the links.

That all the neighbors' children and dogs use his back yard as a community center and only go home to sleep.

That nine-tenths of the women in bathing suits and play outfits are wearing them merely to show off their figures.

That about one woman in 1,000 really looks good in a bathing suit, but that most men put up a fairly presentable appearance.

That there's no news in summer in the papers (despite the daily banner headlines on Europe.)

That every marital dispute in which he engages is caused by the heat getting on his wife's nerves.

That women always get up picnics just to avoid cooking meals and that making sandwiches, potato salad and deviled eggs is just one big kitchen lark.

That all the other motorists on the highway on a hot Sunday afternoon should have sense enough to stay home where they belonged.

That the friendly looking blonde who rides his bus every morning has been regarding him a little more speculatively since his family left town.

That women can certainly appear on the streets on hot days in some queer looking get-ups. (And who does not agree with him?)

That not 10 per cent of the women who go to the baseball games know what the game is about.

That every woman his wife knows is having trouble with her permanent. (And why in heck do they have 'em anyway if they make such a problem?)

That some time some summer when he doesn't have to drive the family to see the relatives, or take them to the World's Fair, or spend his week-ends with them at the beach, he is going off somewhere all alone or maybe with a few rough everyday pals to some mountain stream or sequestered lake and sit on the bank and fish—or maybe just "set."

Peach Pudding a Crisp, Sweet and Fruity Delectable

IT IS "open season" for fresh peaches. Enjoy the market's abundance by serving sliced peaches with cream and sugar, and generous slices of white cake. Place peaches between halves or split biscuits and top with whipped cream for shortcake. Serve them up in a cobbler or pie.

Another peach dessert, Peach Crisp Pudding, is first cousin to brown betty. Bread cubes make it crisp; sugar makes it sweet; and peaches make it fruity. Bake this golden pudding in individual baking dishes for attractive servings. Here is the recipe for the peach pudding.

Peach Crisp Pudding

Cream ¼ cup butter with ½ cup sugar. Add 4 cups bread cubes, about 5 slices, to sugar mixture and blend well. Mix 2 cups diced fresh peaches and 1 tablespoon lemon juice with the bread. Pour into greased individual baking dishes and bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees for 35 minutes. Garnish with peaches, and whipped cream, if desired. Serve hot. Yield, six servings.

Peach Dumplings are a warming, old-fashioned dessert for cool days. Fasten pastry around each sugar-sprinkled peach half, forming a triangle, and bake on a cookie sheet. The nuts, cinnamon and peach juice in the following recipe blend into a luscious sauce.

Peach Dumplings

Sift 2 cups sifted soft wheat flour with 1 teaspoon salt, and 2 teaspoons baking powder. Cut or rub in ¼ cup shortening. Add ½ cup milk to make soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board and roll ⅛ inch thick. Cut into 3-inch squares. Cut each square diagonally, forming 2 triangles. Mix 4 tablespoons sugar, 2 tablespoons chopped nuts and ¼ teaspoon cinnamon together. Place peach half on triangle, sprinkle with sugar mixture and dot with butter. Top with other peach half and add 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Pull the 3 corners of dumpling up over peach and seal. Bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees about 30 minutes. Serve hot or cold with cream. Yield, about 10 3-inch dumplings.

Marine Reserves Off for Camp . . .

Two-Week Training Ahead For Reserves at Lakehurst

To the strains of "God Bless America," and the Marine hymn, the Fifth Battalion, Marine Corps Reserve, marched to Union Station yesterday morning and rode out of Washington.

They were on their way to the Naval Training Station at Lakehurst, N. J., for a tour of field duty. And they left behind them some who said a fond farewell at the barracks, Sixth street and Indiana avenue northwest, and some who got no chance to say good-by at all. The latter had planned to send off their menfolk at the station, but the movement of troops was so swift, once it got under way, that there was no time there for personal greetings.

Most of those who left forsook private business for the duration of the tour, but some took leave also of public business. Among the officers was one legislator, and the son of another. Representative Philip C. Ferguson (Democrat), of Oklahoma, was attached in his rank of captain, and the son of Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Virginia, First Lieut. Clifford A. Woodrum, was in the detachment.

"We are ready for duty," said Lieut. Col. Harvey L. Miller, commanding, "and this year, more than ever, we will endeavor to show that this battalion is fitted to conform to the high standards of the Marine Corps whenever it is seen fit to call upon us."

Precision with which the preparations at the barracks, and the movement to the station, where the battalion left promptly at 10 a. m., were carried out, illustrated the accuracy of his boast.

The throngs of friends and relatives who gathered at the barracks were treated to a sight of smart precision as the column moved into line, the colors were advanced, and the band struck up martial and patriotic music.

It was here that considerable disappointment was experienced as the men were moved with uncompromising adherence to the schedule. Relatives who had come down to see them off at the final point were able merely to stand aside as the detachments marched smartly into the station, whose roof echoed the band and the tramp of their marching, and wheeled through the gates to the train.

Twenty minutes had been allowed for the march from the barracks, the loading of the train, and the departure.

On September 1, the battalion will come marching back, probably even more smartly, after their taste of drill and the varied duties of field training.

5. . . . FOND FAREWELLS. But Thomas F. Feddon found a moment to comfort Daughter Kathryn Joyce, 2 months, and tell his wife he'd be back in two weeks. Their meeting was brief for the train was to . . .

6. . . . PULL OUT AT 10 A. M.—The movement of troops was swift. Only 20 minutes had been allowed for the entire departure. The boys were in high spirits as they waved good-by to Washington until September 1

Winslows Entertain For Betrothed Couple

Round of Parties Honoring Betty Fischer And Grant Boss Climaxed at McLean, Va., Swimming Party for More Than 50

WITH THE WEATHER MAN relenting at the very last minute, Mr. and Mrs. W. Thacher Winsow chalked up a successful swimming party yesterday afternoon at their place in McLean, Va. The Winslows entertained more than 50 friends in honor of Miss Betty Fischer and Grant Boss—climaxing a round of parties for this pair who will marry Wednesday.

Ranleigh, the spacious estate of Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Leigh, was the scene of this merry gathering. At the moment the house is leased to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lord, but the young Winslows still maintain their pleasant log cottage in the rear. Yesterday Frida was bubbling with news that she and Thacher have leased an apartment in Georgetown. "This country life is idyllic in the summer, but winter is something else again," she said. Having completely decorated the cottage—in peasant linens and green and white gingham—shortly after her marriage several season's ago, Mrs. Winslow is loathe to leave the place. However she is looking forward with enthusiasm to new color schemes and "citified" touches necessary to her Georgetown home to be.

Mr. and Mrs. Leigh At Jamestown, R. I.

Mr. and Mrs. Leigh are at their summer place in Jamestown, R. I. The Winslows will join them there for Labor Day and Frida hopes to stay on with her mother for a bit longer. The young couple visited Jamestown earlier in the season. Instead of returning to Ranleigh this winter Mr. and Mrs. Leigh are planning to spend the season in Mexico. They liked it so well, last year, they have decided to go back.

But to return to yesterday's party:

Gayly covered tables were set up on the lawn beside the pool. An impromptu bar, where all manner of drinks were dispensed, was a popular spot. Frida, wearing a Hawaiian print frock in red and white, dashed here and there to see that everyone was happy—and they were. A few timid souls demurred on sight of the cool, green pool, but for the most part the guests enjoyed the splash. The "don't go near the water" contingent lounged on chairs and benches ringing the pool.

Couple to Marry At Washington Cathedral

The prospective bride and bridegroom, who will be wed in St. Mary's Chapel of the Washington Cathedral, are planning a Canadian jaunt for their honeymoon. They will stop at the Log Chateau—an annex of the Seigniory Club, situated in that quiet and beautiful section of Quebec Province called the Ottawa River Valley. Tennis matches are at their height at this summer resort now but costume parties as well as golf tournaments are keeping the visitors busy.

Attending the swimming party yesterday was Miss Fischer's godmother, Mrs. W. Calhoun Sterling, an aunt of Mrs. Winslow. She was accompanied by her daughter, "Miskey," who will make her debut in a season of two. Dr. and Mrs. Sterling will give a reception for the couple following the wedding ceremony on Wednesday. In the absence of the bride's father, Capt. H. E. Fischer, U. S. N., Dr. Sterling will give her in marriage. She is the daughter of Mrs. Beatrice Dulin Cornwell.

This afternoon Miss Nancy Hutchinson, who will serve as maid of honor, will entertain at a shower and tea for Miss Fischer. This evening James O'Grady is planning a dinner party for members of the wedding party at Olney Inn.

Mrs. Wilkes To Entertain At Bridge

Mrs. Marion R. Wilkes will entertain at bridge Tuesday afternoon in honor of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Booth M. Gray, of Laurens, S. C.

Mrs. Gray and Mr. and Mrs. Wilkes recently completed a motor tour through the South Carolina mountains, stopping at Mayview Manor in Blowing Rock and the Greystone Inn in Roaring Gap. Earlier, Mr. and Mrs. Wilkes made a series of visits with relatives in South Carolina.

Prior to going south, Mrs. Wilkes spent three weeks in Falmouth, Mass., with her sister, Mrs. Wilbur Emmons Forbes, the former Marie Bernadette Hacker, of this city and Tennessee.

Miss Anne Forbes Plights Troth

The engagement of Miss Anne Katharine Forbes to Proctor Howe Avon recently was announced. The bride-elect is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Forbes. An afternoon tea at the Forbeses summer home in the Moors was the function at which the betrothal was made known.

Each guest received a miniature nosegay to which was attached a small card bearing the name of Miss Forbes and her fiance.

Bride-Elect Briarcliff Graduate

Miss Forbes is a graduate of the Greenwood School at Ruxton, Md., and Briarcliff Junior College. She also attended Miss Wheelock's School in Boston. Mr. Avon, the son of Victor Avon and the late Bertha P. Avon, of Cambridge, Mass., prepared at Beacon School and was graduated from Harvard in 1937.

Parents Visiting Paul V. McNutt For a Fortnight

Two Indiana residents who didn't stay in the State to hear Wendell Willkie's acceptance speech are Judge and Mrs. John C. McNutt, who came to Washington during the week-end for a fortnight or so visit with their son, the Federal Security Administrator and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt at their apartment at the Shoreham.

This is Judge and Mrs. McNutt's first visit to Washington since their son has been in the Capital.

Since Mrs. John McNutt has not been in the Capital for a number of years, she is taking great interest in being shown the "new Washington."

Miss McCabe Wed To M. A. Harris

Mr. and Mrs. Marcus A. Harris, now on their wedding trip, will live in Scarsdale, N. Y. The marriage of the former Miss Caroline Norris McCabe took place Saturday in Charleston, W. Va. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Emmet McCabe. Mr. Harris is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Harris, of Clarksville, Va.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was attended by Edna Harris, of Clarksville. Henry W. Harris, of Raleigh, N. C., served as best man.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were John Harris, William Hadley, Miss Mary Norris McCabe, all of this city; Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Phillips, of Chevy Chase, Md., and Edward Smith, of Arlington, Va. The bride attended Smith College. Mr. Harris attended Hampton-Sydney College.

Wednesday Club To Hear Crabtree

Dr. James A. Crabtree, officer of the United States Public Health Service, will discuss "Public Health and National Defense" at the meeting of the Wednesday summer study group at the Woman's National Democratic Club on August 21 at 11 a. m.

Under Dr. Crabtree's supervision, the Public Health Service is engaged in a program of increased activity in the field of national defense.

This discussion group meets each Wednesday at the Woman's National Democratic Club and is open to all women interested in United States defense. Mrs. Philip F. Dodson is chairman of the summer program. Mrs. Helen Moodie is the adviser.

Gala Democratic Rally Held at Home Of F. D. Richardsons, Fairfax Courthouse

A GALA DEMOCRATIC rally was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick D. Richardson, White House, at Fairfax Courthouse, yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock. Co-hosts for the affair were Mr. and Mrs. Rixey Smith.

Some 60 guests arrived with picnic baskets. There was ice cold beer on tap and it was altogether a delightful get-together. The guests swam in the Richards pool, played badminton, and other games in the game room or just talked politics.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith had a preliminary party last Sunday at their home, Gracelands, which was well attended and there will be a Democratic rally every Sunday in Fairfax County at one or the other of the any attractive homes there until the election in November. Judge and Mrs. John Price will hold one on their estate, Long View, in the near future.

Miss Phyllis Richardson left Friday for Bronxville, N. Y., where she will visit her roommate at Warrenton Country School, Miss Jane Leininger, for a week. Miss Charlotte Moffett, of Harrisburg, has been visiting the Richardsons for the past week. She, with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. George Moffett, are members of the Beaufort Hunt, Harrisburg, and are ardent followers to hounds.

WILLIAM H. LIPSCOMB, of Raspberry Plain, Leesburg, Va., and this city, sold the highest priced yearling of the evening one night last week when his lovely chestnut colt, by Psychic-Bid, out of Ready, a High Time mare, was put on the block at Saratoga. Opening at $1,000 the bidding quickly soared as the Milky Way Farm of Mrs. Ethel V. Mars and the Brookmeade Stable of Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane engaged in a bidding duel that ended when Hugh Fontaine, of Upperville, representing Brookmeade, bid $12,700. Mr. Lipscomb, his daughter, Miss Helen Lipscomb, and his son, Ross Lipscomb, will return to their home Raspberry Plain, next week from Saratoga, where they have been since the latter part of July.

Mrs. Richard E. Byrd has returned to her home in Winchester after a two weeks visit to her son and daughter-in-law, Admiral Richard E. Byrd and Mrs. Byrd, at Wicky-Up lodge on the Maine coast.

Thomas Bolling Byrd has returned to Winchester from his cottage at Bar Harbor, Me. Mrs. Thomas Byrd and her two children, Miss Lucy Mitchell and Billy Mitchell, jr., will remain at the Maine resort a little longer. Miss Margaret Byrd, who went to Bar Harbor with her father, has gone to Saratoga for the races this week. Miss Catherine Hulbert, of Middleburg, is also in Saratoga for a visit. Others from here at the famous Spa include Mr. and Mrs. Arthur White, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Skinner, William Hulbert and Miss Elizabeth Hulbert. William P. Hitt, of Middleburg, who is spending August at Saratoga, entertained a number of friends at a dinner party at the Gidian Putnam Hotel last week.

MISS JANE FAIRFAX DUDLEY, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas U. Dudley, of Middleburg, rode in the pony hack class at Berryville Friday to win second place on her pony Echo. Miss Anne Clay Bayly won third ribbon on Camelot. Mrs. Robert C. Winmill's pony, Happy Boy, took a blue ribbon over a large class.

The younger generation all went well at the recent two-day horse show at Berryville. Miss Patricia Downs, of Warrenton, won first in class for ponies three years old and over with Sunny South. Mrs. James C. Hamilton's children, Miss Peggy and Jimmy Hamilton, of Warrenton were second and third. Miss Dorothy Fred, of Middleburg, riding Sea Pearl, came in fourth. Mrs. Hamilton's children entered under Dunnottar Farm, won first, second and third in ponies over fences 14-2 with Melody, Huntress and Gray Knight, fourth place going to Frank Gibson Eppes, riding Peanuts.

Ponies over fences under 12-2 was won by Mrs. Winmill's Happy Boy; second, Billy Greenhalgh's Victorian II; third, Mrs. Hamilton's Thane of Wales; and fourth, Miss Eva Prime on Soofie Woogie.

Mrs. John Cochran, of The Plains, will entertain members of the Fauquier and Loudoun Garden Club, at luncheon Wednesday at Great Meadows, on the Skyline Drive.

Margaret J. Martin Is Wed Here to Robert Gordon Gill

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gordon Gill are on their wedding trip following their marriage here Saturday afternoon. The bride is the former Miss Margaret J. Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Solomon Martin. Mr. Gill is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Gill, of Gould, Ark.

The ceremony took place in the National Baptist Memorial Church at 5 o'clock with the Rev. Lincoln A. Smith officiating. Ferns and pink and white gladioli adorned the church. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white lace gown made on Grecian lines with long sleeves, high neck and a train. Her veil was held by a Juliet cap of pearls. She carried white roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. John Clifton Martin, sister-in-law of the bride, served as matron of honor. She wore a dusty rose jersey silk gown and carried pink asters with blue delphinium.

The bridesmaids were Miss Audrye Kubsck, Miss Elizabeth Thorney, of St. Louis, Mo.; Miss Jane Disnelt and Miss Allegra Clifton, of Foisom, N. C. They all wore Eleanor Blue mousseline de soie gowns and carried pink asters with blue delphinium.

Ray Millard, of this city, was best man. Ushers were Isham Martin, brother of the bride; William Price, Walter Hughes, Robert Wellinghame, of Waco, Tex.; Charles Lansdale and Roy Powell.

Immediately following the ceremony there was a reception at Hotel 2400. Among the out-of-town guests attending were the Misses Ella and Elizabeth Stanlaw, Harold Stanlaw, Bob McNeil, all of New York; Mrs. George P. Clark, and Mrs. W. G. Miller, of Wilson, N. C.

The bride attended American University. Mr. Gill attended Arkansas Tech and George Washington University.

W. R. Dillons Staying At Cape May Hotel

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Dillon are stopping at the Admiral Hotel in Cape May, N. J.

Kate Hall Is Married

The wedding of Miss Kate Chamberlin Hall, of this city and Atlanta, Ga., to Carl William Carlson took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock with the Rev. Edwin Pieplow, of the Trinity Lutheran Church, officiating. The ceremony took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Simpson Taylor.

The bride is the daughter of Warren E. Hall, of Minneapolis, Minn., and Atlantic. Mr. Carlson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Carlson, of Duluth, Minn.

Given in marriage by Mr. Taylor, the bride wore a rust crepe afternoon frock with brown accessories. She wore a corsage of tea roses. Miss Alice Aird, in a cinnamon brown ensemble, served as maid of honor. Willard Christianson was best man.

There was a reception immediately after the ceremony. Following their honeymoon the young couple will live at 1317 M street northwest.

Williamses Fete Californians At Chevy Chase

Mr. and Mrs. Chester S. Williams gave a dinner party at their home in Chevy Chase last Friday in honor of Mrs. W. J. Williams and James A. Kemp, of Los Angeles, Calif. Guests were Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry F. Grady and Dr. and Mrs. Fred J. Kelly.

Mrs. Williams arrived on Tuesday from Los Angeles to visit her son and family. Mr. Kemp has been visiting his daughter in Chevy Chase, Mrs. C. S. Williams, and another daughter in Richmond, Va. Mr. Kemp is the founder and editor of the Republican Leader of Salem, Ind., and is the oldest living president of the Indiana Editorial Association.

C. S. Williams is the specialist in conference planning and assistant administrator of the Federal Forum Project in the United States Office of Education. Mrs. Williams is on the psychiatric staff of Gallinger Hospital.

Mrs. W. J. Williams and Mr. Kemp, accompanying Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Williams, will drive to New Hampshire this week to see their grandson at Camp Laurowelld—and then extend their trip to visit friends in Maine and on returning to Washington will stop in New York to visit the World's Fair.

Emma E. Bowling Engaged to Wed

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Bowling, of Fredericksburg, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Emma Eulalia, to Clarence Edward Damron, of this city and Fredericksburg, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Damron, of Washington.

The announcement was made yesterday at a bridge luncheon given by Mr. and Mrs. Bowling.

Miss Bowling attended James Monroe High School and Mary Washington College.

Mr. Damron received his education at the Devitt Preparatory School and George Washington University. He is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity.

The wedding will take place in the fall.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

YOUNG STEPHANIE PELL, who recently spent a week at Rehoboth recuperating from a knee operation, has returned to Washington to be with her father, Robert Pell, of the State Department. She has written such an amusing account of her adventures at a recent Watergate concert that it will bear quoting.

She says that her father "had the brilliant idea of renting a boat and going down the river to hear the symphony concert at the Watergate. M. and Mme. Georges Coulon, Sam Reber and Heathcoat Amory, of the British Embassy, came along with us. The mast of our boat was so tall that two bridges had to be opened for us.

"The first was a train bridge and everything went well. The second was a bridge over which 4,000 cars were rushing people to the concert. The cars were stopped and the bridge opened up to let us through.

"We had hardly reached the opening in the bridge when the motor of our craft went completely dead. For the life of us we couldn't start it. Finally, after much searching one dilapidated oar was produced and we crept slowly through while thousands of people hung over the railings and yelled at us. Their cars seemed to make a line from Washington to California—all waiting for us to pass under the bridge.

"THAT 'NUT-SHELL,' as M. Coulon called our boat, took three-quarters of an hour to plough its way through the gap in the raised bridge. It was awful but very funny.

"Then, to top it all, as soon as our mast was clear the motor started. You might have thought we did it on purpose! Of course everyone was late to the concert except us."

M. Coulon, who was in Washington as a member of the Berenger debt mission in 1926, has an interest secondary only to the business which brings him to the Capital. He would like to know what has become of the French race horse, "Toubo," since he came to the United States and who owns the horse.

Toubo belonged to M. Coulon's brother, Henri Coulon, who owns a famous stud farm—or did before the war—at Manneville between Caen and Caboürg. At the yearling sales at Deauville last August Toubo was sold to the Aga Khan for 485,000 francs, the highest price paid at the sales for any horse.

Two months later, after the start of the war, the Aga Khan sold Toubo to an American racehorse owner for 600,000 francs. M. Coulon, unfortunately, forgets the name of the American purchaser, but he would very much like to hear what has happened to Toubo. Has he, now in the 2-year-old class, won any races and is he running under the name he had in France?

AND, SPEAKING of the Aga Khan, the other day I read that he had fled to Switzerland, announcing that he is practically a pauper. Yet, no matter how much his vast possessions may dwindle, the Aga Khan is, reportedly master of one unfailing source of revenue.

As the head of the Mohammedan religion throughout the world, he is the object of extreme veneration by the faithful. So much so that they willingly pay for a few drops of the bath water which has laved his august person. Wouldn't it be too perfect to have an assured income from the sale of your used bath water?

Larz Anderson, nephew of the late Larz Anderson so famous in Washington's social annals, is spending the summer at Rehoboth with his wife and family. Mr. Anderson, who, like his uncle, has traveled a great deal, is writing a book about his experiences.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Clapper, who have leased the cottage of the Henry Berliners at Rehoboth Beach, asked friends in for cocktails the other afternoon. Among the guests was the Clappers' landlord, who, having established his wife and daughters in Maine, had returned to Washington, where he is in constant touch with the factory where he manufactures airplanes.

MR. BERLINER, in other years, had his own plane and commuted between Washington and Rehoboth. But this year the need for planes is so great and they are sold so fast that he feels he hasn't the right to keep one for his own convenience.

Therefore Mr. Berliner begged a lift to Rehoboth with a friend and, arriving hot and tired, took a dip before continuing to his tenants' cocktail party in his wet bathing suit.

Mr. Clapper took one look at his damp landlord guest and rose to the occasion.

"Come right in," he said cordially, "and sit anywhere you like. This is only a rented cottage."

Visiting in Canada

Miss Temple Bailey and Mrs. Margare Schinister, of this city, accompanied by Miss Florence Meakins, of Hamilton, Ontario, were recent guests at Bigwin Inn, Muskoka, Canada.

Swank Summer Spots Attract Society Folk

The social spotlight continues to play on first one swank summer resort and then another—with about even strength.

Long Island, a favorite "waiting place" for the town's upper crust, is holding its own. At Southampton, over the week-end, Mrs. Walter Tuckerman gave a luncheon at Dormie for Mrs. Rushmore Patterson, of this city and New York. Mrs. Patterson is passing the season in Water Mill. Later additional guests came in to hear Mrs. Patterson, who spoke on "Defending America by Aiding the Allies."

Many Washingtonians have flown to the White Mountains of New Hampshire for a bit of relaxation. Admiral Joseph Strauss, U. S. N. (retired), and Mrs. Strauss, of this city, are at the Waumbek, Jefferson, N. H. Also there are Col. John F. Shield, of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Phelps and Henry Prentiss, of Rutherford, N. J., and Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Scarff, of New York.

Week-End Sees Many Parties at Saratoga

Meanwhile, Saratoga Springs continues to make social news despite stiff competition. Many parties were given there over the week-end in connection with the historic Travers Stakes, oldest race of the Saratoga race meet.

Mrs. Payne Whitney had as week-end guests Maj. Louis Arnold Beard, John French Hal Price Headley, Mr. and Mrs. J. Averell Clark and Representative and Mrs. James W. Wadsworth.

John Hay Whitney entertained at a houseparty also. He had as his guests Mr. and Mrs. Richard Myers, Mr. and Mrs. Richard G. Croft, Mr. and Mrs. David O. Selznick, Herbert Bayard Swope, William Jackson, John MacLane and Myron Selznick.

Play Draws Society To White Sulphur

Another leading spa—White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.—Can boast of top-flight society. Mrs. Baldwin Day Spilman, of this city and Warrenton, Va., brought a group of guests to the Greenbrier over the week-end for the premier performance on Saturday night of "Greenbrier," a musical comedy. Written by Emma Gray Trigg and Elizabeth Maury, of Richmond, it was presented by the Richmond Theater Guild.

Mrs. Spilman had as her guests Mrs. Baldwin Day Spilman, jr., Mrs. R. R. Barrett, Mrs. T. J. Tobin, Miss Anna Barrett and Richard Barrett. Also in White Sulphur for the play were Mr. and Mrs. J. Chauncy Williams and their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Williams, of Warrenton, and George M. Nelson, of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis S. Whitten, of this city, who have a summer home in the spa, were guests at a dinner dance given last evening for 40 guests at Kate's Mountain Lodge by Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Pargny, of Pittsburgh.

Geraldine Cohn Becomes Bride

Miss Geraldine Cohn became the bride of Harold Elsberg yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob A. Cohn, of this city. Mr. Elsberg is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Elsberg, of Arlington, Va. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Paul Hyman. Palms and candles were used before the improvised altar, where Rabbi Leon Elsberg, brother of the bridegroom, officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a peacock blue satin gown with a matching veil and headdress of orchids. She carried a white orchid on a prayerbook with lillies of the valley.

Mrs. Hyman was matron of honor for her sister. She wore a rustic gold crepe frock. Milton Elsberg was best man for his brother. Immediately following the wedding there was a reception in the garden of the Hyman home. The bride's mother wore a deep purple ensemble. Mrs. Elsberg wore a light brown gown.

Following their cruise to Boston, the couple will make their home at 1300 South Boston street, Arlington Village, Va.

The bride attended Abott Art School. Mr. Elsberg attended George Washington University.

Two-Week Training Ahead For Reserves at Lakehurst

To the strains of "God Bless America," and the Marine hymn, the Fifth Battalion, Marine Corps Reserve, marched to Union Station yesterday morning and rode out of Washington.

They were on their way to the Naval Training Station at Lakehurst, N. J., for a tour of field duty. And they left behind them some who said a fond farewell at the barracks, Sixth street and Indiana avenue northwest, and some who got no chance to say good-by at all. The latter had planned to send off their menfolk at the station, but the movement of troops was so swift, once it got under way, that there was no time there for personal greetings.

Most of those who left forsook private business for the duration of the tour, but some took leave also of public business. Among the officers was one legislator, and the son of another. Representative Philip C. Ferguson (Democrat), of Oklahoma, was attached in his rank of captain, and the son of Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Virginia, First Lieut. Clifford A. Woodrum, was in the detachment.

"We are ready for duty," said Lieut. Col. Harvey L. Miller, commanding, "and this year, more than ever, we will endeavor to show that this battalion is fitted to conform to the high standards of the Marine Corps whenever it is seen fit to call upon us."

Precision with which the preparations at the barracks, and the movement to the station, where the battalion left promptly at 10 a. m., were carried out, illustrated the accuracy of his boast.

The throngs of friends and relatives who gathered at the barracks were treated to a sight of smart precision as the column moved into line, the colors were advanced, and the band struck up martial and patriotic music.

It was here that considerable disappointment was experienced as the men were moved with uncompromising adherence to the schedule. Relatives who had come down to see them off at the final point were able merely to stand aside as the detachments marched smartly into the station, whose roof echoed the band and the tramp of their marching, and wheeled through the gates to the train.

Twenty minutes had been allowed for the march from the barracks, the loading of the train, and the departure.

On September 1, the battalion will come marching back, probably even more smartly, after their taste of drill and the varied duties of field training.

5. . . . FOND FAREWELLS. But Thomas F. Feddon found a moment to comfort Daughter Kathryn Joyce, 2 months, and tell his wife he'd be back in two weeks. Their meeting was brief for the train was to . . .

6. . . . PULL OUT AT 10 A. M.—The movement of troops was swift. Only 20 minutes had been allowed for the entire departure. The boys were in high spirits as they waved good-by to Washington until September 1

Winslows Entertain For Betrothed Couple

Round of Parties Honoring Betty Fischer And Grant Boss Climaxed at McLean, Va., Swimming Party for More Than 50

WITH THE WEATHER MAN relenting at the very last minute, Mr. and Mrs. W. Thacher Winsow chalked up a successful swimming party yesterday afternoon at their place in McLean, Va. The Winslows entertained more than 50 friends in honor of Miss Betty Fischer and Grant Boss—climaxing a round of parties for this pair who will marry Wednesday.

Ranleigh, the spacious estate of Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Leigh, was the scene of this merry gathering. At the moment the house is leased to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lord, but the young Winslows still maintain their pleasant log cottage in the rear. Yesterday Frida was bubbling with news that she and Thacher have leased an apartment in Georgetown. "This country life is idyllic in the summer, but winter is something else again," she said. Having completely decorated the cottage—in peasant linens and green and white gingham—shortly after her marriage several season's ago, Mrs. Winslow is loathe to leave the place. However she is looking forward with enthusiasm to new color schemes and "citified" touches necessary to her Georgetown home to be.

Mr. and Mrs. Leigh At Jamestown, R. I.

Mr. and Mrs. Leigh are at their summer place in Jamestown, R. I. The Winslows will join them there for Labor Day and Frida hopes to stay on with her mother for a bit longer. The young couple visited Jamestown earlier in the season. Instead of returning to Ranleigh this winter Mr. and Mrs. Leigh are planning to spend the season in Mexico. They liked it so well, last year, they have decided to go back.

But to return to yesterday's party:

Gayly covered tables were set up on the lawn beside the pool. An impromptu bar, where all manner of drinks were dispensed, was a popular spot. Frida, wearing a Hawaiian print frock in red and white, dashed here and there to see that everyone was happy—and they were. A few timid souls demurred on sight of the cool, green pool, but for the most part the guests enjoyed the splash. The "don't go near the water" contingent lounged on chairs and benches ringing the pool.

Couple to Marry At Washington Cathedral

The prospective bride and bridegroom, who will be wed in St. Mary's Chapel of the Washington Cathedral, are planning a Canadian jaunt for their honeymoon. They will stop at the Log Chateau—an annex of the Seigniory Club, situated in that quiet and beautiful section of Quebec Province called the Ottawa River Valley. Tennis matches are at their height at this summer resort now but costume parties as well as golf tournaments are keeping the visitors busy.

Attending the swimming party yesterday was Miss Fischer's godmother, Mrs. W. Calhoun Sterling, an aunt of Mrs. Winslow. She was accompanied by her daughter, "Miskey," who will make her debut in a season of two. Dr. and Mrs. Sterling will give a reception for the couple following the wedding ceremony on Wednesday. In the absence of the bride's father, Capt. H. E. Fischer, U. S. N., Dr. Sterling will give her in marriage. She is the daughter of Mrs Beatrice Dulin Cornwell.

This afternoon Miss Nancy Hodkinson, who will serve as maid of honor, will entertain at a shower and tea for Miss Fischer. This evening James O'Grady is planning a dinner party for members of the wedding party at Olney Inn.

Mrs. Wilkes To Entertain At Bridge

Mrs. Marion R. Wilkes will entertain at bridge Tuesday afternoon in honor of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Booth M. Gray, of Laurens, S. C.

Mrs. Gray and Mr. and Mrs. Wilkes recently completed a motor tour through the South Carolina mountains, stopping at Mayview Manor in Blowing Rock and the Greystone Inn in Roaring Gap. Earlier, Mr. and Mrs. Wilkes made a series of visits with relatives in South Carolina.

Prior to going south, Mrs. Wilkes spent three weeks in Falmouth, Mass., with her sister, Mrs. Wilbur Emmons Forbes, the former Marie Bernadette Hacker, of this city and Tennessee.

Miss Anne Forbes Plights Troth

The engagement of Miss Anne Katharine Forbes to Proctor Howe Avon recently was announced. The bride-elect is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Forbes. An afternoon tea at the Forbeses summer home in the Moors was the function at which the betrothal was made known.

Each guest received a miniature nosegay to which was attached a small card bearing the name of Miss Forbes and her fiance.

Bride-Elect Briarcliff Graduate

Miss Forbes is a graduate of the Greenwood School at Ruxton, Md., and Briarcliff Junior College. She also attended Miss Wheelock's School in Boston. Mr. Avon, the son of Victor Avon and the late Bertha P. Avon, of Cambridge, Mass., prepared at Beacon School and was graduated from Harvard in 1937.

Parents Visiting Paul V. McNutt For a Fortnight

Two Indiana residents who didn't stay in the State to hear Wendell Willkie's acceptance speech are Judge and Mrs. John C. McNutt, who came to Washington during the week-end for a fortnight or so visit with their son, the Federal Security Administrator and Mrs. Paul V. McNutt at their apartment at the Shoreham.

This is Judge and Mrs. McNutt's first visit to Washington since their son has been in the Capital.

Since Mrs. John McNutt has not been in the Capital for a number of years, she is taking great interest in being shown the "new Washington."

Miss McCabe Wed To M. A. Harris

Mr. and Mrs. Marcus A. Harris, now on their wedding trip, will live in Scarsdale, N. Y. The marriage of the former Miss Caroline Norris McCabe took place Saturday in Charleston, W. Va. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Emmet McCabe. Mr. Harris is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry M. Harris, of Clarksville, Va.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was attended by Edna Harris, of Clarksville. Henry W. Harris, of Raleigh, N. C., served as best man.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were John Harris, William Hadley, Miss Mary Norris McCabe, all of this city; Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Phillips, of Chevy Chase, Md., and Edward Smith, of Arlington, Va. The bride attended Smith College. Mr. Harris attended Hampton-Sydney College.

Wednesday Club To Hear Crabtree

Dr. James A. Crabtree, officer of the United States Public Health Service, will discuss "Public Health and National Defense" at the meeting of the Wednesday summer study group at the Woman's National Democratic Club on August 21 at 11 a. m.

Under Dr. Crabtree's supervision, the Public Health Service is engaged in a program of increased activity in the field of national defense.

This discussion group meets each Wednesday at the Woman's National Democratic Club and is open to all women interested in United States defense. Mrs. Philip F. Dodson is chairman of the summer program. Mrs. Helen Moodie is the adviser.

Gala Democratic Rally Held at Home Of F. D. Richardsons, Fairfax Courthouse

A GALA DEMOCRATIC rally was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick D. Richardson, White House, at Fairfax Courthouse, yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock. Co-hosts for the affair were Mr. and Mrs. Rixey Smith.

Some 60 guests arrived with picnic baskets. There was ice cold beer on tap and it was altogether a delightful get-together. The guests swam in the Richards pool, played badminton, and other games in the game room or just talked politics.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith had a preliminary party last Sunday at their home, Gracelands, which was well attended and there will be a Democratic rally every Sunday in Fairfax County at one or the other of the any attractive homes there until the election in November. Judge and Mrs. John Price will hold one on their estate, Long View, in the near future.

Miss Phyllis Richardson left Friday for Bronxville, N. Y., where she will visit her roommate at Warrenton Country School, Miss Jane Leininger, for a week. Miss Charlotte Moffett, of Harrisburg, has been visiting the Richardsons for the past week. She, with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. George Moffett, are members of the Beaufort Hunt, Harrisburg, and are ardent followers to hounds.

WILLIAM H. LIPSCOMB, of Raspberry Plain, Leesburg, Va., and this city, sold the highest priced yearling of the evening one night last week when his lovely chestnut colt, by Psychic-Bid, out of Ready, a High Time mare, was put on the block at Saratoga. Opening at $1,000 the bidding quickly soared as the Milky Way Farm of Mrs. Ethel V. Mars and the Brookmeade Stable of Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane engaged in a bidding duel that ended when Hugh Fontaine, of Upperville, representing Brookmeade, bid $12,700. Mr. Lipscomb, his daughter, Miss Helen Lipscomb, and his son, Ross Lipscomb, will return to their home Raspberry Plain, next week from Saratoga, where they have been since the latter part of July.

Mrs. Richard E. Byrd has returned to her home in Winchester after a two weeks visit to her son and daughter-in-law, Admiral Richard E. Byrd and Mrs. Byrd, at Wicky-Up lodge on the Maine coast.

Thomas Bolling Byrd has returned to Winchester from his cottage at Bar Harbor, Me. Mrs. Thomas Byrd and her two children, Miss Lucy Mitchell and Billy Mitchell, jr., will remain at the Maine resort a little longer. Miss Margaret Byrd, who went to Bar Harbor with her father, has gone to Saratoga for the races this week. Miss Catherine Hulbert, of Middleburg, is also in Saratoga for a visit. Others from here at the famous Spa include Mr. and Mrs. Arthur White, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Skinner, William Hulbert and Miss Elizabeth Hulbert. William P. Hitt, of Middleburg, who is spending August at Saratoga, entertained a number of friends at a dinner party at the Gidian Putnam Hotel last week.

MISS JANE FAIRFAX DUDLEY, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas U. Dudley, of Middleburg, rode in the pony hack class at Berryville Friday to win second place on her pony Echo. Miss Anne Clay Bayly won third ribbon on Camelot. Mrs. Robert C. Winmill's pony, Happy Boy, took a blue ribbon over a large class.

The younger generation all went well at the recent two-day horse show at Berryville. Miss Patricia Downs, of Warrenton, won first in class for ponies three years old and over with Sunny South. Mrs. James C. Hamilton's children, Miss Peggy and Jimmy Hamilton, of Warrenton were second and third. Miss Dorothy Fred, of Middleburg, riding Sea Pearl, came in fourth. Mrs. Hamilton's children entered under Dunnottar Farm, won first, second and third in ponies over fences 14-2 with Melody, Huntress and Gray Knight, fourth place going to Frank Gibson Eppes, riding Peanuts.

Ponies over fences under 12-2 was won by Mrs. Winmill's Happy Boy; second, Billy Greenhalgh's Victorian II; third, Mrs. Hamilton's Thane of Wales; and fourth, Miss Eva Prime on Soofie Woogie.

Mrs. John Cochtan, of The Plains, will entertain members of the Fauquier and Loudoun Garden Club, at luncheon Wednesday at Great Meadows, on the Skyline Drive.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gordon Gill are on their wedding trip following their marriage here Saturday afternoon. The bride is the former Miss Margaret J. Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Solomon Martin. Mr. Gill is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Gill, of Gould, Ark.

The ceremony took place in the National Baptist Memorial Church at 5 o'clock with the Rev. Lincoln A. Smith officiating. Ferns and pink and white gladioli adorned the church. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white lace gown made on Grecian lines with long sleeves, high neck and a train. Her veil was held by a Juliet cap of pearls. She carried white roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. John Clifton Martin, sister-in-law of the bride, served as matron of honor. She wore a dusty rose jersey silk gown and carried pink asters with blue delphinium.

The bridesmaids were Miss Audrye Kuback, Miss Elizabeth Thornsey, of St. Louis, Mo.; Miss Jane Dieneit and Miss Allegra Clifton, of Foisom, N. C. They all wore Eleanor Blue mousseline de soie gowns and carried pink asters with blue delphinium.

Ray Millard, of this city, was best man. Ushers were Isham Martin, brother of the bride; William Price, Walter Hughes, Robert Wellinghame, of Waco, Tex.; Charles Lansdale and Roy Powell.

Immediately following the ceremony there was a reception at Hotel 2400. Among the out-of-town guests attending were the Misses Ella and Elizabeth Stanlaw, Harold Stanlaw, Bob McNeil, all of New York; Mrs. George P. Clark, and Mrs. W. G. Miller, of Wilson, N. C.

The bride attended American University. Mr. Gill attended Arkansas Tech and George Washington University.

W. R. Dillons Staying At Cape May Hotel

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Dillon are stopping at the Admiral Hotel in Cape May, N. J.

Kate Hall Is Married

The wedding of Miss Kate Chamberlin Hall, of this city and Atlanta, Ga., to Carl William Carlson took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock with the Rev. Edwin Pieplow, of the Trinity Lutheran Church, officiating. The ceremony took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Simpson Taylor.

The bride is the daughter of Warren E. Hall, of Minneapolis, Minn., and Atlantic. Mr. Carlson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Carlson, of Duluth, Minn.

Given in marriage by Mr. Taylor, the bride wore a rust crepe afternoon frock with brown accessories. She wore a corsage of tea roses. Miss Alice Aird, in a cinnamon brown ensemble, served as maid of honor. Willard Christianson was best man.

There was a reception immediately after the ceremony. Following their honeymoon the young couple will live at 1317 M street northwest.

Williamses Fete Californians At Chevy Chase

Mr. and Mrs. Chester S. Williams gave a dinner party at their home in Chevy Chase last Friday in honor of Mrs. W. J. Williams and James A. Kemp, of Los Angeles, Calif. Guests were Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry F. Grady and Dr. and Mrs. Fred J. Kelly.

Mrs. Williams arrived on Tuesday from Los Angeles to visit her son and family. Mr. Kemp has been visiting his daughter in Chevy Chase, Mrs. C. S. Williams, and another daughter in Richmond, Va. Mr. Kemp is the founder and editor of the Republican Leader of Salem, Ind., and is the oldest living president of the Indiana Editorial Association.

C. S. Williams is the specialist in conference planning and assistant administrator of the Federal Forum Project in the United States Office of Education. Mrs. Williams is on the psychiatric staff of Gallinger Hospital.

Mrs. W. J. Williams and Mr. Kemp, accompanying Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Williams, will drive to New Hampshire this week to see their grandson at Camp Lauroweld—and then extend their trip to visit friends in Maine and on returning to Washington will stop in New York to visit the World's Fair.

Emma E. Bowling Engaged to Wed

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Bowling, of Fredericksburg, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Emma Eulalia, to Clarence Edward Damron, of this city and Fredericksburg, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Damron, of Washington.

The announcement was made yesterday at a bridge luncheon given by Mr. and Mrs. Bowling.

Miss Bowling attended James Monroe High School and Mary Washington College.

Mr. Damron received his education at the Devitt Preparatory School and George Washington University. He is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity.

The wedding will take place in the fall.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

YOUNG STEPHANIE PELL, who recently spent a week at Rehoboth recuperating from a knee operation, has returned to Washington to be with her father, Robert Pell, of the State Department. She has written such an amusing account of her adventures at a recent Watergate concert that it will bear quoting.

She says that her father "had the brilliant idea of renting a boat and going down the river to hear the symphony concert at the Watergate. M. and Mme. Georges Coulon, Sam Reber and Heathcoat Amory, of the British Embassy, came along with us. The mast of our boat was so tall that two bridges had to be opened for us.

"The first was a train bridge and everything went well. The second was a bridge over which 4,000 cars were rushing people to the concert. The cars were stopped and the bridge opened up to let us through.

"We had hardly reached the opening in the bridge when the motor of our craft went completely dead. For the life of us we couldn't start it. Finally, after much searching one dilapidated oar was produced and we crept slowly through while thousands of people hung over the railings and yelled at us. Their cars seemed to make a line from Washington to California—all waiting for us to pass under the bridge.

"THAT 'NUT-SHELL,' as M. Coulon called our boat, took three-quarters of an hour to plough its way through the gap in the raised bridge. It was awful but very funny.

"Then, to top it all, as soon as our mast was clear the motor started. You might have thought we did it on purpose! Of course everyone was late to the concert except us."

M. Coulon, who was in Washington as a member of the Berenger debt mission in 1926, has an interest secondary only to the business which brings him to the Capital. He would like to know what has become of the French race horse, "Toubo," since he came to the United States and who owns the horse.

Toubo belonged to M. Coulon's brother, Henri Coulon, who owns a famous stud farm—or did before the war—at Manneville between Caen and Caboürg. At the yearling sales at Deauville last August Toubo was sold to the Aga Khan for 485,000 francs, the highest price paid at the sales for any horse.

Two months later, after the start of the war, the Aga Khan sold Toubo to an American racehorse owner for 600,000 francs. M. Coulon, unfortunately, forgets the name of the American purchaser, but he would very much like to hear what has happened to Toubo. Has he, now in the 2-year-old class, won any races and is he running under the name he had in France?

AND, SPEAKING of the Aga Khan, the other day I read that he had fled to Switzerland, announcing that he is practically a pauper. Yet, no matter how much his vast possessions may dwindle, the Aga Khan is, reportedly master of one unfailing source of revenue.

As the head of the Mohammedan religion throughout the world, he is the object of extreme veneration by the faithful. So much so that they willingly pay for a few drops of the bath water which has laved his august person. Wouldn't it be too perfect to have an assured income from the sale of your used bath water?

Larz Anderson, nephew of the late Larz Anderson so famous in Washington's social annals, is spending the summer at Rehoboth with his wife and family. Mr. Anderson, who, like his uncle, has traveled a great deal, is writing a book about his experiences.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Clapper, who have leased the cottage of the Henry Berliners at Rehoboth Beach, asked friends in for cocktails the other afternoon. Among the guests was the Clappers' landlord, who, having established his wife and daughters in Maine, had returned to Washington, where he is in constant touch with the factory where he manufactures airplanes.

MR. BERLINER, in other years, had his own plane and commuted between Washington and Rehoboth. But this year the need for planes is so great and they are sold so fast that he feels he hasn't the right to keep one for his own convenience.

Therefore Mr. Berliner begged a lift to Rehoboth with a friend and, arriving hot and tired, took a dip before continuing to his tenants' cocktail party in his wet bathing suit.

Mr. Clapper took one look at his damp landlord guest and rose to the occasion.

"Come right in," he said cordially, "and sit anywhere you like. This is only a rented cottage."

Visiting in Canada

Miss Temple Bailey and Mrs. Margare Schinister, of this city, accompanied by Miss Florence Meakins, of Hamilton, Ontario, were recent guests at Bigwin Inn, Muskoka, Canada.

Swank Summer Spots Attract Society Folk

The social spotlight continues to play on first one swank summer resort and then another—with about even strength.

Long Island, a favorite "watering place" for the town's upper crust, is holding its own. At Southampton, over the week-end, Mrs. Walter Tuckerman gave a luncheon at Dormie for Mrs. Rushmore Patterson, of this city and New York. Mrs. Patterson is passing the season in Water Mill. Later additional guests came in to hear Mrs. Patterson, who spoke on "Defending America by Aiding the Allies."

Many Washingtonians have flown to the White Mountains of New Hampshire for a bit of relaxation. Admiral Joseph Strauss, U. S. N. (retired), and Mrs. Strauss, of this city, are at the Waumbek, Jefferson, N. H. Also there are Col. John F. Shield, of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Phelps and Henry Prentiss, of Rutherford, N. J., and Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Scarff, of New York.

Week-End Sees Many Parties at Saratoga

Meanwhile, Saratoga Springs continues to make social news despite stiff competition. Many parties were given there over the week-end in connection with the historic Travers Stakes, oldest race of the Saratoga race meet.

Mrs. Payne Whitney had as week-end guests Maj. Louis Arnold Beard, John French Hal Price Headley, Mr. and Mrs. J. Averell Clark and Representative and Mrs. James W. Wadsworth.

John Hay Whitney entertained at a houseparty also. He had as his guests Mr. and Mrs. Richard Myers, Mr. and Mrs. Richard G. Croft, Mr. and Mrs. David O. Selznick, Herbert Bayard Swope, William Jackson, John MacLane and Myron Selznick.

Play Draws Society To White Sulphur

Another leading spa—White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.—can boast of top-flight society. Mrs. Baldwin Day Spilman, of this city and Warrenton, Va., brought a group of guests to the Greenbrier over the week-end for the premier performance on Saturday night of "Greenbrier," a musical comedy. Written by Emma Gray Trigg and Elizabeth Maury, of Richmond, it was presented by the Richmond Theater Guild.

Mrs. Spilman had as her guests Mrs. Baldwin Day Spilman, jr., Mrs. R. R. Barrett, Mrs. T. J. Tobin, Miss Anna Barrett and Richard Barrett. Also in White Sulphur for the play were Mr. and Mrs. J. Chauncy Williams and their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Williams, of Warrenton, and George M. Nelson, of New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis S. Whitten, of this city, who have a summer home in the spa, were guests at a dinner dance given last evening for 40 guests at Kate's Mountain Lodge by Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Pargny, of Pittsburgh.

Geraldine Cohn Becomes Bride

Miss Geraldine Cohn became the bride of Harold Elsberg yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob A. Cohn, of this city. Mr. Elsberg is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Elsberg, of Arlington, Va. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Paul Hyman. Palms and candles were used before the improvised altar, where Rabbi Leon Elsberg, brother of the bridegroom, officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a peacock blue satin gown with a matching veil and headdress of orchids. She carried a white orchid on a prayerbook with lillies of the valley.

Mrs. Hyman was matron of honor for her sister. She wore a rustic gold crepe frock. Milton Elsberg was best man for his brother. Immediately following the wedding there was a reception in the garden of the Hyman home. The bride's mother wore a deep purple ensemble. Mrs. Elsberg wore a light brown gown.

Following their cruise to Boston, the couple will make their home at 1300 South Boston street, Arlington Village, Va.

The bride attended Abott Academy. Mr. Elsberg attended George Washington University.

Famed Showboat Makes Final Trip

Ties Up at Annapolis Today; to Be Turned Into Movie Theater

Showboat, the "Original Floating Theater," ties up at Annapolis today perhaps for the last time. If plans go through, the showboat soon will be permanently attached to some wharf in this vicinity and turned into a movie theater.

"There aren't enough wharves left to tie up to, now that the steamboat traffic is about gone," said Capt. W. S. Cannon yesterday.

"It's hard to find a cast that will stay, too," he added. "It is a novelty, an adventure, at first, to the young ones, but they soon grow tired of acting and traveling all the time."

The Floating Theater has been playing to audiences all along the coast, from Charleston to Baltimore, for 28 years. They have played to country people at small river stops that have never seen a show before in their lives. And they have played to just as many "city people," who are seeking the novelty and thrill of such a show. Mrs. Nina Howard, of St. Michaels, Md., now owns the Showboat. James Adams, who is retired and living at Chesapeake City, Md., used to run it. In those days it was known as the James Adams Floating Theater.

And that was when real romance and glamor held sway on the Showboat. James Adams had a young sister, Beulah—small and dark, and very pretty. She played the romantic leads in all the plays, and a tall young man named Charles Hunter directed them. Then Charles began playing the hero to Miss Adams' heroine. At first it was just on the Showboat stage, but soon they were romancing in real life.

Brother James heartily disapproved, and forbade the pair to see each other except while acting their parts on the stage. But Beulah Adams and Charles Hunter were too much in love to be kept apart by anyone, and so every night after the show they would creep away up to the rain barrel on the top deck and meet secretly.

It is this same story of their love against the romantic background of a Southern river showboat that Edna Ferber captured and put into her book, "Showboat." She lived on the boat for three weeks to get material for the story. Now the only person on the boat who remembers those days is Capt. Cannon, who runs the tug, The Elk, that tows the floating theater. All others of the 30 people that travel with the boat have come within the last eight years.

After 28 Years, Showboat May Become a Movie Theater

Willkie to Open Drive in Kansas

would go to Maine or Minnesota for a short vacation. He has been invited to both States.

He added that he wants to spend a day or two in New York soon.

A "surprisingly great reaction" to his acceptance address at Elwood yesterday was reported by the nominee. He said he had received many telephone and telegraph messages and that they had been uniformly favorable.

Martin lunched with Willkie, and the nominee announced that the two had picked Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, "to polish off Ickes" early this week. Secretary Ickes will make a radio reply to Willkie's acceptance speech tomorrow night.

"I hope," Willkie said, "that Mr. Ickes doesn't make his usual type of talk. If he does, Mr. Bridges may have to get a little rough."

Willkie said he had "not heard a word from Washington" regarding his challenge to President Roosevelt to meet him in a series of "face to face debates" on major campaign issues.

"I am waiting patiently," he added with a grin.

The nominee said he still was considering making a Southern tour during the campaign. "If developments continue the way they are going now," he said, he certainly could go into Texas.

No formal addresses will be made before he goes to Coffeyville, Willkie said, "unless the President would like to meet me (in debate) before that."

"I will accommodate myself to any date he wants to fix," the nominee added.

Willkie said he would spend his time here working on his itinerary and his coming speeches. The topic of his Coffeyville talk has not yet been determined.

If he makes the West Coast trip Willkie said he probably would start his speechmaking in Los Angeles and then go north through San Francisco and other major cities to Seattle.

Hopes for "Big Train"

Willkie said he hoped that Walter Johnson, former Coffeyville resident and one-time "big train" on baseball, would introduce him at Coffeyville. Johnson is a Republican nominee for Congress in Maryland.

After his projected Western swing, Willkie said he probably would move through the Midwest and the East. No consideration yet has been given to a possible date for a Southern tour.

Willkie said that he "slept like a baby" last night after returning from Elwood. He was up by 6:30 o'clock this morning and drove at once with his son, Philip, to look over some of his five farms.

Later in the morning Mr. and Mrs. Willkie, Philip and Miss Mary Sleeth, the park manager, attended services at the First United Presbyterian Church, which is Mrs. Willkie's congregation.

The Rev. Frank E. Wiley, 30, who is serving his first pastorate here, used as his sermon topic "He Leadeth Me." It was one of a regular series and contained no personal reference to the nominee. It was not announced until shortly before the services that the Willkies would be present, but the news spread rapidly at the last minute and the brick building was crowded.

The minister invited those men wearing coats to remove them, but none did so. Willkie wore a gray suit. His wife was dressed in pale-blue crepe, with white turban and accessories.

A heavy rain fell here during the afternoon and a reporter remarked to Willkie at the press conference that he had solved t he local drought problem.

"Even a Presidential candidate must have some modesty," the nominee replied with a grin.

Community Meeting

A community meeting, sponsored by the Frederick Production Association, will be held at the high school building, Poolesville, Md., tomorrow night. C. Merrick Wilson, agricultural teacher at the Poolesville school, will preside.

Fire Does $200 Damage To Cement Storage Unit

Fire which started in a second-floor storage room of the Potomac Cement Storage Co., at 3031 K street northwest, yesterday caused an estimated $200 damage.

Firemen fought the blaze for an hour. Capt. J. E. Suit, of No. 5 Engine Co., believed the blaze was caused by spontaneous combustion.

W. P. Chrysler, Dies, Aged 65

City. Burial will be in Sleepy Hollow Cemetery at Tarrytown, N. Y.

Chrysler, son of a railroad engineer, was a native of Wamego, Kans. He founded the Chrysler Corporation, which has manufactured 8,000,000 cars, in 1925 after holding various executive posts with General Motors and other firms.

He held directorships in the Chrysler Corporation, W. P. Chrysler Building Corporation, General Foods Corporation, Automobile Manufacturers Association and the Madison Square Garden Corporation.

A descendant of Tuenis van Dolsen, the first male child born in New York City (then New Amsterdam), Chrysler rose from a machinist apprentice with a railroad to a position among the great motor car manufacturers in a motor car age.

Chrysler, chairman of the board of the Chrysler Corporation, was reputed to be "the most insured man in the world." One report said in 1931 he had taken out $12,000,000 in life insurance policies.

Early in the decade he built "as a personal investment" the then tallest building in the world, the Chrysler Tower, which is topped in the metropolitan midtown only by the Empire State Building.

While he dabbled in other machines, like the rotor airship which was talked about in 1930, automobiles remained Chrysler's business from early in the century until his death.

Chrysler campaigned against prohibition in 1932. He accepted chairmanship of the Crusaders' Victory Campaign in New York, because he believed prohibition was a "failure."

Windsor Attends Services; Duchess 'Under Weather'

Nassau, Bahamas, Aug. 18 (AP).—The Duke of Windsor, the Bahamas' new governor, attended morning prayer at the 180-year Christ Church Cathedral today, but the Duchess—described as "literally under the weather"—stayed away.

The Windsors arrived yesterday in Nassau's worst heat wave of the year.

Faith Declared Needed to End World Turmoil

Materialism Must Go, McCulloch Tells Guild Meeting

Faith and the exclusion of materialistic philosophy are needed to help remedy the turmoil in the world today, Brian McCulloch told his listeners at the Catholic Evidence Guild meeting in Franklin Park yesterday afternoon.

If the world would possess the faith that gives rise to the love of God and love of one's neighbor, "perhaps we would not see the turmoil and destruction that have shattered and altered the map of Europe," he said.

"To establish the brotherhood of man it is necessary to avoid materialistic philosophy which would place the machine over man," he said. Then, he added, "we must search for a basis for the human love between individuals which will exclude the hatred that gives rise to war."

At the same meeting Roland Murphy said: "Mankind cannot be drawn God-ward until the divine precept of charity to all becomes a vital reality among nations."

Leo Foley, speaking at the Catholic Evidence Guild meeting in Public Library Park last night, said: "God desires the submission of free men. Jesus never cowed men into believing in His divinity. He permitted them then, as He does today, to remain in unbelief if they so wish. But he supplied proofs which did then and do now convince men who are willing to learn from God."

Woman Burned Fighting Fire Raging in Home

A 57-year-old woman was burned early yesterday when she attempted to put out flames in the living room of her home at 33 Girard street northeast.

Mrs. Sophie Todd told police she returned home after taking care of a sick friend to find her living room in flames, while her husband, Herbert, lay asleep in the bedroom.

Mrs. Todd awakened her husband and attempted to beat out the fire. She was treated at Sibley Hospital for second-degree burns on the hands, face and neck. Todd was uninjured.

'Hound-Dog' Sought For Rip Van Winkle Play

A "shaggy hound-dog, brown, unkempt and nondescript," is sought as a star for the forthcoming production of Rip Van Winkle by the Washington Players at the Sylvan Theater Tuesday, August 27. A public try-out of potential canine performers will be held at the Sylvan Theater Wednesday at 3 p. m.

A group of 30 children from the Columbia Recreation Center Playground and the Bancroft and Cooke Playgrounds will take part in the play. The part of Meenie, the daughter of Rip Van Winkle, will be taken by Betty Ann Eilers of the Bancroft Playground. William Rogers, of East Washington Community Center, will play the part of young Hendrick Vedder.

D. C. Attorney Elected By Hellenic Group

District Girl Marks Debut With Orchestra With Excellent Performance; Conductor Gives Program an 'Old Home Night' Air

By Ray C. B. Brown

Kurt Hetzel conducted the National Symphony Orchestra last night at the Potomac Watergate, with Betty Baum as soloist. Program: Overture to "La Gazza Ladra" (Rossini), Symphony in E minor (Brahms), Pianoforte Concerto in F minor (Arenski), Prelude to "Lohengrin" (Wagner), Suite No. 2 from "L'Arlesienne" (Bizet).

Having provided a succession of guest conductors, transient soloists and visiting opera companies since the series was opened by Hans Kindler, the summer concerts committee of the National Symphony Orchestra Association so arranged matters for last evening's proceedings at the Potomac Watergate that the program had the air of an Old Home Night. Kurt Hetzel, whose most recent service to the community was the lifting of the Civic Orchestra from the doldrums, occupied the podium, and Betty Baum, talented young resident pianist, was the soloist. Their hearty reception by a large audience approved the committee's choice and paid honors to local musicianship.

While the attendance will not go into the record as a capacity throng, the wide flight of steps was filled solidly from end to end, and the chairs on the terrace were empty only on the flanks where the locations are less desirable. The evening was one ideal for music in the open, with a full moon resplendent in a cloudless sky, and no augury of rain to disturb the equanimity of the listeners.

Dr. Hetzel opened his program with the lively overture to Rossini's, "The Thieving Magpie," which has not been heard here at a symphony concert for a considerable time. Built on a few of the catchy tunes that Rossini invented so easily, it is a perfect example of his skill in making a little material go a long way. Its combination of instrumental brilliance and meager thought was a foil to the intellectual and emotional weight of Brahms' fourth symphony which followed.

Had "Dry" Reputation

There was a time, not so long ago, when this symphony had the reputation of being inaccessible and dry for the average auditor. But it has gradually come to be recognized as a notable revelation of the composer's personality and the most subjective of his symphonic utterances. Its objective aspect was best described by August Kretzschmar who compared it to "a great autumnal landscape, a composition built upon a theme which filled the soul of Brahms, as formerly it would have filled the soul of old Bach."

The elegiac character of the work as a whole does not lead to a depression of spirit in the listener because the sturdy optimism of Brahms never sinks into melancholy. The quiet and wistful opening, so like a German folksong, is the entrance upon a virile struggle for the dominance of faith over discouragement. The slow movement is eloquent with the tenderness and the simple sincerity with which Brahms unpacked his heart when in a communicative mood.

Dr. Hetzel read the symphony with understanding of its essential message and with a convincing authority. He dispensed with the score and showed his familiarity with the work by the alertness of his cues and the precision of his phrasings.

Betty Baum Pleases

Betty Baum, who is no stranger on the recital platform, signalized her debut with an orchestra by reviving Anton Arenski's F minor piano concerto, and gave an excellent account of her technical facility in the first local performance of that interesting work. Arenski is one of those unfortunate composers who suffer neglect for no reason that one can discover. One of his suites for two pianos is played to the verge of boredom, but the majority of his compositions gather dust undeservedly.

The concerto is in the Lisztian style throughout the first movement in which there are also some sideglances at Schumann. The lyric theme has a lovely cadence and its treatment is pianistic. In the andante, Arenski's personality comes to the fore, and one is aware that he has original things to say, while the scherzo-finale is brilliant in form and highly imaginative in content.

Dr. Hetzel completed his program with the prelude to "Lohengrin" and the second suite drawn from Bizet's incidental music to Daudet's "L'Arlesienne." His auditors gave him a rousing reward of applause and demanded some extra numbers. He responded with the "Westminster" movement from Eric Coates' "London" suite, and the Johann Strauss waltz, "Roses From the South."

250 Alumnae Attend Mass, Hear Bishop

More than 250 graduates of schools and colleges conducted by the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur assembled at Trinity College yesterday for a pontifical mass at which the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, Auxiliary Bishop of Washington and Baltimore, officiated.

Bishop McNamara told them that the only way to show appreciation to their teachers "is the sharing of their teaching with those with whom they come in daily contact."

The delegates, who came from all sections of the country to the eighth triennial convention of the international federation of their alumnae, attended a breakfast at the college after the mass.

Proposed canonization of Blessed Mother Julie, who founded the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur, was discussed at a meeting presided over by Miss Mary Quinn, of Washington, second vice president of the group. Destruction of the Motherhouse of the order in Namur, Belgium, during the Nazi invasion was also discussed.

At a reception held yesterday afternoon at Notre Dame Academy a bouquet of 50 yellow roses was presented to Sister Mary Borromeo, of Philadelphia, who is celebrating her golden jubilee as a member of the order and who taught at Notre Dame Academy here for many years.

U. S. Attorney Edward M. Curran and the Most Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, Titular Bishop of Bilta and rector of Catholic University, will speak at a banquet to be held at 7:30 p. m. today at the Mayflower Hotel. The convention will close its session Tuesday.

Rites Tomorrow For Mr. Falvey

Funeral services for Mrs. Elizabeth Jones Falvey, 65, widow of Thomas R. Falvey, will be held at 10:30 a. m. tomorrw at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Brewer, Rockville, Md., followed by burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery, Frederick, Md.

Mrs. Falvey died suddenly of a heart attack at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Brewer Saturday. She was a native and former long time resident of Rockville. She was the daughter of the late Col. Spencer C. Jones, who was for many years treasurer of Maryland and at one time president of the Maryland State Senate. For the past several years, she had been living in Washington.

Luin Short Buried

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 18.—Funeral for Luin Short, who died suddenly at his home on Druid avenue, were held this afternoon. The Rev. R. C. Barbour, pastor of the Hinton Avenue Methodist Church, officiated. Interment was in Monticello Memorial Park.

Mr. Short was born and reared at Luray, Page County, son of the late James and Charlotte Jane Short. He was 74.

Potomac Rises 18 Inches; More Rain Predicted

Fed by rain-swollen mountain streams of the upper Shenandoah, the Potomac River rose 1½ feet at Washington yesterday as the Weather Bureau predicted more rain for the District today.

At Leiter Gauge, 5 miles above Key Bridge, the river rose 4.3 feet. Only the long dry spell that preceded Saturday's downpour prevented a dangerous condition, Weather Bureau flood experts said. The Leiter Gauge level was only 1.5 feet before the rise. The danger level is 10 feet.

Yesterday's long stretch of sunshine, the first in several days, brought more than 2,000 sightseers to the National Zoological Park, police reported. The mercury soared to 87 degrees at 2:45 p. m. from a morning low of 72 degrees at 6 a. m.

Young Democrats Elect Officers Tonight

Annual election of officers of the Young Men's Democratic Club, of Silver Spring will be held tonight at a meeting at 8 p. m. in the hearing room of the Liquor Control Board Building, East-West highway.

T. S. Taliaferro, Kin of Gen. Lee, Dies in Wyoming

Word was received in Alexandria, Va., yesterday of the death Saturday morning of Thomas Seddon Taliaferro, 78, at his home in Rock Springs, Wyo. Mr. Taliaferro was born in Gloucester Courthouse, Va., the son of the late Maj. Thomas Seddon Taliaferro, C. S. A., and Harriet Lee Taliaferro, a cousin of Gen. Robert E. Lee.

He had lived in Rock Springs for the past 60 years, practicing law, and was attorney for the Union Pacific Railroad. He was president of the First National Bank of Rock Springs. He was a thirty-third degree Mason.

Mr. Taliaferro is survived by his wife, the former Miss Lucy Ramsay, of Alexandria, who is National Democratic Committeewoman from Wyoming, and also the first vice regent from that State to the Mount Vernon Regents Association. Surviving are five sons and two daughters, all living in Wyoming; two sisters, Mrs. Thomas Wyethe, of California, and Mrs. Jeffry G. A. Montague, of Gloucester, Va.

Criticism Of Willkie Stirs Forum

D. C. Overcharged $2,871,000 in Power Rates, Says Rankin In Hot Radio Debate

Three Senators and three Representatives, debating public power, last night converted a radio forum into a bitter battleground of the Presidential campaign.

Senator Schwartz (Democrat), of Wyoming, charged that Republican Candidate Wendell L. Willkie attempted to "hamstring" the Tennessee Valley Authority by continuous court action from 1934 through 1939 to have the TVA declared unconstitutional. He added:

"What he would do to public power in this country if by some unfortuate circumstance he should be elected to office. . . , Well, it would be a crime."

Bender Responds

This sally went unanswered for the moment, but when Representative John Rankin (Democrat), of Mississippi, father of TVA legislation in the House, loosed a blast at Willkie and "other Republicans" for "fighting TVA, public power and cheaper rates," Representative George Bender (Republican), of Ohio, responded:

"John, this man Willkie certainly burns you up, doesn't he?"

"Well," snapped Rankin, "I'll be satisfied just as long as he doesn't burn the people down with his electric rates by getting elected."

"You just watch his dust," Bender taunted.

"It'll take more than a power magnate to beat Roosevelt," Schwartz yelled as Senators Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, and Bone (Democrat), of Washington, and Representative Everett Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, plunged into the debate in a free-for-all exchange that drowned out each individual voice.

The charge from Senator Schwartz that Willkie, as president of Commonwealth and Southern, had contributed $17,500 to a campaign to defeat public power in a Chattanooga (Tenn.) referendum brought Dirksen to his feet shouting.

"The TVA," Dirksen said, "set up offices in Chattanooga to coerce Federal employes into voting for the bond issue (to finance public power plant construction.)"

More than 400 persons in the Willard Hotel ballroom and a radio audience all over the country heard Rankin declare that private power companies are "wringing from the unprotected users of electricity" more than $1,000,000,000 a year in excess charges.

District residents, he asserted, are overcharged $2,871,000 a year. Other State overcharges, he said, included $10,737,000 for residents of Virginia and $12,309,000 for residents of Maryland.

These figures, he said, are arrived at by comparing the rates of private power companies with the rates of the city-owned and operated Tacoma (Wash.) Electric System.

Defends Public Ownership

When Republican members of the panel declared that private companies were forced to charge higher rates because of the high tax burden, which Government-owned plants do not bear, Rankin replied:

"Private power companies throughout the United States (in 1936) paid only 13.2 per cent of their gros revenues, while the Tacoma Electric System paid more than 16 per cent of its gross revenues in taxes, cash contributions and free services."

In a prepared speech at the beginning of the program, Senator Bridges asserted that "New Deal fellow travelers have built themselves a mighty political machine" through public power projects.

Terming the navigation and flood-control benefits of the TVA "obviously phony" and the yardstick power rates of the Government plant "bogus," Bridges declared that "the public ownership movement constitutes a combination of commercial and political racketeers."

He declared that the record of public ownership "is rotten with proved charges of corruption and bribery of city officials" and claimed that public power is part of the New Deal program of "spending other people's money" and "putting the Government in business."

The low rates of the TVA he said, are the result of subsidization from the Federal Treasury.

The program was carried over the Mutual Broadcasting System's American Forum of the Air, directed by Theodore Granik.

D. C. Chinese Shoots Intruder, Police Capture Suspect, 19

Prisoner, Wounded In Elbow, Is Placed In Gallinger

A trail of blood led to the capture of a suspected housebreaker a few blocks from where he had been shot and wounded by a Chinese restaurant proprietor yesterday.

Jung Donald, proprietor of a restaurant at 915 Fourth street southwest, told police he had retired to his apartment above the restaurant shortly after 4 a. m. yesterday when he saw a figure lurking by a window in the rear of his bedroom.

Jung seized a .32-caliber revolver from his dresser and ran to his rear porch where he saw a man leap to the yard below. He fired one shot, he said, hoping to frighten the intruder into surrender. When the man continued running Jung, too, leaped from the porch and fired two more shots as the man rounded the corner of a garage.

Jung called police and later assisted Officer R. S. Best of the Fourth Precinct in following a trail of blood from the scene to 224 H street southwest, where the policeman arrested Robert Henderson, 19, colored. Henderson was taken to Gallinger Hospital, treated for a bullet wound in the right elbow and placed under police guard.

Capital News in Brief

Two Shoeless Fraternity Men Chase Thief Through Streets

John Gilpin and Phil Sheridan had horses, but two young men of Kappa Sigma fraternity house didn't even have shoes in their wild chase of a burglar through northwest Washington early yesterday.

George Stakeman, 22, an employe of the Census Bureau, and William McElroy, 23, a guide at the Capitol, found money had been stolen from their room at the fraternity house, 1803 Nineteenth street northwest, two weeks ago. In the dawn of yesterday a colored man the two believe is the same thief came back.

Awakened, McElroy let fly an ink bottle. The housebreaker fled with Stakeman in shorts and McElroy in pajamas hot behind him. They raced through streets and alleys, commandeered an auto, lost their quarry, found him again. Like Gilpin they weren't sure just where they went.

Like Sheridan they arrived in time. On Sixteenth street between T and S streets the man was run to ground with the aid of a police scout car.

Runaway Auto Knocks Over Lamppost

A car parked on a hill on Quarry road northwest yesterday slipped its brakes, knocked over a lamppost and ended in a front yard after crashing through a hedge fence.

The runaway car, which belonged to a used car concern, was parked at Quarry road and Summit place by John W. Mattis, 1702 Summit place, a salesman, police said. The car struck the lamp post in front of 2812 Quarry road and stopped in the front yard of Mr. and Mrs. Dagmar Osterwald, across the street at 2815 Quarry road.

Only damage to the automobile was a broken front bumper and a few dents in the fenders.

Six D. C. Cadets Win Honors at Citadel

Six Washington youths made records placing them in the upper half of their classes at The Citadel, the military college of South Carolina at Charleston, the college's official register of the 1939-40 session announced yesterday.

Justice Roberts' Home Ransacked, Wine Missing

The home of Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts at 1401 Thirty-first street northwest was found broken into early yesterday morning by Policeman K. P. Folson. Justice Roberts has been on vacation in Kimberton, Pa., since May.

A check-up of the house by Albert J. Schneider, secretary to the justice, revealed that the rooms had been ransacked but that only three bottles of Portugal Madeira wine were missing.

Snack-Hunting Children Burned

An early morning snack-hunting expedition into the kitchen of their home resulted in second degree burns for two children yesterday.

Stanley Monzigo, 7, of 13 K street northeast, and his 9-year-old playmate, Joan Clark, awoke at 3:30 a. m. yesterday and ventured into the kitchen in search of food.

Stanley's mother, Mrs. Eleanor Monzigo, had placed a grease-filled frying pan upon the stove to prepare a meal for a roomer who had arrived home late. The children upset the pan and were sprayed with grease.

At Sibley Hospital both were treated for severe burns to the right hand and arm.

Woman's Death Follows Broken-Mirror Omen

Injured when a mirror she was dusting fell upon her 10 days ago, Mrs. Margaret Stover, 52, of 1701 Nineteenth street northwest, died last night at Emergency Hospital.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald set an autopsy for today to determine the cause of her death.

The large mirror, in the hallway of Mrs. Stover's home, broke when it fell upon her August 8, and she was taken to Emergency with a fractured shoulder and head lacerations.

U. S. Should Urge Truce, Pastor Says

Calvary Baptist Congregation Hears Plan to Halt European War

A four-fold plan for the United States to promote a settlement of the European strife was advocated yesterday by the Rev. R. N. Dutton, of Elmira, N. Y., in a sermon at Calvary Baptist Church.

"We ought to use every influence to bring about an armistice before the nations have devastated each other, and to call a world conference for peace," said the visiting minister, who is patsor of the First Baptist Church in Elmira.

He said that the United States should stay out of the war, not to isolate itself, but that "we may be the custodians of democracy and peace." A fourth point in his plan was that the United States should give of its resources "to the feeding of the hungry and the clothing of the naked."

The Rev. Mr. Dutton warned: "Don't be guilty of the blasphemy of asking: If there is a God, why does He allow such things as are happening today?" He said that present European events are "a natural and perhaps inevitable result of circumstances" set up during and after the last war.

"It would be a mad world," he said, "if nations could create peace by merely signing a paper."

"No longer should we ask: 'Why doesn't God do something about it?' Rather we should say: 'Why don't we let God do something about it through us?'" he said.

Dr. Chesteen Smith, guest preacher for the summer at Foundry Methodist Church, said in his sermon last night:

"Some people raise the question: 'Why does not God intervene in behalf of the aims and ideals of democracy?'

"Why should He do so, in view of the fact that our democracy is predominantly pagan?" Dr. Smith asked.

"There is no trend that should cause greater alarm than that toward pagan living," he added. Dr. Smith is a retired Methodist minister who lives in Washington.

Chaplain H. D. Southard, of the United States Army, who is stationed at Arlington Cantonment, told the congregation at Columbia Heights Christian Church in a sermon yesterday:

"The church has the only panacea for war. It is love."

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'New' Universal Points With Pardonable Pride!

Rehabilitated Company Pats Self on Back; 'Leading Lady' of 'Our Gang' Now Vocal Star; This, That and the Other About the Theater

WITH TWO BOX-OFFICE HITS winding up its 1939-40 feature release schedule—"The Boys from Syracuse," now on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater, and "When the Daltons Rode," yet to be seen in the Capital—the company which designates itself, and with some justification, the "New" Universal lets go with a double-barreled bit of bragging.

BELL

It points out first that the 1939-40 output was thickly peppered with popular hits, citing "Destry Rides Again," "It's a Date," "My Little Chickadee" and "If I Had My Way," among others, as tangible proof. But its major stress is placed upon the quality of the releases already ticketed by the shipping clerks for distribution during September and October, to launch the 1940-41 season. Among the 10 productions to be shot to the screens of the country between September 6 and October 25, it lays claim to at least three smash hits—a good percentage in any man's league.

The 10 pictures fretting on the shelves are "Hired Wife," costarring Rosalind Russell and Brian Aherne, with Virginia Bruce and Robert Benchley; "Argentine Nights," starring the rabid Ritz Brothers, with the Andrews Sisters, Constance Moore and Peggy Moran; "Leather Pushers," with Richard Arlen, Andy Devine and Astrid Allwyn; "Mummy's Hand," with Dick Foran, Wallace Ford and Eduardo Ciannelli; "Ragtime Cowboy Joe," starring Johnny Mack Brown, with Fuzzy Knight and Nell O'Day; "Spring Parade," Deanna Durbin's next, in which she will be supported by Robert Cummings, Mischa Auer, Butch and Buddy and Anne Gwynne; "Diamond Frontier," starring Victor McLaglen and Anne Nagel, with Philip Dorn and John Loder; "Seven Sinners," the new one for Marlene Dietrich, with John Wayne, Mischa Auer, Oscar Homolka, Broderick Crawford and Albert Dekker importantly cast; "Slightly Tempted," with Hugh Herbert, Peggy Moran, Johnny Downs and Gertrude Michael—and where has she been hiding all this time?—and "Little Bit of Heaven," starring Gloria Jean, with Robert Stack, Helen Parrish, Louis Howard, Nan Grey, C. Aubrey Smith and Billy Gilbert.

And which will be the "three smash hits?" One guess is as good as another, but mine would be that they will be found in "Hired Wife," "Spring Parade" and "Seven Sinners," with "Argentine Nights" the possible runner-up, depending upon how you feel about the Ritz boys.

Perhaps a reminder is in order that there will be no Summer Festival program at the Sylvan Theater, on the Monument Grounds, tomorrow night, for reasons that already have been explained. On Tuesday, August 27, however, the Washington Players will break out their production of "Rip Van Winkle," the enduring classic made famous by the immortal Joe Jefferson. Mind bets are being made along the Rialto that this offering will prove the record-breaking attraction of the Sylvan's al fresco season. The Washington Players did it with "Alice in Wonderland" and "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and the "wise money" thinks they can do it again. They have an audience of 20,000 to shoot at, to top their own record.

"Cocktail Time" is the title Gene Ford has given his new stage revue, opening Friday at Loew's Capitol Theater. It will be headlined by Jean Darling, whose likeness—I hope—appears somewhere on this page. In case you do not immediately identify Miss Darling, she was the original "leading lady" in the "Our Gang" comedies. Jean now has grown up into a beautiful John Powers model and a singer of unusual promise. Tempus fugits on, as the voice of "March of Time" does not say.

With the days shrinking and our theoretical moonlight nights lengthening, performances at the Mount Vernon, open-air, drive-in theater, down there a few miles south of Alexandria on the Richmond highway, now begin at 7:30 p. m. This advanced schedule permits two complete showings of the double-feature bills before midnight. As autumn continues to advance, so will the Mount Vernon's starting hours.

Beginning with a late public preview tomorrow night, the Little Theater will join the parade of houses presenting completely goofy laugh shows, as escape from the grim realities of war, etc., etc. "Sandy Is a Lady" will be the item to chase "Rose Marie" off the Ninth street screen. Most of us have known Sandy's secret from the start!

Quick-Boy-the-Nerve-Tonic Note

"The Sea Hawk," coming into the Earle with Errol Flynn in the original Milton Sills role, and "Boom Town," with Clark Gable, Claudette Colbert, Spencer Tracy and Hedy Lamarr, next at Loew's Palace, are being previewed for the guys and gals of the press today and tomorrow. Tough on the blood pressure!

No Doubt the Money Is in That Handbag!

JOHN LITEL, BRENDA MARSHALL AND JEFFREY LYNN

as they will be seen in three of the principal roles in the Warner Brothers production of "Money and the Woman," announced as the next screen attraction at the Metropolitan Theater. A bank clerk's shortage has something to do with the plot of this picture, in which Lee Patrick, Henry O'Neill, Roger Pryor and Guinn "Big Boy" Williams also appear

News Coverage, Nice Shorts At Trans-Lux

Unusually Meaty Bill Supplies Entertainment Of Wide Variety

Undoubtedly the outstanding foreign pictures at the Trans-Lux Theater this week are those from inside France and Great Britain. The French pictures show the rapid demobilization of troops, ordered back to the farms and their prewar jobs. From Great Britain are excellent films showing the splendid equipment and morale of both the air and land forces, fully prepared for any invasion. Air patrol pictures over the English Channel are particularly fine. Other war items include Winston Churchill touring defenses; the second division of Canadians arriving in England; Italian prisoners of war landed at Alexandria, and Marshal Petain conferring with the French farmers.

Japan Inspects Philippines

In the Far East a Japanese admiral inspects the health of Japanese in the Philippines. Over here, President Roosevelt completes his tour of defense inspection, while in Washington the machinery for alien registration is set in motion. At Colorado Springs, Willkie confers with Alf. Landon and Gen. Hugh Johnson. Devastation caused by the South Carolina hurricane and the Louisiana floods is vividly portrayed, plus the burning of the freighter "Lista" in New York Harbor.

Following Lew Lehr's monkeys comes a complete sports coverage for the week. There is the Hambletonian trotting classic at Goshen, N. Y., with Spencer Scott winner; Elizabeth Hicks winning Western golf title; the Jacobs-Marble and Riggs-McNeil tennis matches at Akron, Ohio, and football training at Evanston, Ill. For the ladies, the latest in new hair styles and fall hats.

Shorts Excel

In the realm of short subjects will be found the latest "Information Please" with Deems Taylor, famous composer and musical critic, again the guest star.

"Our Constitution" is a first-run picture, depicting the drafting and signing of the Constitution. There is also a special subject showing the first Army housing project.

The cartoon of the week is another Disney, "Bone Trouble," this time starring "Pluto."

The New Yorker

(Harpo Marx, screen comedian, is today's guest columnist for Leonard Lyons, who is vacationing.)

HOLLYWOOD is the place where anything can happen and usually does. Here are some of the funny things which I've experienced, seen or heard around this tinsel city:

One night, Chico Marx (why not get my brothers in first?) couldn't go to sleep on account of a dog barking his head off. Finally Chico called the police. "Get out here and stop that neighbor's dog howling," he shouted.

HARPO

A half hour later someone rapped on his door. It was a policeman. The cop said, "Sorry Mr. Marx, but shutting that dog up is your duty. It's your own dog."

THEN THERE IS Groucho Marx (that's two brothers down) who went to San Francisco on a vacation. Newspaper photographers grabbed him as he came out of a hotel and pleaded for a typical Marx picture. So, while Groucho's wife and daughter stood by, Groucho looked up the street, saw 17-year-old twins approaching, leaped between them, held one's arm and tried to bite the cheek of the other. The girls thought he was nuts.

But the Groucho family invited the girls to visit them in Hollywood some time. They did—last week.

JOSEPH SCHILDKRAUT was attending a party not long ago and was chatting with a visiting woman from the East. Suddenly she said, "You ought to go into movies."

Schildkraut smiled and said, "No doubt you didn't hear my name. I am Joseph Schildkraut."

"Oh, that's all right," chirped the woman. "You can change your name."

ONE DAY RECENTLY, Clark Gable went to a hospital to see his favorite prop boy who was recovering from an operation. Clark got the rooms mixed and barged right into one where there was a strange woman patient. He bowed, apologized and retreated.

That evening, the woman's husband came to see her. "What do you think?" she asked. "Clark Gable was in my room today." The man's face went white; he patted his wife's hand. "There, there, my dear," he said. "You mustn't get upset."

"But, he did," the woman insisted. "He stood right there in the doorway."

Hurriedly, the man rang for the nurse so deliriums could be reported to the doctor. Fortunately, the nurse knew the true story.

OUT OF THE MOUTHS of children come some of the best. Susie Tracy, six-year-old daughter of the star Spencer, liked her voice on a home recording set and asked her father how much it cost to go on the radio. Tracy told her: "You don't pay them; they pay you for appearing." Whereupon, Susie gasped: "You mean to say you really got money for what you did on that program last Sunday?"

ONE OF THE BEST of all time occurred last winter when Frank Morgan flew to Palm Springs with Paul Lukas, who pilots his own plane. Lukas put a parachute on Frank and told him, "If anything goes wrong, I'll kick you and you bail out."

Halfway there, Frank was kicked. He rose to his feet and started to climb over the side of the ship. Lukas hauled him back.

Once in Palm Springs, Lukas asked: "What was the idea?"

"But you kicked me," Morgan protested.

"Good heavens, I forgot about that signal," laughed Lukas. "I was just trying to point out a house on fire."

WE GO BACK a few years for one of my favorites. William Morris, father of Chester, was a great Broadway star when suddenly Chester became a favorite and A. H. Woods wanted to star the youngster in "Fast Life." He got an idea to cast William Morris as Chester's stage father.

He wired the elder Morris: "Would you mind supporting Chester?"

"Why not?" was the answer. "I've supported him all his life."

SO NOW I come to myself. My little boy, Billy, is three and a half and I'd never been away from home for any length of time until we boys took to the road to try out "Go West." We were gone four weeks, then opened in Los Angeles. We flew in and went right to the theater to open at 10:30 that morning.

My wife, Susan, decided to bring Billy to the theater. He had never seen a show before. When the curtain went up and I walked out onto the stage, I saw Billy sitting in the front row.

He yelled, "Hi, Daddy!" then in a loud, pleading voice, added: "Please come home, Daddy."

It was the biggest laugh of the tour.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Aug. 18.

Remember that old saying "If Mohammed won't go to the mountain, the mountain will come to Mohammed?" That's what's happening today. When Col. Harman, Capt. Carol Starrie, director of Cadet Training Corps, and Capt. William Clinch arrive here in a bomber from San Antonio, Tex., to confer with Arthur Hornblow and Director Ted Reed about their production of "I Wanted Wings," which stars Bill Holden and Ray Milland. On the thirtieth of this month, at Randolph Field, San Antonio, around 1,500 cadets graduate—the picture company will be there photographing it.

It should be a thrilling sight, and if I can arrange to do one of my broadcasts down there, I'll be in the midst of it. The boys have nine months training, and next year they expect to graduate 7,500. You'll see Young America on the march and in the air in this picture. It's nice to be wanted for this because I played Buddy Rogers' mother in Paramount's first air picture, "Wings"—about 12 years ago.

Speaking of flying reminds me that Myrna Loy, who was so good in "Test Pilot,"—hasn't really had a good part since. Sure, she's been in good pictures, but in the last one, "I Love You Again," she didn't do much more than stooge for Bill Powell. Myrna's too good to stooge for anybody—even Bill.

Billy Rose, miniature mammoth master of the Aquacade, is still in town trying to buy 65 planes for his air show which he hopes to open next June at Newark Airport, with seating capacity for 75,000, with Paul Whiteman's music, and "Wrong Way" Corrigan for his comedian.

When RKO thought they couldn't get Bob Montgomery to play opposite Carole Lombard in "Mr. and Mrs. Smith," they sent the script to Jack Benny—he couldn't do it till November.

Did you know that Jack, Claudette Colbert, Basil Rathbone, and Lubitsch will do our first Screen Guild Radio Show?

Will Hays' office leveled off on children. Warners had to re-shoot a scene of Priscilla Lane bathing an eight-months-old baby. A piece of gauze was pinned on for the second bath.

Speaking of babies, Janet and Adrian's Robin is the prettiest one I've ever seen—with artistic hands like his father's, and the little monkey seems to know it. He keeps stretching them out, looking at them, instead of doubling them into fists like most—or have I forgotten about babies?

Director Garson Kanin showed me his latest present—a gold cigarette case from Miss Lombard. Inside was inscribed "To Garlest you forget. Amy Peters." Which shows, how Carole feels about her latest—"They Knew What They Wanted." No, all directors aren't so lucky—some of them never even get thanked.

The stars doing "Tonight at 8:30" this week at the El Capitan have certainly got into stride. Plays are beautifully produced, directed, clothed, and acted—and, joys of joys, you can hear 'em. A New York woman sitting next to me said, "I've never been so thrilled. Just think of being in the presence of so many stars."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Aug. 18 (INS).—The Warner crowd no more than got a look at Jawn Barrymore in his chin strap, in "The Great Profile," than they immediately started paging him for "The Man Who Came to Dinner"—and I ask you—who could be funnier in the Kaufman-Hart comedy? The one and only Barrymore is the talk of the town following his preview. The Brown Derby critics were airing their opinions like magpies when I walked in after the show. One group was saying that Barrymore had murdered the great tradition of the royal family of the stage by turning public clown No. 1 on the screen.

PARSONS

That's a lot of nonsense, if you ask me. It is true that no actor ever caricatured himself so hilariously, stalking around in his long underwear and falling into the orchestra pit. But only a great actor and a great star could be so uproariously funny.

"Las Vegas Nights" is a swell box-office title, because certainly every movie fan has heard about this Nevada town where so many movie stars are married. Bill le Baron thinks it is pretty hot, too, because last week he announced that it would not only be one of Para's biggest musicals, but that Ellen Drew, Lillian Cornell and Virginia Dale, the three pretty gals, who were such a hit in "Buck Benny Rides Again," would be reunited to decorate "Las Vegas." Allan Jones and Bert Wheeler are the boy friends and Ralph Murphy, who just signed a new ticket with Paramount, will direct.

Once a year all of Washington's top political lights gather to see themselves and their associates lampooned in a play put on by the Washington Gridiron Club in its annual frolic. The Gridiron gave Jerry Wald and Richard Macaulay a beeg idea. Why not do a Hollywood play patterned along the same lines? Sooo, here it is—"Hollywood Idiocies of 1941," destined to kid famous Hollywood personalities.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Wooley Donahue is Countess Dorothy di Frasso's house guest. He will be joined later by his mother, Mrs. James Donahue. Wooley and his bride have said adieu to marriage, Hollywood friends will be sorry to hear; Elsie de Wolfe reaches here Tuesday with her adopted son and entourage. She will be the house guest of Gaylord Hauser, Greta Garbo's heart beat. Speaking of Garbo and the food specialist, they were at "Tonight At 8:30" and both gave Noel Coward a hand when he walked in with Marlene Dietrich and Cary Grant. Barbara Hutton, who was supposed to attend, wasn't with Cary. She gave a party last Sunday night at which records of the guests were made.

Elsa Maxwell gave a dinner in Noel's honor last night. Three of our best prima donnas. Grace Moore, Jeanette MacDonald, and Irene Dunne were there. What an evening of music it was! Sorry I had to miss it; Pauline and Skeets Gallagher are spending their eleventh wedding anniversary at Del Mar, where they will be the guests of the bride and groom, Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Ruggles (Marcelle Rogez). Wish I could have gone down for the Bing Crosby preview but just couldn't get my job done.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Boston, Mass., Aug. 18.—We don't mean to startle anybody but there comes a time for fact-facing, namely; the Nats won't win the 1940 pennant. So let's kiss off what is happening to the Washington club this season and peer into 1941.

POVICH

Next year's Washington team will have the same manager. Bucky Harris is about as responsible for the Nats' failure to win the pennant as your aunt Katherine, who once inquired who plays third base when the third baseman is at bat. Some time between the end of the season and the first of November, Clark Griffith will summon Harris and the photographers, drape a paternal arm about Bucky's shoulder, and announce that for the sixth straight year Harris will manage the club.

The Nats can scarcely do worse than finish sixth this season, and that will be something of a feat for Harris. Beating out the Browns and Athletics may not be considered a lofty goal by other managers, but for Harris it is a fancy stunt, considering what he has had to work with. For a month he has been operating with six pitchers, when such as Oscar Vitt has been squawking to the front office because he has only 11 pitchers on his staff.

Harris has earned another shot at the job if only for his work with young Sid Hudson. We doubt that another manager in the league would have had the same patience and faith in a rookie from Class D baseball who lost seven games in a row at the start of the season. With any other club, Hudson would have been on his way to the minors early in May. Harris kept shooting him back in there, his defeats notwithstanding. Bucky simply uncovered $100,000 worth of pitcher in young Hudson.

Hudson and Ken Chase, with perhaps Dutch Leonard. They'll bear the brunt of the Nats' 1941 pitching. Leonard may or may not be around. The Detroit Tigers and the Boston Red Sox are prepared to bid high for him. He'll be 31 next year and Griffith has a way of unloading elderly players if he can drive a hard bargain. Leonard is powerful trading material.

There isn't a young pitcher in the Washington farm system, with perhaps one exception, who merits transportation expenses to Griffith Stadium. The exception may be Louis Thuman, a husky right-hander who is Charlotte's best pitcher, and who never impressed the Nats in spring training. But he had begun to blossom nicely in the Piedmont League. He'll get another chance.

Joe Krakauskas will be wearing another uniform. Sure as shooting the Nats will trade him. They're fed up on Krakky, who hasn't won a game this season. The White Sox want him, the Indians want him and the Browns want him. The likelihood is that he'll be traded to the Browns for Outfielder Chet Laabs. Bucky wants Laabs. He visualizes in him the answer to the Nats' centerfield worries.

Washington's outfield, barring the acquisition of Laabs, threatens to be the same, worse luck. Gee Walker's bat will keep him in left field, and George Case's speed on the bases will keep him in center, although it is only Case's threat of speed that keeps him in the big leagues. Buddy Lewis is not a good right fielder, but you can't bench his bat.

The only guy on the club Griffith won't trade, aside from Hudson and Chase, is Cecil Travis. He's so far the best third baseman in the league he can't be replaced. But he's the only fixture in the Washington infield.

Jimmy Pofahl will be back at shortstop chiefly because Griffith doesn't give up easily on a player in whom he has invested $35,000. And somehow, Pofahl's presence at shortstop does not appear to be a calamity. He can go and get that ball, and his arm is coming around. It is not good, but it may be good enough. And he hits enough to enable a fair-hitting club to carry him.

In any trade Griffith makes, he'll surely try to wangle a second baseman out of somebody. Buddy Myer will be 36, and Jimmy Bloodworth has not created any rhapsodies by his play. Bloodworth will be retained, no doubt, for his general utility value. He can hit certain kinds of pitching and he can play first base.

Up from Charlotte will come big Jack Sanford to get a shot at the first base job, and down from Jersey City will come Mickey Vernon shooting at the same goal. That battle should be exciting. Vernon will outfield Sanford, but Sanford will outhit him. The big fellow's line drives may rattle the fences at Griffith Stadium. The Nats can't lose at first base. If Sanford wins the job, Washington will have a slugging first baseman. If Vernon wins, they'll have a fancy fielder who can also hit. They're both dead fish in the infield, incidentally.

The catcher will be Rick Ferrell. Down South next spring folks won't be so hasty in considering Ferrell's job to the rookies Jake Early or Al Evans. They can't carry his mitt. If Rick was worrying about his job last spring, it was needless. That's been apparent all year.

We just thought you'd like to know all these things.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Aug. 18.—Reeling around:

BASEBALL—It'll soon be time for one of those National League teams to get hot and win 21 straight. Doesn't it always happen? One team opens up a lead through the dog days and the boys' wives start worrying over whether to buy the linx jacket or the mink coat with the world series check when, drat it, some ornery club comes from nowhere and either wins the pennant or comes so close to it that the beleagured winner goes into the series as wan and wasted as those gosh-awful marathon dancers who used to plague us.

CONSIDINE

Just for the novelty of it, we think it would be nice if Cincinnati now lashed out and won the pennant like a man. It didn't exactly stagger into the title last year, but the Cards shaved the Reds' finishing margin to four games during that last-minute rush for the wire. At one time last season the Reds were 12 games out of front, and breezing. The Giants backed in in 1933, the Cards swept in with a strong finish in 1934, booting out the Giants, who had a seven-game lead going into September. In 1935 the Cubs won a peck of games in a row to nip the Cards and in 1938 they collared the Pirates right at the tape, a home run under cover of darkness, by Gabby Hartnett, climaxing the spurt.

The Reds have made baseball history by drawing a million customers in a town of less than half a million, and its great Walters and Derringer will long be remembered in baseball history. But we'd like to see it do something really historic. We'd like to see it win a National League pennant in such a way as to obviate all the "ifs" of the team that finished second. The Reds seem to be emerging slowly from the slump every rival was wishing on them for weeks before that. There is nothing much to worry about, now that Peewee Reese is out of the Brooklyn line-up for the season. We'd just like to see a National League club come through with a flourish on its campaign promises of June, July and August. We're tired of seeing 'em back in.

GOLF—If fat Ed Oliver had engaged in the playoff for the United States Open championship, and, like Gene Sarazen, been beaten by the sizzling play of Lawson Little, you'd have trouble remembering his name now. But he was disqualified for starting his final round too early and never got in the playoff.

Now it developes that Oliver will make more money because he was ruled out of the playoff than he ever could have made if he had gotten in and been licked, or perhaps even if he had won. He made a nice pile on his exhibition tour with Little. But he'll make even more on his current tour with Sarazen. He gets 30 per cent of the gates at daily exhibitions and has been making between $400 and $500 a week.

HORSES—Can the racing game be realizing its own stupidity? The land, as usual, is full of burned out thoroughbreds of three years old and upwards. They were seared to a cinder by being run too young and too often, and don't mention Seabiscuit, for he was an exception. A lot of horsemen will tell you that the thoroughbred never was intended to run six furlongs, any more than the elephant was intended to broad-jump.

Now, all of a sudden, the turf has become reinterested in distance races. Young Al Vanderbilt is offering $50,000 for a 2½-mile race at Belmont this fall. W. L. Brann made Challedon eligible for it the other day. Out at Washington Park in Chicago on Wednesday a 3⅜-mile race will be staged, and on the following Wednesday there will be a 4-miler. The 3⅜ mile distance has not been run before, but there have been four-mile races, most of them in the past. The record for the distance is 7:10 4-5, set at Churchill Downs in 1912 by Sotemia. The 2½ mile record was set by Kyrat in Newport, Ky., in 1899. It is 5:24 1-2.

On the surface, distances of this nature sound exhausting. But experienced trainers will tell you that such tests are a lot easier on the horses concerned than those fiery little sprints which break down the tissues of colts and fillies just out of the yearling class.

Bees Beaten, 7-2, 3-1; Camilli and Walker Hit Homers In First Game

By International News Service

New York, Aug. 18.—The Dodgers continued their uphill fight to capture first place in the National League today by taking Boston in both ends of a doubleheader, 7 to 2 and 3 to 1.

Homers by Dolf Camilli and Dixie Walker, and a double by Joe Medwick with the bases loaded, sparked Brooklyn's ten-hit assault on losing Pitcher Jim Tobin in the opener. Whitlow Wyatt, meanwhile, chalked up his thirteenth victory of the year by scattering seven hits. Chet Ross hit his thirteenth homer of the season for Boston.

In the nightcap, Luke Hamlin, minus his home run ball, outpitched Bill Posedel. Hamilton allowed only seven hits and was in hot water only in the fifth when the Bees scored their lone marker. Brooklyn collected 11 bingles off Posedel, scoring one run in each the first, third and eighth frames.

Cameo, Heurich Meet Today In Play-Off

Furniture Men Defeat Bowling Green Nine, 8 to 3, in Prep

With a fair "break" from the weather, the play-off between Cameo A. C. and Heurich Brewers for the second-half championship of The Washington Post Industrial League will be resumed today on the Ellipse at 4:30 p. m.

Already owning one victory in the two-out-of-three series, Cameo will be putting everything into today's game in the hope of closing out action. Then another three-game series would begin tomorrow for the league title, Heurich boasting the first-half crown and Cameo the second.

Either Ottie Printz or Frank Deavers, the latter victor in the first game last week, will hurl for the Furniture club today. The Beermen will counter with Lacey, and the respective catchers will be Schwab and Collier.

Meanwhile, Cameo kept itself warmed up for today's effort by tripping the Caroline A. C., of Bowling Green, Va., by an 8-3 count yesterday. Hahn allowed the losers four scattered safeties. The big inning for Cameo was the eighth, when half of its total number of runs were tallied.

Man of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

By Arch McDonald

Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

There were meager honors for the Nats yesterday at Boston, but such as they were they belong chiefly to Ken Chase.

To Chase, five points, because he kept the Nats in the ball game for six innings by holding the Red Sox to two runs until the seventh.

To Cecil Travis, four points, because his single led to the Nats' first run, and because he hit the ball hard all afternoon despite getting only one safe blow.

To George Case, three points, because he saved at least two runs with his leaping catch of Tabor's sixth-inning drive against the wall.

Ken Chase	45
Sidney Hudson	43
Cecil Travis	41
Gee Walker	31
Buddy Lewis	28
Jimmy Bloodworth	27
George Case	27
Jimmy Pofahl	21
Rick Ferrell	16
Sam West	14
Jack Early	12
Dutch Leonard	8
Buddy Myer	7
Joe Krakauskas	6
Rene Monteagudo	4
Johnny Welaj	3

BosoxSubdue Nats Behind Earl Johnson

Rookie Limits Griffs To Five Hits in Capturing 4-2 Game; Two Homers Help

By Shirley Povich.

Post Staff Writer

Boston, Aug. 18.—The Nats met up with young Earl Johnson again this afternoon and the pleasure was all Johnson's. The tall, loose-jointed left-hander whom the Red Sox fetched out of the Piedmont League a month ago, snubbed the Nats with five hits—all singles—and beat 'em, 4 to 2.

Young Johnson is the same fellow who shut the Nats out last week in Griffith Stadium. Then, as today, he beat Ken Chase in a pitching duel. He was performing this afternoon to the loud delight of 15,700 Boston customers, and his victory swept the three-game series for the Red Sox.

The Nats would probably prefer that no questions be asked concerning the two runs they did score. But we are an incurable tattletale. They scored their first run in the course of a run-down after Jimmy Pofahl was trapped off first base, and they didn't have much to do with scoring their second run. Johnson walked it across the plate with his third base on balls in the eighth inning.

Bosox Hit 2 Homers

The Red Sox didn't get their usual quota of home runs today but they checked in with a pair of late-inning circuit smashes that provided the necessary margin. Bobby Doerr and Dom DiMaggio were the boys today. They both lifted a pitch over the leftfield fence that stares all Fenway Park hitters in the face.

Chase was licked, but scarcely disgraced. He gave up eight hits to the Red Sox before he was removed for a pinch-hitter in the eighth, but he was holding them to two runs for six innings and keeping the Nats in the ball game. But the Nats were precious little help to themselves.

Two of their five hits were infield affairs. Cecil Travis singled to center in the second inning. Ferrell singled to left in the third, Lewis beat out a hit to Doerr in the fourth, Bloodworth singled to center in the eighth, and Walker beat out an infield hit in the ninth. That's all there were.

Nats Leave For Home

We forgot to mention that the Nats now have a thriving young four-game losing streak, and a record of two victories and five defeats for their swing into Philadelphia and Boston. They entrained for Washington tonight and will take on the Western clubs after an off-day tomorrow.

A cheap Washington run gave Chase a 1-to-0 lead in the second inning. Travis led off with his single and was forced by Bloodworth. With the help of Foxx's high throw, Bloodworth stole second and

Athletics Win Nightcap From Yanks, Lose 1st

Sundra Takes 9-1 Game In Opener; Babich Winner in Second, 7-3

By International News Service

Philadelphia, Aug. 18.—The Athletics defeated New York, 7 to 3, in the second game of a doubleheader today after the Yankees won the opener, 9 to 1, behind the six-hit pitching of Steve Sundra.

New York pasted young Porter Vaughan for three runs in the first inning. Gordon opened the frame with a single and then after retiring two players Vaughan walked two, threw two wild pitches and was nicked for a double by Buddy Rosar.

Sundra never relinquished the lead after that and was in trouble only in the sixth when Moses doubled and scored on Chapman's single.

A five-run rally in the fourth shelled losing Pitcher Marv Breuer to the showers and put the second game on ice for the Athletics. Johnny Babich went the distance for Philadelphia, allowing the Yanks only seven hits, including a homer by Joe Gordon in the eighth with the bases empty.

Frank Filchock Still Balking At Contract

By Al Hailey

A Staff Correspondent

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 18.—Frank Filchock, current problem child of the Redskins, arrived in camp today and announced that unless Owner George Marshall meets his 1940 contract demands he will give up professional football for baseball.

Filchock said he has an offer from the Detroit Tigers and that he will go back to the Tigers' farm in Fulton, Ky., if his contract isn't satisfactory. Frank has been playing with the Fulton farm club all summer as a centerfielder and when he left Saturday afternoon his batting average was .331.

The Redskins have made their final offer to the quarterback running and passing star, an increase of 33 1-3 per cent over his 1939 salary. At the same time, Marshall was in the midst of telephone conversations with Arch Ward, of Chicago, as to

Cards Sweep Pair From Rhinelanders

St. Louis Takes First Behind Cooper, 3-1; 3-Run Rally Aids In 5-4 Nightcap

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 18. (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals turned on their erstwhile "cousins," the Cincinnati Reds, today, defeating the champions, 3 to 1 and 5 to 4, to slash the lead of Deacon Bill McKechnie's crew to four and a half games over the second-place Brooklyn Dodgers.

The double victory, coming while Chicago was whipping Pittsburgh, advanced the Cardinals to fourth place and enabled Brooklyn to gain two full games on the Reds as the result of the Dodgers' sweep of a double-header at Boston.

Mort Cooper outpitched Bucky Walters, Cincinnati ace, in the first game, scattering seven hits to register his eighth triumph of the season against the same number of losses.

Walters Loses Ninth Game

Walters, who had won 16 games, suffered his ninth defeat when the first three Cardinals facing him singled to produce two runs. Terry Moore's eleventh homer of the year brought in the other Red Bird tally in the third frame.

Altogether, the Cards got eight hits off Walters, three of them by Terry Moore, while Cooper was yielding seven.

The Reds bunched three of their safeties in the second inning for their only score.

The St. Louisans came from behind twice to triumph in the second contest, scoring three runs in the sixth and deciding the issue with a pair of tallies in the eighth.

Singles by Moore, Enos Slaughter, Johnny Mize and Johnny Hopp, and Joe Orengo's grounder produced the three-run cluster in the sixth.

In the eighth Mize singled and Hopp tripled to tie the score before Jim Turner, the Reds' starting hurler, was replaced, and Hopp came in with the winning run on Don Gutteridge's pinch single.

The second game was a mound battle between Turner and Carl Doyle until the Reds assumed a three-run advantage with a pair of tallies in the sixth. Bill McGee, who took over for the Cards in the seventh, got credit for the victory, although Clyde Shoun came to his aid in the ninth.

Pasty Palmer Wins 2 Events At Swim Meet

Shoreham Girl Scores In Lowboard Diving, 220-Yard Free Style

Miss Patsy Palmer, of the Shoreham, stole the show in the final A. A. U. swimming meet of the season yesterday when she captured the District lowboard diving and 220-yard freestyle championships at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

Defending Champion Bill Tarbett of the Airport team retained his highboard diving title for men, besting Bert Williams of Washington Golf and Country. In winning, Tarbett obtained a measure of revenge for a recent defeat administered him by Williams in the recent lowboard championships at Takoma.

Miss Palmer Takes Long Lead

The 220-yard freestyle for men resulted in another championship for Bill Wright of the host team. Wright, who holds the indoor 50, 100 and 220 yard freestyle titles, thus began an assault on the outdoor marks. Wright was pressed by his teammate, Gordon Mustin, until the last two laps, when the University of Michigan graduate student increased his advantage.

Miss Palmer had things her own way in the 220-yard freestyle for women. She was off to a long lead and at the finish line had lapped the entire field. Helen Flett was her nearest competitor. Patsy already held the indoor 220-yard freestyle title and as a result of yesterday's victory reigns supreme in this event.

Deprived of Official Records

Not so easy was Patsy's victory in the women's diving. She received unexpected competition from Jackie Richards, diving unattached. Her final advantage of triumph was

Softball Players Quit After 1,700 Innings—Blisters

Milwaukee, Aug. 18 (AP).—Blisters and bunions and an approaching rain broke up the Two Thousand Club-Bright Stars softball game at the end of 1,700 innings today. The Two Thousands won, 266-236.

The boys believed they had set a new world's mark for marathon softball. The old mark, they said, was 1,530 consecutive innings, set by two Pittsburgh teams.

Rain Halts Indians-Browns Game, Deadlocked at 2 to 2

Tigers Drop 3d Straight, Chisox Win

4 St. Louis Runs Nullified When Rain Comes in Tenth; Lyons Is Victor

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 18.—The weatherman handed the league-leading Indians a 2-2 draw with St. Louis today. The scrappy Browns came from behind to tie it in the ninth, and banged out four tenth-inning runs which counted only for exercise.

The 44,656 fans came to watch a double-header at the big lakefront stadium. Instead, they waited around nearly four hours, didn't see an officially completed ball game, and were drenched for their trouble.

The result pushed Cleveland three and a half games ahead of the losing Detroit Tigers.

Al Smith, Tribe southpaw, had a 2-to-1 decision all but wrapped up in a tight hurling duel with Vernon Kennedy when the Brownies knotted the count in the ninth. Smith put the run on base himself, walking Harlond Clift. George McQuinn sacrificed him to second and Johnny Berardino, who had three of the seven St. Louis hits, lined a single to center to score Clift.

The Indians went scoreless in their half and the clouds which leaked and muttered at times all afternoon growled again as St. Louis started the rampage that went for naught.

Don Heffner singled but was out at second on Myril Hoag's attempted sacrifice. Rip Radcliff drove a hit down the first base line and Hoag went to third. Wally Judnich walked and Smith was in trouble.

Clift doubled Hoag and Radcliff home and McQuinn promptly singled another pair home. Harry Eisenstat replaced Smith, with only one out, but the rains came and the score reverted to the ninth.

The Indians had only four blows off Kennedy—one of them Ray Mack's second-inning home run.

Veteran Ted Lyons Hurls 7-to-5 Victory

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 18.—Ted Lyons, 39-year-old veteran of the Chicago White Sox, furnished further evidence that the rocking chair won't get him for a while by pitching his team to a 7-to-5 victory over the skidding Detroit Tigers today. The win gave the Sox a sweep of their three-game series.

Lyons, who helped his own cause with four hits, was in trouble in the eighth inning, when George Tebbetts' home run gave the Tigers a 5-to-4 edge, but the Sox rallied in the ninth to score three runs on three singles, a double and an error.

The game started as a mound duel between Lyons and Johnny Gorsica, but the latter was relieved by Al Benton when the Sox scored twice in the fifth.

Andy Crawford Scores 1,400 Points; Muzzy Is Leading Driver

By the Associated Press

Solomons, Md., Aug. 18.—Frank Muzzy, of Philadelphia, drove his speedster "Blitzkrieg" to victory in two events and finished third in another to lead the scoring in the Solomon Island Yacht Club's fourth annual regatta today.

Muzzy's boat, a Class E racing runabout, won the event for craft of that size, then went out of its class to win the Class K inboard race and finish third in the event for 225 cubic-inch hydroplanes.

The Philadelphian scored 1,950 points. Andrew Crawford, of Washington, copped a first and a second in his Ednandy IV. scoring 1,400 points. Schloss was second in two races in his Cry Baby II.

The day's fastest performance was turned in by Claude H. Jarrett, of Asheville, N. C., who drove his Seagull 49.834 miles an hour in winning the race for 225 cubic-inch hydroplanes. He won both heats of the event with ease.

Potomac Boat Club Captures Regatta Title

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Aug. 18.—Potomac Boat Club, of Washington, failed to record a final victory in the closing Southern Rowing Association regatta of the summer here today, but nevertheless piled up enough points in the preliminary heats to annex the annual association championship with a total of 54 points.

The Virginia Boat Club, of Richmond, victor in one of today's races, finished second with 50 points, while the Arundel Boat Club, of Baltimore, tallied 44 points for third place and the host Old Dominion Boat Club trailed the field with 32.

The Alexandria crews gained their first final victory of the year when they nosed out the Potomac Boat Club's eight in a thrilling race by less than half a length. The Alexandrians had defeated Baltimore in the preliminary heat, while Potomac gained the finals by a three-length victory over Virginia.

The four-oared gig final went to the Arundels after the Baltimoreans defeated Virginia Boat Club in the preliminary heat, to earn the right to oppose Potomac, which had defeated Old Dominion in the first race on the program.

In the quadruple-oared race, Old Dominion and Virginia were declared finalists, after defeating Potomac and Arundel, respectively. The Richmonders took the final event by a substantial margin after the Old Dominions crew "caught a crab" and fell 6 lengths behind soon after the start of the race.

FOUR-OARED GIG—First heat won by Potomac (O'Bryan, Millar, Mason, Lanigan and Stovall); second heat won by Arundel (Jones, Beard, Ruppert, Shawker and Gannon). Final, won b Arundel.

QUADRUPLE-OARED SCULLE — First heat won b Old Dominion (Weiners, Whitestone, Campbell and P. Bell); second heat won by Virginia (Must, Nelson, Weaver and Bailey). Final won by Virginia.

EIGHT-OARED SHELL—First heat won by Potomac (O'Bryan, Schofield, Burch, Sweeney, Smith, Miller, Mason, Lanigan and Phippen); second heat won by Old Dominion (Bell, Davis, Franklin, Roach, Grant, Byrd, Edmond, Bryant and Avera; Final won by Old Dominion.

53 Grid Candidates Drill for New York Giants

Pearl River, N. Y., Aug. 18 (AP).—The New York Football Giants squad, in training at Blue Hill C. C. for the September 4 clash with the Eastern All-Stars, was swelled to 53 players today as Coach Steve Owen held two long practice sessions. Howard Armstrong, 190-pound end from Colorado College, was the only permanent addition to the squad, however, the other six newcomers were prospective Jersey City players getting started by a week-end with the major leaguers.

Kay Eakin, newcomer from Arkansas, looms as a standout. He has proved faster than Eddie Miller, is kicking better than Len Barnum and is by far the best passer in camp.

N. Y. Women's Swim Team Takes Medley

Trio Capture National A. A. U. Outdoor Title

By the Associated Press

Portland, Oreg., Aug. 18.—The Women's Swimming Association, of New York, captured the 330-yard medley relay in the National A. A. U. women's senior outdoor swimming and diving championships today.

The New York team of Mildred O'Donnell, Lorsine Fischer and Gloria Callen covered the distance in 4 minutes, 1.4 seconds, considerably slower than the national record, but fast enough to clearly outdistance the field. The record is 3:52.8.

Los Angeles Athletic Club, defending champion, placed second, Alexander House Community Association of Maui, Hawaii, third, and Multnomah Club, of Portland, fourth.

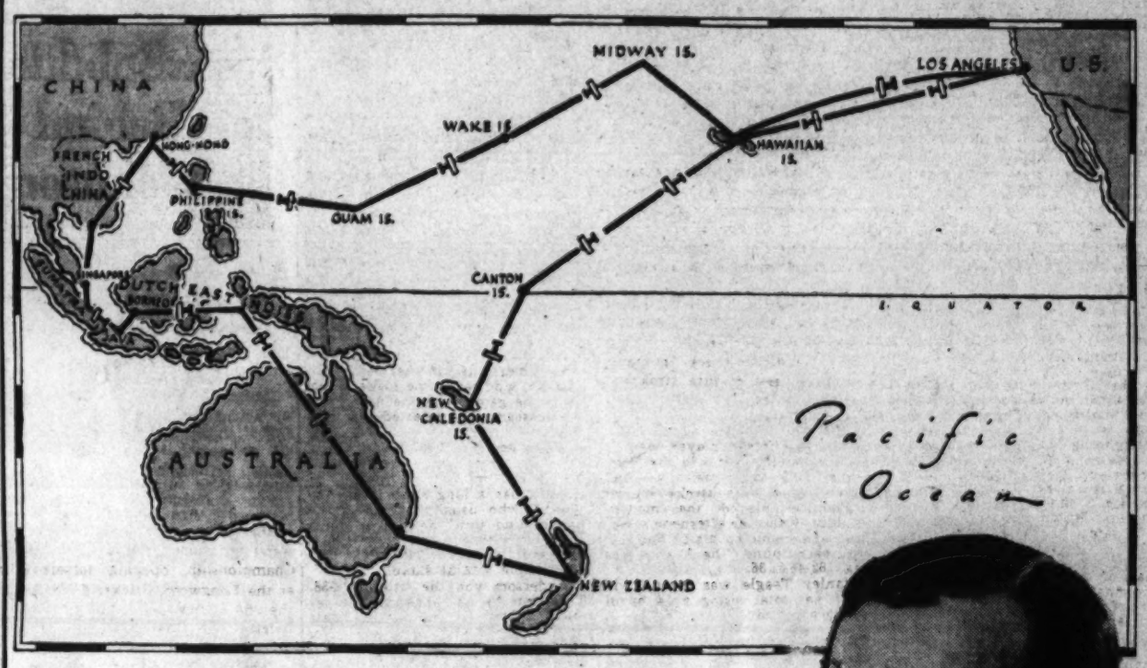
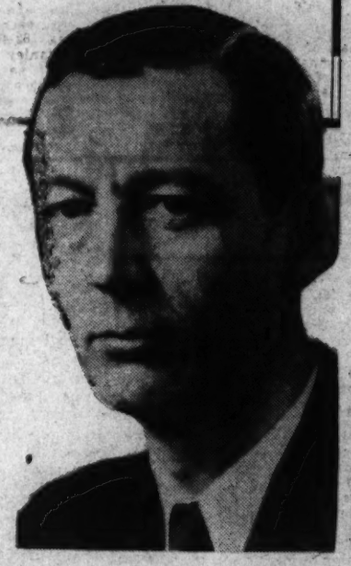
Ramparts of Our Pacific Defense





30,000 Mile Survey

by W. W. Chaplin, noted INS war correspondent, to learn how America and her neighbors in the Pacific are preparing for a possible thrust from Japan.

W. W. Chaplin did a notable job of reporting the war on the western front. With the fall of France he returned to America to cover our national defense development. His present assignment will take him on an aerial tour of the Pacific.

There will be stops at Hawaii, Canton Island (governed jointly by the United States and Great Britain), New Caledonia (the French possession which has just repudiated the Petain French Government and cast its lot with the Antipodal Dominions of the British Empire) and Auckland, New Zealand.

From there he will fly to Australia and then to the Dutch East Indies—now in the international limelight.

In Borneo, Java and Sumatra he will obtain an eyewitness, factual account of the way in which this fabulously wealthy colony of the defeated European Netherlands is preparing to defend itself against growing threats from Japan.

In Singapore Mr. Chaplin will find out at first hand how Britain, hard pressed at home, is getting ready for possible assault upon her Far Eastern possessions.

He will also try to get the true story about the Burma Road, lifeline of the beleaguered Chinese Republic. Indo-China, which the Japanese are eyeing, will also come under his scrutiny and he will tell what seems to be the fate of this rich French colony.

From Hongkong, now in the spotlight of the news, Mr. Chaplin will explain why this British Crown Colony is such a vital consideration in the diplomatic struggle between Japan and Britain in the Orient.

On the way back Mr. Chaplin will visit American islands which have been increasingly in the news but from which little news has come direct; the situation in the Philippines, complicated by the tremendous Japanese population; the fortification of Guam as America's "suicide post" in the far Pacific; the present status of the Coral Islands of Wake and Midway; all these will be studied and reported on before Mr. Chaplin returns to the United States.

Mr. Chaplin's stories will be published in The Washington Post as they are received by cable, wireless or air mail.

Indian Spring Golfers Again Defeat Kenwood Team, 34-26

Pros Split Points; Peebles Is Star

Holzberg, Duffy Tie for Argyle Medal; Committee to Decide Tribal Bowl Winner; Anne Dolan, Oliveri Win Mixed Foursome

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Indian Spring golfers, 4-point victors over Kenwood on the latter's course two weeks ago, caught the River Road boys at Silver Spring yesterday and won this time by 8 points, 34 to 26, in an 80-man match.

Pros Mel Shorey, of the host club, and George Diffenbaugh played an individual match and split 3 points with 73 scores. Dr. A. Thomas Utz won two and one-half to one-half over J. E. Hutchinson, jr., in the senior half of the feature match.

Bob Peebles was the star for Kenwood, however, with two great finishes. Playing with Charles Vaile as a partner against James Robertson and John Bolger, Peebles birdied the ninth hole the first time around the nine-hole course to win one point. Then with the back nine all square the second time around, Peebles proceeded to knock a full two-iron shot in the cup on the 425-yard par four ninth for an eagle three and three winning points.

INDIAN SPRING, 34; KENWOOD, 26

R. P. McCandlish and Frank Zuber (IS) scored 3 points to 0 for C. D. Wright and F. H. McCrary; G. L. Houff and Bill Walsh (IS) scored 0 points to 3 for Buddy Darr and G. R. Ed Fitzgerald and L. J. Nusbaum (IS) scored 2 points to 1 for W. F. Stickle and Arch Burgess; Dr. W. B. Vogel and William Benson (IS) scored 3 points to 0 for W. M. Edwards and N. K. Richtmeyer.

ARGYLE

John C. Holzberg, comedalist two years ago in the Washington Golf and Country Club championship, may find himself in a similar spot at Argyle as he is tied with a new member, J. E. Duffy, with two-over par 74's at the end of the first two day's qualifying. They each scored 37-37, 74.

Defending Champion Russell Jewell posted a 77 while last year's runner-up, Tony Willmett, shot a 78 and is on the qualifying border. William L. Moore also had 79. Jim "Bishop" Hutchinson was believed to be safely in the sixth flight with a 92.

R. J. Posson advanced to the finals of the club senior championship finals and will meet the winner of the Fritz Manning-W. L. Duncan match for the title.

ANACOSTIA

The best mixed Scotch foursome team on the Public Links apparently is Anne Dolan and Andy Oliveri, as the East Potomac duo won again yesterday in an event staged by Manager Harry Graham at Anacostia.

Hitting alternate shots, Miss Dolan and Oliveri posted a six-over-par 74 total. Mrs. Mae Hill and Joe Murray, Rock Creek, were second with a 75 and Mrs. Grace Long and Bob Morris, East Potomac, third with a 76.

Pro Bill Carson and Leona Smith played an exhibition round and scored a 71,

MANOR

Mrs. L. G. Pray and Mrs. W. Billingsley tied with net 38's in the Ladies Nine Blind Bogey at Manor, Mrs. Pray with 41-3, 38, and Mrs. Billingsley 58-20, 68. Mrs. Alec MacDonald was third with 49-12, 37.

The two-man team match play championship advanced to the third round with defending champions Bobby Brownell and M. Whittlesey upsetting Louis Fuchs and W. G. McCreery with a 3-under-par best ball 67. J. S. McBride and George Jones went two extra-hole brackets before winning over W. J. Peters and Charles McLaughlin on the twenty-second.

Second Round

Don Hutchison and A. F. McDougald defeated J. R. Morris and Alec MacDonald; Bobby Brownell and Merrell Whittlesey defeated Louis Fuchs and W. G. McCreery, 3 and 2; Carl Willingham and Les Ritter defeated Charles Mason and R. R. Harrington, 6 and 5; Dr. H. J. Beech and Al Rinaudot defeated Burke Edwards and F. V. Dennis, 4 and 3; J. S. McBride and George Jones defeated W. J. Peters and Charles McLaughlin, 1-up, 22 holes; S. M. Brown and W. A. Covert defeated Max Taylor and Ray Fleming, 4 and 3; J. C. Putnam and George McGhee defeated E. E. Sutter and W. F. Lunger, 4 and 3; S. E. Andrews and Jim Benifer defeated L. J. Manders and Frank G. Butler, 2 and 1.

INDIAN SPRING

Who won the Tribal Bowl?

The best score on the sheet at the end of the 18-hole medal play handicap tournament was a 74-7, 67, by R. H. O'Malley, Mel Shorey's winning partner in the pro-amateur tourament last Monday at Rolling Road. O'Malley was about to take the bowl for a year's possession.

But John Taylor also lays claim to the trophy. His name was not on the sheet, but he claims he entered and his name was not written down. He posted a 75-9, 66, one shot better than O'Malley, if his score is accepted.

It's up to the golf committee now.

BEAVER DAM

Doug Mattison and Forest Thompson were each within two shots of par figures as they tied with gross 74s in the Beaver Dam blind handicap tournament.

Other winners were N. E. Rogers, 87-2, 85; R. K. Thompson, 84-25, 59; Edgie Johnson, 80-21, 59; Jim Gipe, 78-16, 62; Bob Mills, 79-15, 64, and E. R. Graham, 112-7, 105.

A. M. Woodside played three perfect shots on the 560-yard par five first hole for an eagle three, a drive, brassie and then an eight-iron to the cup.

WOODMONT

Dave Legum's net 66 was low with four shots to spare in the Woodmont Sweepstakes, the winner posting an 83-17—66. Two tied for second in class A, Ed Wortman, 81-11—70, and George Jacobson, 87-17—70

Howard Nordlinger continued his streak of low gross victories by topping the field with a 76.

KENWOOD

R. V. Herman and Jack (59) Keele tied with net 69's in the Kenwood sweepstakes play, the former scoring 83-14—69, while Keele was 13 shots off his Capon Spring pace with a 72-3—69.

Second place was also a deadlock, between A. D. Kane, 90-19—71, and Dallas Dort, 85-14—71.

CAPITAL

A gross 83 by Mrs. E. R. Ferguson, jr., and Ken Spencer was the best score turned in by the Capital Mixed Scotch Foursome teams, while net honors went to Mrs. Frank Anderson and H. O. Kephart, with 93-25—68. Second low net went to Mrs. Betty Quigg and Bill Pendergast, 87-18—69.

William Whitehead hit the lucky number in the week-end Blind Bogey with a 86-7—69. S. S. Fletcher's 73 captured gross honors.

CONGRESSIONAL

Dr. R. A. Keilty, who has figured in the promotion of just about every amateur tournament in this section this season, won one at Congressional yesterday, an intra-club 9-blind holes event with a score of 81-6—75.

Three tied for runner-up honors, J. M. Strait, 82-6—76; F. E. Berquist, 85-9—75, and George Hill, jr., 79-3—76. Handicaps were figured by doubling the allowance strokes on the blind holes.

BELLE HAVEN

John McPherson played well below his handicap to win the President's Cup tournament at Belle Haven by a nine stroke margin. McPherson played the morning round in 89 and the afternoon session in 93 and deducted his 23 handicap from each round. The 36-hole total was 182-46—136.

Stanley Teagle was second with a 145 net total, using a 14 handicap each round.

10 District Duos At Lancaster Today

The District will have ten pro-amateur teams after a share of the purse and prizes in the annual Lancaster, Pa., 18-hole Invitation pro-amateur tournament today at Arthur Thorn's course. Thorn was former pro at Woodmont.

The local teams will be Leo Walper and Roger Peacock, Al Treder and Herb Lacy, Eddie Stevens and Bobby Brownell, Bob Barnett and Ralph Quinter, jr., Cliff Spencer and Mike Rooney, a York amateur; Tommy Doerer and Bobby Bowers, Al Houghton and Volney Burnett, Lew Worsham and Ralph Bogart, George Diffenbaugh and George Vass and Mel Shorey and partner. Houghton and Barnett will stop in on the way back from the Canadian Amateur.

The field will include many of the leading professionals in the East.

Sanford's Homer Gives Charlotte Victory in 'Freebo'

Charlotte, N. C., Aug. 18 (AP).—Jack Sanford blasted a home run with two away in the tenth inning off Lefty Karpel to give Charlotte a 6-to-4 decision over Norfolk here today.

About 2,500 attended the Sunday game, at which rain checks from rained-out games were accepted as admission, with voluntary contributions also received. Sunday baseball with admission charges is illegal in Charlotte.

Ziggy Sears' homer with one on tied the score up for Norfolk at 4-4 before Sanford's blow. Nicholson for Norfolk and Hann for Charlotte also hit round-trippers.

White House Police Win Team Honors At New Jersey

Teaneck, N. J., Aug. 18 (AP).—The White House Police, of Washington, D. C., won the police team division honors today in the International Pistol Tournament, with 1,196 out of a possible 1,200.

Folowing in order were the Pennsylvania Motor Police, last year's champions, 1,192; Massachusetts State Police, 1,191; Lower Merion, Pa., Township Police, 1,188; New York City Team 1, 1,188; New York City Team 2, 1,181; Boston, 1,187; Trenton, 1,185; Delaware State, 1,179; Pittsburgh, 1,178.

U. S. Pros Set for Canadian Open Play-Off Today

Slammin' Sammy Snead (left) and Harold 'Jug' McSpaden (lower) will playoff for the Canadian Open championship today at Toronto, over the 18-hole route. They tied with 281 totals at the end of the regulation play, McSpaden catching Snead, the halfway leader, on the last round. Snead won in 1938 and McSpaden last year

W. Anderson Favored in Parks Tennis

L. A. Player Expected To Come Back After Taking Lacing in '39

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Aug. 18.—There is a feeling among tennis experts that anyone winning the National Public Parks Tennis Championship in the tournament opening here tomorrow will have to beat Willis Anderson, of Los Angeles.

Anderson is the tall, serious, blond young man who lost the Public Parks title last year in the opening round at New York when Lou Faqui, of Memphis, Tenn., caught him by surprise.

No one was ever more intent on successfully traveling the comeback trail than the 26-year-old Californian, who sat in the locker room after the game with the fiery little Tennessean and dejectedly told a friend:

"They sent me 3,000 miles to win this tournament and I got beat in the first round."

That was a long speech for Anderson, who usually stands in the background until he has a tennis racquet in his hand, but he thinks, eats and lives tennis and with him a principle was at stake.

Anderson won the title in 1938. That year he was apparently hopelessly beaten in the quarter-finals by Ebert Lewis, of Los Angeles, No. 1 seeded player who took the first two sets and led, 5-2, in the third. Anderson came from behind to take three out of five to beat Lewis and breezed through to the championship.

This year he has won the Southern California district Public Parks title, besides four other championships in the crack Pacific Coast tournaments, open to both public parks and private club players.

The Public Parks meet this year will be wide open, with Seymour Greenberg, who succeeded Anderson as Public Parks king, ineligible to compete here because he chose to tour the big-time grass court circuit instead of qualifying by trying for the Chicago City title again.

Eastern Squad Swamps Western Negro All-Stars

Chicago, Aug. 18 (AP).—The Eastern squad swamped the Westerners today, 12 to 0, in the eighth annual Negro all-star baseball game before 30,000 spectators in Comiskey Park.

Hank McHenry, Jim Ruiz and Ray Brown held the Western all-stars, composed of players from the Negro American League, to five hits. The East, picked from Negro National Leaguers, battered four pitchers for 15 hits.

In the series each team has won four games.

Southwest Market Defeats Vienna, 9-3

With Lefty McIntyre only allowing four hits, and striking out 12, the Southwest Market nine defeated the Vienna Cardinals, 9 to 3, yesterday on the latter's diamond.

Buddy Dodson collected four hits, including a double and triple, for the winners. The Coakley twins shone afield for the Washington club. The Market nine's Joe Palmer was slightly injured in the first inning when he was struck by a foul ball off his own bat. He continued in the game and made three hits.

Polo Rained Out

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug 18 (AP).—The first match in the Intercircuit Polo Championships was postponed today by rain. The teams scheduled to play were the 7-11 Ranch, of Chicago, and the Fairfield Club, of Wichita, Kans. The contest was reset for 3:30 p. m. Tuesday.

Americans Dominate Net Doubles

No Foreigners Enter National Event on Brookline Courts

By the Associated Press

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 18.—The men's National Tennis doubles Championship, opening tomorrow at the Longwood Cricket Club, for the first time in years will be strictly an American affair—and probably a wide-open one at that.

Captured by German and Australian teams in the past two out of three years, the fifty-ninth annual tournament gets under way without a single full-fledged foreign entry because of the war.

The women's division appears to be a cut-and-dried affair, with Alice Marble, Beverly Hills, Calif., and Sarah Palfrey, Reno, Nev., top-heavy favorites to retain the title for the fourth season.

Top Teams Should Win

With the opening day's play reducing the men's field to 16 teams, the "luck of the draw" makes the two top-seeded duets — Frank Parker, Beverly Hills, and Don McNeill, Oklahoma City, and Bobby Riggs, Chicago, and Welby Van Horn, Los Angeles—best bets to reach the semifinals. This is largely so because of the absence of foreigners.

Parker and McNeill, rated No. 1 in the United States, come here fresh from a victory yesterday in the twenty-fourth Newport, R. I., Casino tournament, and appear early popular choices to succeed Australia's Adrian Quist and John Bromwich, the 1939 titleholders.

2 Duos in Trouble

The draw places big obstacles in the early rounds before third-seeded Jack Kramer, Montabello, Calif., and Ted Schroeder, Los Angeles, and fourth-seeded Gardnar Mulloy, Coral Gables, Fla., and Henry Prusoff, Seattle.

In the same bracket with young Kramer and Schroeder are that veteran pair, Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, Austin, Tex., and Charles Mattman, Los Angeles, and Bob Harman, Berkeley, Calif., the finalists at Newport.

The up-and-coming Frank Kovacs 2d, and Edwin Amark, Oakland, Calif., appear in the same grouping with Mulloy-Prusoff.

Performances up to now make it difficult for the experts to predict anything. Riggs and Van Horn started the grass cricuit auspiciously by winning at Baltimore, but Kramer-Schroeder came through at Seabright and Southampton, and Mulloy-Prusoff eliminated Parker-McNeill to triumph at Rye.

Seeded second to Miss Marble and Miss Palfrey in the women's doubles are Margaret Osborn, San Francisco, and Pauline Betz, Beverly Hills, with Helen Jacobs, Berkeley, and Mary Arnold, Los Angeles, ranked third, and Patricia Canning, Los Angeles, and Virginia Wolfenden, San Francisco, fourth.

French Hurls 9-to-1 Victory Over Pirates

Chicago Now 2 Games Out of Third Place; Winners Score 3 in First

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 18.—The Chicago Cubs advanced to within two games of third place today with a 9-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates, riding to an easy triumph on the six-hit pitching of Southpaw Larry French.

The Cubs led off with three runs off Truett Sewell in the first inning and knocked him out of the box in the fifth. French held the Bucs hitless until the fifth, when doubles by Virgil Davis and Maurice Van Robays produced their only run.

The victory pulled the Cubs up to the .500 mark once more and left them tied with Pittsburgh in the won-lost column, two full games back of the slipping New York Giants.

Janazzo, Williams Will Work Out Here on Friday

Continuing his policy of letting the public "see before it buys," Matchmaker Gabe Menendez, last night announced from New York that the principals for next Monday's ten-round welterweight scrap at Griffith Stadium would appear here Friday in workouts.

Both Izzy Janazzo and Holman Williams, ranked fourth and third, respectively among the country's welters, will stage free drills at Turner's Arena, Menendez said. Both are now in the vicinity of New York, but will arrive early Friday and continue workouts the remainder of the week.

The bout marks the fifth "mixed" bout here recently. Williams is the protege of Joe Louis, while Janazzo has long rated high among club fighters in the East.

District Duo Scores 75 in State Mixed Event in Catonsville

Special Dispatch to The Post

Catonsville, Md., August 18.—The Washington duo of Bobby Brownell, Manor Club, amateur, and Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Kenwood, won the Maryland State Golf Association mixed two-ball tournament here today at Rolling Road with a gross score of 75.

Mrs. Meckley and Brownell, playing selective drives and alternate shots, played the out nine in 37 and the back nine in 38 for a 75, one shot better than the 76 of Mrs. M. Louise Bell, Elkridge, and Spencer Overton, the Middle Atlantic champion from the host club.

The only Washington team among the net prize winners was the Manor Club duo of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Lacey, with 88-16, 70. Mrs. George Heidelbach and W. R. Burns, Rolling Road, won the event with the unusually low net score of 64 while three teams tied for second with 69's and four, including the Laceys, tied for next place with 70.

Marshall's ace in the hole is Steve Sitko, of Notre Dame. Sitko, who quarterbacked Notre Dame through three successful seasons, is now in Chicago, where he is to appear in the starting line-up of the All-Star College eleven which will play the Green Bay Packers there August 29.

Ward telephoned Marshall yesterday that Sitko is anxious to play with the Redskins this year. The Notre Dame quarterback, noted for his passing and great defensive work, was the last man on the Redskins' draft list.

If Marshall and Filchock fail to reach an agreement it is understood that Sitko will be given the spot held by the former Indiana University star for the last two years in the Redskins' backfield.

Filchock and Marshall are to discuss the contract tomorrow before the Redskin squad entrains late in the day for Seattle, where they are to play an intrasquad exhibition on Thursday, returning to Spokane Friday afternoon.

Game Body Tries To Halt Open Season On Antlerless Deer

Special Dispatch to The Post

Gettysburg, Pa., Aug. 18.—The executive committee of the Adams County Fish and Game Commission has set out to secure the signatures of more than 2,500 county hunters on petitions to the State Game Commission asking abrogation of the ruling for an open season on antlerless deer next December as far as Adams County is concerned.

Declaring that Adams County's already depleted deer herds that roam thousands of acres of South Mountain land in northern and western sections of the county will be exterminated by another open season on deer of both sexes, the sportsmen announce they intend to force closing of the season on antlerless deer here. State law makes it mandatory for the State Game Commisson to follow the wishes of more than 50 per cent of the licensed hunters in any county. Cumberland and Franklin County nimrods are seeking a similar ruling for their adjoining mountain lands.

Dizzy Dean Bows To Houston in 11-Inning Contest

By the Associated Press

Tulsa, Okla., Aug. 18.—Houston's Texas League leaders nipped Tulsa, 4 to 3, in 11 innings in the first game of a double-header, with Dizzy Dean allowing Houston only one earned run after blanking them for seven innings. That increased to 28 the number of consecutive scoreless frames Dean has hurled.

Dean yielded all Houston's four runs and 12 hits in 10 1-3 innings, Julian Tubb succeeding him after the Buffs punched over two eleventh inning runs.

Regional Champs In Legion Play

Rock Hill, S. C., Aug. 18 (AP).—Four regional champions—St. Louis, Mo.; Little Rock, Ark.; Lawndale, Ill., and Sumter, S. C.—moved into Rock Hill today for the Southeastern sectional tournament of the American Legion junior baseball eliminations.

The winner of the tournament here will play the winner of the Western sectional tournament at Trenton, Mo., August 22-25, in the national semifinals at Shelby, N. C., August 28-30.

The tournament here will run all week, with one game each afternoon. It will be a double elimination affair, with two defeats necessary to eliminate a team.

Rosedale Swimmers Enter Title Meets

Finals of the girls' swimming championships at Rosedale Playground pool will be held today, with the individual winner slated to receive the Jake Hengstler Trophy. Boys' finals will be held tomorrow. Each event starts at 2 p. m.

moved to third on West's grounder to Finney. Pofahl drew a walk, and when he found himself trapped off first by Johnson's throw to the base, he cleverly delayed the rundown long enough to permit Bloodworth to score without drawing a throw to the plate.

Nothing came of a single by Ferrell that opened the third inning, chiefly because Chase hit into a double-play, and then the Red Sox tied the score. Two were out when they started getting tough. Don DiMaggio bounded a double off the wall in left and Cramer moved him home with a single to right.

Joe Cronin Triples

Johnson pitched three innings of hitless ball and then Joe Cronin set the Red Sox up in a 2-1 lead. Cramer beat out a hit which Chase should have fielded, and after Jimmy Foxx fanned for the second out, Manager Cronin deposited a triple against the centerfield wall to score Cramer. Williams followed with a walk, but George Case averted further damage with a sensational leaping catch against the wall for Tabor's long drive.

Home runless until the seventh, the Red Sox found the range in that inning. With one out, Bobby Doerr smashed his nineteenth to left and with one out, Dom DiMaggio got his, the eighth Boston homer of the three-game series.

Johnson was lucky to get by the seventh. Lewis led off with his hit and then Joe Cronin rescued his rookie with two spectacular plays. He grabbed Walker's line drive and doubled Lewis off first and then he raced for Travis' fierce grounder which Johnson deflected and made the throw to first.

Bloodworth Gets Single

All of a sudden in the eighth the Nats made motion toward tying the score. Bloodworth led off with a single to center. Finney reached among the customers behind first base to haul in West's foul pop and Pofahl struck out, but Johnson then went wild. He walked Rick Ferrell and Pinchhitter Johnny Welaj to fill the bases, and then he walked Case to force home a run. With the bases still filled, Lewis eased the tension for Boston by lining out to Williams.

The Nats got to first base in the ninth but no farther. Walker beat out a hit to Tabor, and then Travis lined out to right, Bloodworth flied to center and West grounded to Doerr. And everybody went home.

2 Champions Win In Semipro Play

Wichita, Kans., Aug. 18 (AP).—Two former national championships and the defending titleholder featured in first-round games before 6,000 at the national semipro baseball tournament.

The Enid, Okla., Champlins, 1937 champions, took the measure of Glendive, Mont., with a 7-to-4 score. Buford, Ga., which won the title in 1938, pounded out an 11-to-2 victory over the Aurelia, Iowa, nine. In other contests, Natrona, Pa., defeated Minter City, Miss., 6 to 5, in a battle that went ten innings.

Phils Defeat Giants Twice; Higbe Victor

Homers Decide 8-6 Nightcap; Whitehead Injured in 6-3 Game

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 18.—The man bit the dog in the Polo grounds today—the Phillies won a double-header.

They knocked off Bill Terry's woeful Giants 6-3, on Walt Higbe's steady elbowing, and 8-6, in a game marked by six home runs. Statisticians immediately started a check of ancient history to see when it happened last.

As if this wasn't enough, the Giants finished up heading for a Western swing without the services for the time being, of second-baseman Burgess Whitehead. He twisted a muscle in his left leg during the first game.

Higbe needed relief in the first game when the Giants shoved two runs home in the eighth. Johnny Rizzo hit his eighteenth homer with a mate aboard in the ninth.

Si Johnson was tagged for 11 hits in the afterpiece, but finished on top with the help of homers by Rizzo, Joe Marty, who also hit two triples, and Dutch Mueller. Babe Young, Tony Cuccinello and Mickey Witek clouted four baggers for the Giants.

Marlboro to Become Racing Scene, Starting on Wednesday

Cumberland Meeting Set New Marks

Wagering Topped Million; Southern Maryland Session To Last 10 Days

By Walter Haight

With Cumberland's first million-dollar meeting written into Maryland half-mile history along with the record sessions at Hagerstown and Bel Air, horses are gathering at nearby Marlboro for the ten-day stand of the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association beginning on Wednesday. This means the action will be right at Washington's side door each racing day until August 31.

Despite the fact that a limited bank roll has caused Marlboro to forego some of the expensive improvements made at other tracks, the Prince Georges County oval promises to keep the ball rolling as far as record crowds and record wagering is concerned. Marlboro reached new heights in both instances last year.

But if Marlboro does lack a clubhouse, a large grandstand and deluxe meals, it will have modern equipment that will have a say as to how the racing and betting is conducted. Perhaps out of place in the setting as an electric razor in the House of David, but dear to the hearts of those who pay the turf freight, will be the totalizator and the electric finish camera.

Hay Directs Mutuels

General Manager Joseph A. Farrell has had the plant brushed up. He has lined up capable officials and there will be nothing antique about the mutuel department. J. Donald Hay, betting director at Bowie, Charles Town and other tracks, will be in charge of the 31 sellers and 23 cashiers as well as the crew operating the totalizator.

The book for the meeting, prepared by Racing Secretary Eddie Brennan, is promising. Each day will bring at least one test for the better-grade horses. In addition to a majority of winners at the other Maryland tracks, Marlboro will draw some new performers.

Although several riders have headed for Wheeling, Marlboro will have the majority of the top-flight small-track performers. Those coming to the Prince Georges County plant include Willie Kelly, the sensation of the Cumberland meeting. With Sammy Palumbo taking few mounts, Kelly has drawn much of the following that for years has gone with the New York rider. At Cumberland, many fans were playing Kelly and not his horses.

Speech Was Classic

The little Irish-American boy made a classical acceptance speech after winning the jockey championship at Cumberland. Over the loud-speaker system, he said, "Folks, it ain't all me." He meant, of course, that the horses deserved some of the credit. However, the other boys on the course had equal if not better opportunity before the session opened, for Kelly was not eagerly sought by horsemen until he got his "hot hand."

Cumberland, from a crowd and betting standpoint, closed the meeting in a blaze of glory. By far the largest gathering that ever jammed the course, bet $148,861 on closing day, sending into discard the track's record of $127,000. The meeting had a daily average over the 100 grand mark with a total for the ten days of $1,062,294 despite the fact that the track was heavy for the two final days of the session.

By opening on Wednesday and not on Tuesday, Marlboro's meeting will run right through instead of having the usual lay-off on Monday of the second week. This move was welcomed by horsemen because it allows them more time to transfer their charges from Cumberland.

Northern Va. Horses Listed For Keswick

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 18.—A number of exhibitors from northern Virginia will send down a formidable array of show ring horses to compete for prizes at the Keswick Hunt Club Horse Show to be held on Saturday at the show grounds 2 miles west of Keswick. Entry list for the exhibition closed yesterday, and the show gives every promise of being up to the high standard of former years.

Mrs. John Hay Whitney, of Upperville, has entered some of her best horses, and from the stable of Mrs. George H. Greenhalgh, of Berryville, will come the champion bay gelding, Highland Ace, and others. Mr. and Mrs. E. Gardner Prime, of Warrenton, will show several horses, including the flashy colt, Balls' Bridge. Others from Warrenton who will be represented are Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Scruton, Alex Calvert, and J. E. Barker.

Mr. and Mrs. George Watts Hill, of Durham, N. C., whose horses have walked off with numerous prizes at the Keswick Show in recent years, have made several entries, including the black mare, Inky, a consistent winner on the Virginia circuit. George G. Lee, of Norfolk, and Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Osborne, of Gordonsville, will also be well represented in several classes.

Exhibitors from the Keswick section, of course, will have formidable strings to compete with the entries from the northern part of the State. They include Mrs. Cary Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. John F. McIntyre, Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry, of Cobham; W. B. Bogert, Howard Butz, and Miss Jamie Terrill.

Several members of the Farmington Hunt Club have submitted entries, among them being Mr. and Mrs. Truman Dodson and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Y. Haffner. The University of Virginia section will be represented by Miss Elliewood Page Keith and Miss Sue Bolling.

Middleweights Clash At Chicago Wednesday Night in 10-Rounder

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 18.—Tony Zale, of Gary, Ind., and Billy Soose, of Farrel, Pa., headline this week's national boxing program. Zale, who recently won the N. B. A. middleweight championship with a technical knockout over Al Hostak, of Seattle, in the thirteenth round, and Soose, who several weeks ago pounded out a close decision over Ken Overlin, the New York and California champion, tangle in a 10-round non-title match at Chicago Wednesday night.

The program:

Monday: At New York—Yucatan Kid, Mexico City, vs. Jerry Fiorello, New York, lightweights (8); Tami Mauriello, New York, vs. Gene Molnar, Pennsylvania, welterweights (8). ON FISHING

Fishing for Tiger Sharks Proves Very Exciting

Shark fishing has always been attractive to some anglers, and, during the past several years due to shark-fishing contests, the number following it have been increasing by leaps and bounds.

With rod and reel a good angler can beat any shark in reasonably fast time. With handline, and by that we don't mean quarter inch manila, the sport is increased four-fold, for it is the strength of the angler against that of the fish, and it is often the best handliners must snub the line over the gunwhale or take a turn around something or watch their rig go flying over the side.

ACKERMAN

The catch of Thomas E. Porter, of Arlington, Va., some days ago was noteworthy not only because it was made with a handline but also because it was a 300-pound tiger shark. He was after the smaller species of dogfish or ground sharks off Lynhaven Inlet, Cape Henry, when the streamliner of the open seas took his bait, and it was an hour and a quarter later before he was able, with considerable help to bring it aboard.

Galeocerdo arcticus, or Requiem shark, as the tiger shark is often called, has never been proven to be the maneater he is also often named, nevertheless there is nothing about them to lead anyone to believe the opposite.

Long, slender and streamlined until they fall just short of Nature's greatest handiwork in the family, the mackerel sharks and the makos, the tiger shark is known to attain a length ov more than 30 feet with a weight of about 600 pounds. A hammerhead of equal size would weigh close to a ton and a half. This shark is a tropical species, and common in warm seas, but it is also found to range as far north as Iceland.

The summer fishing tournament at Miami, just ended, in which 65,000 anglers competed during the season of the year when fishing is generally conceded to be at its very best, had as the best of the species in the Allison tuna class, a 108-pound fish caught by Lakin Baldridge. He won a swell prize with it, too. Yet three Allison have been caught off Ocean City already this season. One, caught aboard Capt. Leo Droughon's Sampan and weighing 192½ pounds was a new United States coastal record. The other two weighed 153 pounds each. With more fishing in the offshore tide-rips we expect to see many more caught.

There are several local Washington anglers in the running for the Tycoon rod to be awarded the sportsman tagging and releasing the greatest number of white marlin at Ocean City this season, but so far not a single sportswoman has been able to take a hitch around he Tycoon rod offered them.

Mrs. A. P. Gabrill, jr., came nearest to it with the fish up to the boat and the tag inserted, but not crimped so that when the big fish broke away there was little chance that it would stay marked.

Mrs. C. L. (Peggy) Parker, who last year ran away with the field, hasn't been able to get going this year for some reason or other, but with her boat Marla back in commission after tearing off a strut on driftwood last week, is expected to start counting toward its permanent acquisition. These rods do not supplement or count in any way with the Townsend Award and may be won by anglers fishing from any boat, charter or private.

Successor To Bimelech Hard to Pick

Retirement of Colt Leaves 3-Year-Old Racing Confused

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 18.—Bimelech, the "King" of the 3-year-olds, is gone—possibly through with racing forever, and behind him there isn't a single galloper who can be tabbed the lone "Crown Prince" to take over what's left of the throne.

It's a far more confusing picture today of the 3-year-old setup than was left when Johnstown abdicated a year ago, after winning the Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes. Then, Challedon, victor in the Preakness and destined to go on to acclaim as "the horse of the year" already had begun to move in on Big John's honors.

But, at this writing, with most of the year's important stakes for 3-year-olds already run off, each of about half a dozen colts has as good a claim as any other on the top spot.

Might Be Fenelon

It might be William Woodward's Fenelon, who won the Travers Stakes by a short head yesterday, because Mrs. George D. Widener's Your Chance swerved in the final furlong. Or it might be Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Gallahadion, who whipped Bimmie in the Derby, or Charles T. Fisher's Sirocco, who gave both of 'em a good going over in the Arlington classic, or Mioland, Charles S. Howard's Far Westerner, who breezed in to Chicago some days ago to take the American Derby from Sirocco by three lengths. Even Your Chance must be counted "in," because he undoubtedly would have been up to beat Bimelech in the Belmont in 20 yards more.

Whichever one you like, however, no one can say that Bimmie wasn't king while he had it. At one time or another he whipped everyone of those named as eligibles to succeed him. He swept undefetaed through his 2-year-old season of six starts. This year he won four of seven outings, including two-thirds of the "triple crown" by taking the Preakness and Belmont, and was never out of the money. All told, he collected a total of $246,095 in his 13 trips to the races, which places him among the first 20 money earners of all time.

Called "Greatest Horse"

What's more, in announcing Bimmie's injury yesterday, Col. Bradley still insisted "He's the greatest horse I ever owned." This takes in a lot of territory, since the colonel has had some pretty fair country runners in his day, including four Derby winners.

The aged Kentucky horseman said no one knew just how long Bimelech had been hurt. He seemed to be ailing yesterday morning during a final "blowout" for the Travers and was scratched. An X-ray, Col. Bradley explained, revealed the broken bone.

The 2-year-old filly picture also underwent a change yetserday when Crispin Oglebay's Level Best, previously unbeaten, ran no better than third in the Spinway Stakes to Breckinridge Long's Nasca, daughter of an Irish "daddy." Nasca remained among the unbeaten by bouncing in by four lengths.

Salem Beats Turks

Salem, Va., Aug. 17 (AP).—Salem cut Harrisonburg's lead over the Friends for second place to three and a half games here tonight by whipping the Turks in a double-header, 12 to 6 and 5 to 3. The teams were scheduled to play one game this afternoon, but rain prevented it.

At The Post

Selections at Saratoga.

Dear Al—Now that we have gotten Cumberland out of our system we will have to wait until Wednesday to get another peek at the bangtails, that is, unless some of us have the ways and means of getting to Saratoga, Rockigham or Washington Park. It looks like two long dull days for the track regulars—the calm before the storm, for Marlboro should provide plenty of action. We said good-by, for a while, to Jockey Buddy Root last Saturday after he rode Cymene into second position. The honest mare was shut off unmercifully at the clubhouse turn, being knocked back to last. She came on in the final drive, but couldn't make up all the ground. Root is going to try his luck at Wheeling and may go to the Middle West after that. He was injured seriously at Marlboro last year, but don't think for a moment that he is passing up the meeting on that account. In fact, Root proved his courage by riding Aster Princess several times this summer. She is the horse who stumbled and fell with him, sending him to the hospital for months. To J. W. S.—So you like Charles Town, but you believe the judges' stand should be removed to afford a better view of the races. I'm forwarding your letter to President Al Boyle. Jockey Willie Kelly won the gold wrist watch offered for the leading rider at Cumberland. He had 82 points on a five-win, three-second and one-third basis. A. F. Martinez was second, with 77 points, and Buddy Root was third with 75 points. Kelly and Martinez were tied before Saturday's eighth race. Kelly had a mount and the Cuban boy didn't. Martinez tried to pay some of the other jockeys to let him ride, but all the boys stucks to their saddles. Root, had he won, would have thrown the standing into a three-way tie at 77 points. A. S. Bowman carried off the training honors. For today, I'm taking a long distance shot at Saratoga. See you on the rail at Marlboro on Wednesday. BILL.

First race—Town Prince's recent effort points him out as one with an excellent chance of getting home on top of this heap. I'm going to string along. See See ran poorly last out, but is better than that effort. Winged Hoofs for the show end.

Second race—Prince Valiant turned in a smashing performance in that most recent test. All he has to do to run back to that effort to take care of these. Cheesestraw is better than generally rated and may be the one to beat. Highland Queen is a consistent miss with plenty of speed.

Third race—Daybreak could be the right one in this rather open affair. This gelding has eight good tries to his credit this year. Mud would make him more solid. Torch Gleam looms as the favorite and will be a threat. Fort Wales is recommended by two good recent efforts.

Fourth race—Monday Lunch seems better suited by this company than that of his recent outing. Has the speed to take it all in this company. Bull Reigh had excuses in that last and is considered a promising youngster. Taking Ways could be third.

Fifth race—Wait for Baby turned back Now What when last they met, and I believe they will finish in the same order today. Both are sharp sprinters. Rosetown is good, but comes off a distance race and may not have her speed.

Sixth race—General Mowlee may be the right one in this mile affair. The distance suits him and he may get the off track he likes. Third Covey was a winner in convincing fashion recently. Knickerbocker to take care of the others.

Seventh race—Be Prepared is at home at this route and is fairly solid performer. Gets my call. Flying Duke gets in light and has worked impressively. Miss B. B. for the minor award.

Best bet—Town Prince

Patsy Palmer Wins Two Swim Events

one-half point. In third place, only two points behind was June Booth Stan, while Lucille Kirsch, of the Shoreham, placed fourth.

Inasmuch as there was no existing record for the 220-yard freestyle in a 25-yard pool, both Miss Palmer and Wright were deprived of official recognition for their performances. The only available standard was the record for a 30-yard pool and judging by these figures Wright broke the existing record for the latter length by 12 seconds while Miss Palmer clipped 25 seconds off the old mark. Neither record can be recorded as the official 220-yard freestyle record for the District.

A variety show, postponed from last Thursday, was presented to the capacity crowd during intermission. Little Ruth Sieker, pert 9-year-old miss, drew the applause of the gallery for her splendid diving performances. Still another added attraction was the formation swimming accomplished by the Washington Golf and Country Aquabelles.

LOW BOARD DIVING FOR WOMEN—Won by Patsy Palmer (Shoreham); 61.30; second, Jackie Richards (unattached), 60.99; third, June Sian (Washington Golf and Country), 58.44; fourth, Lucille Kirsch (Shoreham), 52.08.

220-YARD FREESTYLE FOR WOMEN—Won by Patsy Palmer (Shoreham); second, Helen Flett (Shoreham); third, Betty Ott (Shoreham); fourth, Jean Brunson (Shoreham). Time, 2:30.6.

HIGH BOARD DIVING FOR MEN—Won by Bill Tarbett (Airport), 123.29; second, Bert Williams (Washington Golf and Country), 116.86; third, John Marshall (Airport), 114.40.

220-YARD FREESTYLE FOR MEN—Won by Bill Wright (Washington Golf and Country); second, Gordon Mustin (Washington Golf and Country); third, Harry Palmer (Airport). Time, 2:23.4.

Horses to Watch At Marlboro

Channing—Over his head in last Saturday's handicap. Ready to come right back in own company.

Tepin—Fit and ready for best effort. Would lead all the way in $600 company.

Artist—Soft track should suit his purposes. Needs a distance for best chance.

Time Her—Freshened since Hagerstown and ready to turn back good sprinters.

Klein Nine City League Loser

Miller, Flood Tie for Lead With Wins

Furniture Club Beats Tavern, 5-3; Plumbe's Trip D.G.S. By 8-7 After Scare

Klein Tavern nine saw its chances of winning the National City League baseball title without a playoff evaporate yesterday when it was drubbed by Miller Furniture, 5 to 3, on the Ellipse.

The game featured Section A play. Hoff and Birch, of Miller, were touched for only eight hits by the first-half champions. Klein jumped into a 2-to-0 lead in the first inning and held it until the fourth, but then Miller tied things up and in the seventh took a lead it never lost.

As a result, Miller remained in a tie for the league lead with J. C. Flood, which defeated D. G. S., 3 to 7, after several anxious minutes. Flood and Miller will clash next Sunday for the second-half championship.

After a see-saw battle, Flood found itself on the short end of a 7-to-3 count going into the eighth. It pushed over five runs then, featured by Zello Lagos' double with the bases loaded, to an 8-to-7 lead.

In the ninth, D. G. S. loaded the sacks before Dick Rozzelle could retire anyone. He was Flood's last pitcher, so Hal Leatherwood, left-fielder, was given the task of getting the club out of trouble.

Pitching like a veteran, Leatherwood got the next three batters out easily, to win the game. Action was stopped mamentarily in the ninth while Manager Morton Littman, of Flood, was waved off the diamond.

Junior division play was marked by a 6-to-6 tie between Cardinal Athletic Club and Uline. The teams are deadlocked for the lead.

Bethesda Cubs' Ace Pitches No-Hit Game

BOB CREMINS

Bob Cremins, Bethesda-Chevy Chase High's all-around sports star, found another outlet for his athletic talents yesterday.

Undertaking the second pitching assignment of his career for the Bethesda Cubs nine, Bob turned in a nine-inning no-hit, no-run game as he beat Frank's Barber Shop Club, 2-0.

Nine men got to first base for the Barbers, but seven resulted from Cub errors. Bob hit one man with a pitched ball, and allowed one base on balls.

While young Cremins was working his brilliant effort, B. Stevens, pitching for the losers, was touched for only three hits. He struck out 19 batsmen, while Cremins set down 16.

Terror, O'Toole 2-Man Mat Team

The forces of good and evil will get together Thursday night at Turner's Arena, it was revealed last night when pairings for the team wrestling match were released.

The Golden Terror, one of the meanest performers in the game, will pair off with Tommy O'Toole, exponent of clean play, against the Lou Plummer-Eddy Newman "champion" team. The latter title is self-imposed, following two victories in the new type of competition.

Headlining the bill will be a rematch of Joe Cox and Ernie Dusek.

Harrisonburg Nine Beats Lynchburg

Lynchburg, Va., Aug. 18 (AP).—Continuing their mastery of the league-leading Lynchburg team, the Harrisonburg Turks beat the Senators, 4 to 2, here this afternoon, their thirteenth win in the last 14 starts against the locals.

Southpaw Wilson Francis pitched great ball for the Turks, fanning ten, yielding only five hits and tightening up in the pinches.

Orange Horse Show Entries Close Today

Orange, Va., Aug. 18 (AP).—Entries for the forty-first annual Orange Horse Show will close tomorrow.

Forty-five classes are listed for the event, which will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, August 27 and 28.

Mrs. James C. Hamilton's Golondrina won the grand hunter championship last year.

Portsmouth Trips Twins, 5-3, on Homers

Portsmouth, Va., Aug. 17 (AP).—The Cubs won over the Winston-Salem Twins, 5 to 3, tonight in the Piedmont League "battle for the cellar."

Successive home runs by Schuluter and Singer in the fifth broke a 2-to-2 tie and gave Maxie Wilson his eighteenth victory of the season. It was Wilson's tenth straight win.

Manager Brubaker was ordered out of the park in the eighth inning for a disagreement with Chief Umpire Rohrback.

Kensington Loses County League Lead

Drops 7-0 Decision To Rockville; Corner Nine Trims Bethesda

Kensington's entry in the Montgomery County Baseball League took a tumble from first place yesterday when it lost a 7-0 decision to Rockville on the latter's diamond. And into first jumped Colesville nine, which trimmed the Takoma Tigers, 4-2.

Outstanding pitching performance of a full day of action was turned in by Four Corners' Frank McGinnis, who held Bethesda to three hits as he took a 3-2 judgment. A Bethesda rally was nipped in the ninth inning for the victory.

Greenbelt 10 Wins Softball Feature, 4 to 3

Cameo Defeats State Department Team, 4-0; Senate Draws Forfeit

Rained out in its first start, the D. C. Softball Championship Tournament finally got under way yesterday at Ballston Stadium as Senate Beer, Cameo Furniture and Greenbelt lens hung up first-round victories.

Senate, the defending champion, moved up the easiest way possible. It took a forfeit over the Monocasting team, of the G. P. O. League, when the latter failed to appear. A jumbled schedule was given as the cause.

Cameo had little or no trouble tripping State Department, of the Metro B League, by a 4-0 count in the first real action. But in the nightcap Greenbelt barely edged out Posner Brothers, 4-3, in the ninth inning.

It was the latter battle which provided a banner crowd its biggest thrill. Going into the last half of the final frame the score was 3-3, when Grenbelt proceeded to load the sacks with none out. Pitcher Johnny Hinton partially remedied that by forcing two high pop flies.

When he came to Second Baseman Blanchard, however, he was through. With the count at three balls and two strikes, Hinton hurled a fourth wide one and the winning run was forced over.

Trumbule turned in a five-hit game in Greenbelt's behalf while the leading sluggers for the winners were Beale and Barker. The first had two singles and the second the only extra-base hit of the game, a double.

Hostilities will be resumed tonight at the Ballston field at 7:45 o'clock when Tru-Blu, champion of the Commercial Twilight League, tangles with Civil Service, of the Government Office circuit. The nightcap will bring together I. S. M. and Washington Loan & Trust.

Justice Laws, Aide to Study Domestic Court Setup in West

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

The progressive domestic relations tribunals of several Western cities will be studied this week for ideas to aid the justices of the District Court in handling similar cases.

Justice Bolitha J. Laws, who will preside next term in the Motions Division, where many domestic disputes are settled, and Assistant Clerk Philip M. Hamilton will visit courts in Detroit, Chicago and other cities.

The study was approved by the District Court and by Henry P. Chandler, administrative officer of the United States Courts.

Now on Motions Bench

Justice Laws recently was assigned to the motions bench after having presided over the Pretrial Division in its first year of operation. The Pretrial Division, by arranging settlements without trial where possible, and simplifying the issues in disputed cases, doubled the number of cases disposed of in the District Court in the year just ended.

Justice Laws announced a modernized procedure in alimony disputes which had the effect of saving the court much time and requiring delinquent husbands to be more prompt with their payments. Early indications have been that the first complete term's report will show the new system to be a great improvement.

Justice Laws at the same time introduced the practice of referring disputed cases involving child custody, alimony payments and the like to Clerk Hamilton for an impartial investigation. Hamilton reported directly to the court. Reference to Hamilton was not made, however, without the consent of counel for the disputing parties.

Method Praised

The method was praised by the first few attorneys to try it. They pointed out that the charges in child custody and divorce cases are frequently recriminatory and are supported by witnesses prejudiced strongly on one side or the other.

When Justice Laws left for his vacation, part of which he is going to use to accompany Hamilton in the Western study, Justice James W. Morris, took over the motions bench for two weeks.

Impartial investigation, as supplemental to strictly combative courtroom methods, has been found of value in Detroit and Cleveland and is being developed in Chicago. These cities have commissioners whose function is to make the inquiris ordered by the judges. Hamilton will study their technique.

Ice Cream Trucks Prove '5th Column' In U. S. Tactics

By a Staff Correspondent

Ogdensburg, Aug. 18.—The First Army, beginning four days in the field tomorrow, will have its ice cream despite all the hazards of mimic war.

During the first few days of regimental and brigade maneuvers white-painted ice cream trucks roamed at will among the advancing columns and drove with their succulent cargoes to command posts hidden in the woods. This activity bothered commanders because enemy airplanes, spotting the white trucks, followed them until they stopped and pulled up beside the road.

There, the observers knew, a troop concentration was concealed. Beginning of maneuvers by the entire Army of 100,000 men will not halt the ubiquitous little trucks. But all of them, by Army order, will be painted olive drab like the Army trucks.

Air Raid Alarms Stir Swiss Cities; Guns Open Fire

Bern, Switzerland (Monday), Aug. 19 (AP).—Air raid alarms screamed warnings to the inhabitants of Bern and Basel about midnight (6 p. m., Eastern standard time), and here in the Swiss capital antiaircraft batteries fired on unseen trespassers.

Bern's alarms sounded again at 1:20 a. m., apparently because of the return flight of the trespassers. Alarms also were sounded at Geneva at 11:20 p. m. and 12:30 a. m.

The night masked the identity of the planes, but it was generally believed that as on three previous nights they were high-flying British bombers headed for northern Italy or southern Germany.

Baltimore Sun To Support Willkie

Baltimore, Aug. 19 (AP).—The Baltimore Sun, an independent Democratic newspaper, will announce editorially tomorrow its support of Wendell L. Willkie, Republican Presidential nominee. The Sun supported President Roosevelt in 1932, but declined to support either him or his Republican opponent, Alf M. Landon, in 1936.

17-Point Rise In Industrial Production Noted

The Federal Reserve Board yesterday announced a 17-point increase in industrial production since last September 1, as figured on its recently revised 1935-39 index period.

With the average for those years as 100 points, the Reserve System announced production activity stood at 121 through July and the first half of August.

Steel production increased to 90 per cent of capacity, a jump of five points since July.

National defense orders were credited with providing most of the boost and activity in businesses such as woolens, lumber, department store sales, etc., which still have to feel the stimulus of the defense program, declined sharply last month.

Today's Radio Highlights

6:30 p. m., WJSV—Maj. George Fielding Eliot of "The Ramparts We Watch" fame, circles in a plane above No Man's Land of upper New York State, where 100,000 troops are beginning a four-day campaign.

7, WJSV—Edward J. Flynn, new chairman of the Democratic National Committee who is directing President Roosevelt's campaign for reelection, makes his first radio "Address to Democratic Workers." Will he say anything about those campaign books?

7:30, WMAL—Pertinax, leading French journalist who escaped Paris when the Petain government capitulated, is interviewed by Pearson and Allen on their radio Merry-Go-Round.

7:30, WOL—After a summer sojourn on other networks, The Green Hornet returns to Mutual for the winter. Like the Lone Ranger, this is produced in Detroit.

8, WJSV—That rich experimental entertainment, Forecast, offers folk songs and lore from New York, with Clifton Fadiman refereeing a "Tall Story" contest. Woody Guthrie and Burl Ives are on deck. From Hollywood come two short plays with Charles Laughton, Elsa Lanchester, Edna Best and Roy Atwell.

8:15, WMAL—The Chamber Music Society of Loew Basin Street, formerly a Sunday afternoon favorite, begins a new time, of which our town gets only the last 15 minutes.

10, WOL—Jackpot, Walter Compton's remunerative quiz, is back on the Capitol Theater stage.

SATURDAY'S ANSWER.

Grin and Bear It — By Lichty

"I don't think Mr. Snodgrass has much confidence in me—all his letters start, 'Dear Brenda and Gentlemen of the Jury!'"

Listen! with Glynn

People are so disillusioned by Hollywood's vocabulary, with its "terrifics," "greatests," "foremosts," "outstandings," and so on, that when something really qualifies for one of those adjectives, one hates to classify it with the second-rate by applying them.

So, much as we'd like to use them, we'll merely remind you that tonight another "Forecast" arrives on WJSV and the Columbia network. And that we really believe that that hour's show, starting at 8 p. m., is well worth your listening.

Without any fanfare, mind you, here are some of its participants: Charles Laughton, Elsa Lanchester, Clifton Fadiman, Edna Best, Roy Atwell, Richard Whorf and the Golden Gate Quartet.

Fadiman presides vocally over a half hour called "Back Where I Came From." Besides folk songs by the Golden Gate Quartet and the Luther-Layman singers, two professional wanderers—well, since we're being honest, hoboes—Woody Guthrie and Burl Ives, are to tell stories and sing some of their own compositions, along with Len Doyle, the professional liar of "Time of Your Life."

Edna Best, Whorf and Atwell then do a humorous sequel to the famous phrase, "They lived happily ever after." Laughton and his wife star in another original skit, "To Tim at 20," written and directed by CBS's wonder-boy, Norman Corwin. That's all—but, honestly, we think it'll be terrific.

Contract Bridge

J. S. C. wants to know what bid he should make with this hand. It seems that he and his partner lost a small slam at hearts. He sat South and held these cards in a rubber bridge match, with a part score of 60 toward the first game.

♠ A Q J 4
♡ K J 9 8 6 4

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	2 ♣	?	—

J. S. C. made the mistake of bidding two spades, and was left there. He made four spades, but he and his partner could have had a small slam at hearts. "What should I have bid?" he asks.

Five hearts while a little unusual, seems a good bid, considering the score. It should make it plain to partner that six can be made if he has control of the club situation. If North should have a singleton club, or the king guarded so that the opponents cannot immediately take two tricks, he should bid the slam.

Women Lead Men in More Serious Crime

The female of the species continues "more deadly than the male."

The FBI has traslated Kipling's conclusion into statistics.

"Women criminals are fewer in number than their male counterparts, but proportionately they continue to commit more serious infractions of the law," the Bureau of Investigation reported yesterday.

Of each 1,000 men and 1,000 women arrested, it was found that 13 women, as compared with 10 men, were arrested for murder, said the FBI, on the basis of statistics for the first six months of this year.

Fifty-five women of each group were charged with assault while only 52 men were charged with this crime. Women predominated in violations of narcotic laws and in sex offenses. In burglary, larceny and auto theft, men predominated.

Men exceed in driving automobiles while intoxicated, the report showed.

Women aren't improving, it appeared. The figures for the six months represented an increase in the percentage of crimes committed by women from 7.1 per cent during the corresponding period in 1939 to 8.2 per cent this year.

Sponsors Hopeful For Action Today On Sumners Bill

The House Rules Committee, which controls the fate of the Sumners District suffrage resolution, will meet at 10:30 a. m. today.

Principal business at the meeting, according to Chairman Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, will be the Administration bill to increase the capitalization of the Export-Import Bank. Sponsors of the suffrage resolution were hopeful that their measure would be acted upon.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, who introduced the original Sumners resolution in the Senate, said yesterday that "if any sore of suffrage legislation is to be passed by Congress at this session it will have to be done by approval of the Sumners resolution."

Text of Bullitt's Speech Warning U. S. to Aid Britain or Face Attack by Hitler

Speed Draft And Defenses, Envoy Urges

Calls on Nation To Demand Legislators Enact Conscription

By the Associated Press

Following is the text of Ambassador William C. Bullitt's address last night before a patriotic gathering at Philadelphia, sponsored by the American Philosophical Society:

Fellow citizens of my country; men and women; Americans:

There are times, rare and infrequent, when a man feels he has a right to ask his fellow citizens to hear him. Here tonight, in my own city, in this square where our Republic was created, I feel I have that right.

For nearly four years I have served as Ambassador of our Republic to the French Republic. That republic, like our own, followed the gleam of liberty, equality and fraternity for all men and all races. That republic, like our own, strove for peace.

I have seen the French Republic destroyed.

As your emissary, as the representative of American democracy, I have witnessed the acts which destroyed the French democracy. I know of my own knowledge what blows were struck, what devices of iqtrigue and treachery and force employed. I know who are the enemies of freedom because I have seen them at their work. I know how dangerous they are and by what means they are dangerous.

Peril to Liberty

Because I have seen these things and know them of my own knowledge, I know that dangers beset free institutions everywhere. And I know what those dangers are. The strategy of destruction by which the free nation of France was overthrown is the strategy of destruction by which the enemies of freedom hope to overthrow liberty in this, the greatest of the nations that freedom has created. Because I have seen these things with my own eyes, heard them with my own ears, and felt them in my own body, I ask you, my fellow free Americans, to hear what I feel it my duty to say.

America is in danger.

It is my conviction, drawn from my own experience and from the information in the hands of our Government in Washington, that the United States is in as great peril today as was France a year ago. And I believe that unless we act now, decisively, to meet the threat we shall be too late.

The dictators are convinced that all democracies will always be too late. You remember Hitler's statement: "Each country will imagine that it alone will escape. I shall not even need to destroy them one by one. Selfishness and lack of foresight will prevent each one fighting until it is too late."

Problems Complex

Control of government by public opinion is the essence of democracy. And it has always been our belief that free speech and a free press and free education would enable us to form and express our opinions sufficiently swiftly not only to permit but to compel our Government to act quickly and effectively. But the problems of world affairs have become so complex, in this day of volcanic change, that the average citizen has the greatest difficulty in understanding them and judging what is best for his country before it is too late.

The dictators have developed a strategy of attack that is based on this difficulty. To prepare the way for military attack on a democracy they employ every possible variety of agent and propaganda to befuddle the public so that the democracy will not prepare in time. They succeeded in befuddling public opinion in France and England to such an extent that they were able to conquer France in a few days and are now striving to conquer an England which awakened late.

They are not yet in a position to attack America by military means; but their campaign of befuddlement, their preparatory assault, is following the same lines in America that it followed in France. Do not imagine that the French citizen was less intelligent or cared less about his country than the American citizen. The honest French patriot did his best, but he just could not see through the smoke screens of bribery, propaganda, lies and threats which the dictators spread in his country. For every Frenchman who acted as the conscious agent of a foreign dictator, there were a thousand who, with good intentions and high patriotism, unwittingly played the dictators' game.

How Many in U. S.

In France, as in the United States today, there were many honest pacifists. There were many because after 1918 every Frenchman became in one sense a pacifist. The French wanted no more war. And when the German propagandists told the French that they could buy peace with Germany by making one concession after another, the French believed them.

The French, who were much stronger at the time than were the Germans, let the Germans reconstruct an army, a navy and an air force, let them reoccupy the Rhineland, and the Saar, then Austria, then the Sudeten areas of Czecho-Slovakia, then the whole of Czecho-Slovakia. After that the Germans said that the price of peace was Danzig and Poland's outlet to the sea. By that time the French had learned that the lie, the solemn pledge given and broken, had become Germany's normal weapon in international affairs. Yet today there are Americans who argue that we should believe the dictators when they say they have no intention of extending their conquests to the Western Hemisphere and certainly not to the United States. France believed. Where now is France?

AMBASSADOR BULLITT

There are also Americans who argue that if Hitler should conquer Great Britain he would be content to stop there, and that the United States would be able to cooperate happily with the Hitler empire of Europe. To believe this is to misunderstand the entire nature of the Nazi system. It is not organized to develop an empire in peace. It is organized as a dynamic military machine. The ruthless hold of the Nazi leaders on the German people is based on the gearing of all energies for the sacrifices necessary to wage war. The continued sacrifices by the great mass of the people which the Nazi system demands cannot be obtained except by maintaining a supercharged war temperature. The German nation has been made a preparatory army of assault. Its organization is military. Its military operations have enormous momentum. It cannot stop in its tracks. It can only be stopped.

Hierarchy Can't Stop

Were Germany to try to resume the ways of peace, the military discipline which is the very foundation of the Nazi hierarchy would crumble. In order to continue in power that hierarchy must continue to lead Germany on new predatory adventures. The Third Reich cannot change its objectives and methods without changing its entire organization and leadership.

The Americans who believe that the Nazis will not have to be stopped but will stop of their own accord are indulging in the fatal vice of wishful thinking. They want to believe this. Therefore they believe it. There is no other basis than the wish for their conclusion that the Nazis suddenly will become peace-loving men.

The men and women who tell you that the dictators will not attack the Western Hemisphere may be honest, wishful thinkers or they may be agents of the dictators; but in either case, by lulling you into a false feeling of security and retarding your preparations for defense, they are keeping the way clear for an assault on America by the dictators. They are enemies, consciously or unconsciously, of our country and our liberties.

In France there were high-placed and influential German agents who circulated in what was called "society," and argued, because Hitler had said he loved France, that Germany would never so much wish to invade France as to attack the Maginot Line, which was estimated to be such a tremendous obstacle. Today, we hear Americans of the same stripe arguing that the dictators will never so wish to invade the Americas as to cross the Atlantic, which is regarded as such a tremendous obstacle. They ask us to ignore the fact that the Atlantic is an obstacle only so long as the European exits to the Atlantic are controlled by a nation which is genuinely friendly to us. We can remember, however, that in the past, when those exits have been in the hands of a power unfriendly to us, the Atlantic has become a broad highway for the invasion of the Americas. By way of the Atlantic our own land was invaded twice; during our Revolution and the War of 1812—and that with sailing ships. By way of the Atlantic, Mexico was invaded during our Civil War.

The truth is that the destruction of the British navy would be the turning of our Atlantic Maginot Line. Without the British navy, the Atlantic would give us no more protection than the Maginot Line gave France after the German troops had marched through Belgium. The soothing words, "Maginot Line," were the refrain of a lullaby of death for France. The soothing words, "Atlantic Ocean," are being used now by the propagandists of the dictators in the hope that they may become a lullaby of death for the United States.

The French knew that they were outnumbered two to one by the Germans, and that all Germans—men, women and children—had been mobilized for war. They knew that Great Britain was unprepared for war and that little help could come to France from England. When they thought hard, therefore, they knew that every French man, woman and child ought to be working for the national defense. The French had, of course, universal military training for the army. Even the French priests were trained to fight, and they fought at the front like other good soldiers and would not have been respected if they had not.

But when the question arose of mobilizing the whole nation for national defense by compulsory national service, even as a temporary measure to save the liberties of France, the French found it more comfortable to listen to the voices, some sincere, some bought by the dictators, which told them that their individual liberties were sacred and must not be sacrificed for a moment even to save the liberties of the nation; that it was more important for the individual to work only 40 hours a week than for his country to have enough airplanes; that the voluntary acceptance of national service as a temporary measure would be an imitation of the dictatorships. Thus, in the name of the preservation of individual liberty, the national liberty of France was condemned in advance to destruction.

Playing Dictator's Game

Recently, in this country, we have heard men and women arguing that we ourselves would be imitating the dictatorships if we should create through conscription an army adequate to defend our country. They too are playing the dictators' game.

Then there were many in France, some honest, some agents of the dictators, who argued that since airplane design was changing rapidly, France should have good models but should not manufacture planes in great quantity until after the outbreak of war. They were prominent and powerful. As a result, at one time French plane production was allowed to sink to 37 a month while Germany was producing 1,000 a month.

Have we been wiser the past years? Have we built the planes or trained the aviators to man them? Have we prepared the tanks or the men to drive them? Have we trained and equipped even infantry for our national defense? Are there not among us many who think and talk as did the Frenchmen who opposed adequate preparations?

Recently I heard a Senator who is as good an American as any of us state that while he would favor conscription the moment we should be attacked, he would oppose conscription until after we should have been attacked. The ruined homes of France, the women and children starving on the roads, cry out to him, and to everyone of us, that wars are won or lost by the preparations made or not made before they begin; that untrained soldiers are not opponents, but merely victims for trained men with tanks and planes. The dictators, who are confident that all democracies will always be too late, count not only on their agents to befuddle American opinion but also on honorable men like that Senator.

British Navy Our Defense

What stands today between the Americas and the unleashed dictatorships? The British fleet and the courage of the British people. How long will the British fleet be able to hold the exits from Europe to the Atlantic? I cannot answer that question nor can any man.

You have heard the appeal of Gen. Pershing for aid to the British fleet. You have heard the appeal of Admiral Standley. You have heard the appeal of William Allen White and his associates. If you let these appeals go unanswered and the British fleet goes under, do you realize what that would mean to you, to all of the people of this country?

Great Britain and Ireland, along with the whole continent of Europe, would be organized into one economic unit directed from Berlin; a unit which would be far stronger in productive capacity than the United States, which would have five times our capacity to produce warships; a unit whose trade would be controlled by one trading trust directed from Berlin. No country of North or South America would be able to trade with Europe except on such terms as might be pleasing to the dictators. Those conditions for many of the countries of South America would be the acceptance of a greater or less measure of Nazi control.

For us, since we would not accept Nazi control, they would mean the cutting off of our markets for cotton, tobacco and other export products. That would be so fatal to the economy of certain sections of our country that we should face the gravest economic crisis in our history; a crisis which it would be the task of Nazi and Communist agents to exploit.

Japanese Peril

In the Pacific would be the Japanese navy, cooperating with the dictators, which would able to cut us off from our supplies of rubber and tin and would compel us to leave a large part of our fleet in the Pacific to defend Hawaii and the West Coast. In the Atlantic would be combined fleets of the dictators which would be so close to our own fleet in strength that they would be able to cut us off from all commerce not only with Europe but also with Africa, and would endanger even our communications with the southern portion of this hemisphere.

Are you sure that under those circumstances the powerful Nazi and Communist movements which already exist in various countries of South America would not be able to seize power and would not invite the European dictators to organize air forces on their territories, and that those air forces would not move northward with dive-bombers to the Panama Canal and then move against this country? Are you sure that our existing fleet and air force would be able to defend even the northern route to the United States by way of Greenland, Newfoundland and Canada?

It is as clear as anything on this earth that the United States will not go to war, but it is equally clear that war is coming toward the Americas.

Are Preparing Way

The agents of the dictators are already here preparing the way for their armies. They are preparing the way in the same manner in which they prepared the way in France.

In France much of the most terrible and traitorous work was done by the Fascists and Communists working together. Many honest French democrats and liberals had been snared by Communist propaganda and argued that, because the Communists called themselves a political party and pretended at the time to be in favor of democracy, it would be undemocratic to deny to the Communists the rights of any other political party. The honest French patriots and democrats who protected the Communists did not discover until too late that the Communists were acting as spies and agents of the dictators, that the Communist Party was merely camouflaged as a political party and was in reality a conspiracy to commit patricide at the direction of a foreign dictator. They discovered too late that the Communists were traitors who were claiming the protection of the state which they intended to destroy only in order the better to prepare for its destruction.

When the German invasion began to sweep into Belgium and France, there were Communist and Nazi agents of Germany in each town and village who produced panic among the civilian populations by spreading fantastic tales of murdering by the German troops of men, women and children. By this means ten million civilians were harried in fear from their homes and clogged all the roads, so that the French, British and Belgian armies could not maneuver, so that transport of supplies became almost impossible, and a magnificent fighting force became a clotted mass of men and material, a perfect target for bombing and machine-gunning from the air.

Stopped Rail Traffic

At the most critical moment of the fighting in Belgium, other German agents, this time Communist railway men, stopped all traffic on the Belgian railways so that there was no transport by train for the French, British and Belgian armies.

Throughout France, especially in Paris, there were hundreds of Communist and Nazi agents of the dictators with extremely short-wave portable radio transmitting sets in their hiding places. They kept the Germans fully informed of the movements of the French army and of the intentions of the French government. Since they could change their hiding places daily, the French were never able to track down more than one-tenth of these spies.

The French had been more hospitable than are even we Americans to refugees from Germany. More than one-half the spies captured doing actual military spy work against the French army were refugees from Germany.

Do you believe that there are no Nazi and Communist agents of this sort in America?

On the tenth day of last May, the people of France were as confident as are the people of the United States today that their country could not be conquered. Three days later on the thirteenth day of May, the Germans had smashed through the center of the French army and France was doomed.

Spies Cleared Way

The way had been prepared by spies, agents and propagandists but it was the strength of the German army and the skill of its leaders that enabled Germany to strike the fatal blow. The blow was struck just where the French did not expect it. The attack was made by a new method that the French had never imagined. Waves of bombing planes preceded waves of tanks with perfect coordination maintained by radio. The tanks cut through the French lines, then wheeled and lopped off piece after piece of the French army.

The French soldier fought as courageously and magnificently as any soldier has ever fought. Division after division, cut off from supplies of all sorts, fought on until there were no more shells for the cannons or cartridges for the guns, then charged with the bayonet. The courage of the French was magnificent but of no avail against the tanks and planes of the Germans. And, make no mistake, the German infantrymen were as brave as the French.

The entire Western World had been lulled by stories of the inferiority of German equipment. I have seen, myself, hundreds of thousands of German soldiers with all their motorized and mechanized equipment. I have never seen one piece of that equipment broken down.

The German military machine today is without question the most powerful that has ever been created. It has been used with consummate skill. And you may be sure that, if the Nazis have an opportunity to turn it against us, it will be as strong or stronger than it is today and will be used in the most unexpected manner.

Certain We Are Next

I cannot tell you where and when the attack will come, any more than the French general staff could have told you that the German attack would be made at Sedan on the thirteenth of May; but I am certain that if Great Britain is defeated the attack will come, and that all the strength of this Nation will be needed—mobilized, organized, equipped and ready—if we are to parry it and save the independence of our country.

Why are we sleeping, Americans? When are we going to wake up? When are we going to tell our Government that we want to defend our homes and our children and our liberties, whatever the cost in money or blood? When are we going to give the lie to those who say that the people of the United States no longer care about their liberties, that they look upon the United States just as a trough into which to get their snouts, and not as the greatest adventure in human freedom that this earth has known?

When are we going to let the world know that in spite of all the efforts of all the propagandists who call their propaganda "debunking" and try to teach us to fear even truth, we still know that when anyone tries to debunk the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount, he prepares for himself hell in this world and in the next?

When are we going to let legislators in Washington know that we don't want any more politicians who are afraid of the next election and scared to ask us to make the sacrifices that we know are necessary to preserve our liberties and our Declaration of Independence and our Constitution? When are we going to tell them that we want to know what are our duties, not what are our privileges? When are we going to say to them that we don't want to hear any longer about what we can get from our country, but we do want to hear what we can give to our country? When are we going to stand before God and say that we know a human being is worthy of freedom only when he serves the ideal in which he believes?

Join In Fight

Do we want to see Hitler in Independence Hall making fun of the Liberty Bell? No!

Then here, in this Square, where Washington walked with Jefferson, where our independence was declared, where our Constitution was framed, I ask you and all other Americans who hear my voice tonight to join in the fight to keep our country free.

Write and telegraph to your Senators and Representatives. Write to your newspapers. Demand the privilege of being called into the service of the Nation. Tell them that we want conscription. Tell them that we back up Gen. Pershing.

If you belong to great patriotic organizations, make them act. If you want to make your will felt but do not know how to make it felt, write to me and I shall try personally to put you in touch with the men and women who know how you can help most effectively in your own home towns and villages.

Our defense against the enemies who are already within our country has still to be organized. Nearly all our defense against the enemies that are still outside our country has still to be organized. If we won't act, our Government can't. It is up to us.

The fighting line of the war for the enslavement of the human spirit is nearing our shores. For every American "there is no discharge in that war." An American is a free man or he is nothing. Our fate and the fate of our children depends on what each one of us does—now.
